New Cave-In at Mine Fails to Halt Rescuers, 25 Ft. From 2 Victims

Weary and Ill, Men Hear Pounding, Send Words of Encouragement.

Can Live 24 Hours, Physician Believes

Carpenters Sent Below to Replace Supports After Collapse.

By the Associated Press.

Moose River, N. S., April 21.—Undaunted by collapse of rotten timber supports which delayed rescue work, draegerman crews and carpenters labored frantically tonight to force a way through to two men entombed for nine days in an uncharted gold mine.

Less than 25 feet away behind a wall of rock and debris, the two prisoners—Dr. D. E. Robertson and Charles Alfred Scadding—heard the rescue workers pounding against the stony blockade.

Weary and ill, the two men sent words of encouragement to the surface over a makeshift communication system.

After a conversation, Michael Dwyer, minister of mines, said the men had told him they knew help was not far off.

"I am sure they are in no immediate danger," said Dr. H. K. MacDonald, one of the physicians with the hospital unit at the surface after he talked to Dr. Robertson and Scadding.

Can Live 24 Hours.

"From the strength of their voices we are satisfied they are able to live 24 hours, and engineers say they'll certainly be through in that time.

"Those men are coming out of there alive," he asserted. "We are equipped for any emergency."

The collapse of the rotten cribwork sent a chill of despair over the hearts of the feverish miners and the anxious watchers on the surface. Immediately, carpenters were sent below to replace the rotten supports with new timbers.

A new pipe line similar to the one down which the communication system was dropped yesterday was being completed. Down the new hole, engineers planned to drop heating apparatus and other necessities, including a transmitter and receiving equipment.

"We are on the right trail," said Provincial Mines Inspector J. Messervey when the original operating shaft of the mine was reached shortly after dark.

Rescuers were confident they would be in time to save Robertson and Scadding from the fate of their companion, Herman Magill, who died early yesterday of exposure and privation.

At 6 p. m. before the shaft was reached Dwyer estimated the diggers, working in 15-minute relays during which they scooped earth by hand and passed broken rocks back by a human chain, were 25 feet from their goal.

Expect Early Rescue.

"We expect to break through in a short time unless additional slides take place," said Dwyer.

The men were held in a dark and damp chamber on the 141-foot level, where they were trapped while on an inspection trip Easter Sunday night.

There were unconfirmed reports that miners heard a faint tapping from the gloomy prison late today.

Doctors, after conversations with the men this morning reported that Robertson, who owned the mine with Magill, and Scadding, a timekeeper, were suffering from inerita.

The draegermen take their name

You Can't Arrest Me

Zioncheck Plays Ping-Pong and Cavorts With Baboon, Ignoring Court Summons Charging 70 M. P. H. Spin in High-Powered Roadster.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A game of ping-pong and a Chacma baboon named Wahoo held more interest for Representative Marion A. (Who Me?) Zioncheck, clowning Democrat of Washington State, than a scheduled appearance in District Traffic Court yesterday.

And for this open exhibition of law-flouting disdain, Judge Walter J. Casey ordered the accused Congressional speeder arrested on an attachment and declared a forfeiture of $25 collateral posted after he was charged Saturday with dashing 70 miles an hour along upper Connecticut avenue northwest.

While Judge Casey and court attaches awaited Zioncheck's appearance in court yesterday, the youthful legislator was alternately wandering about Zoological Park and indulging in his favorite pastime of ping-pong in a recreation room of the New House Office Building.

May Have to Pay Fine.

By failing to appear before Judge Casey—he was told to be in court at 9:30 a. m.—Zioncheck extended his apparent disregard for District traffic regulations to jesting defiance of local judicial powers.

But Judge Casey was adamant. He ordered the lawmaker's immediate arrest, issuing an attachment without hesitation when Zioncheck

Twine Traps Tub Slayer In New York

Man Tells of Attacking and Killing Wife of Radio Executive.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 21.—A piece of string, such as upholsterers use, tonight provided police with a fiction-like solution of the death of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton in the Beekman place murder mystery.

After 12 days of tracing the twine found beneath the body of the young writer, who was assaulted and strangled to death on Good Friday, authorities suddenly announced:

"We have broken the Titterton case, and now have in custody the perpetrator, who has confessed.

"He is John C. Fiorenza, 24 years old, an upholsterer, of 1601 Sixty-fifth street, Brooklyn."

Fiorenza was one of the four men present when the Titian-haired author's virtually nude body was found in the bath tub of her Beekman place apartment. He was the one who called the police, on her telephone.

Repaired Couch.

Between the time of the killing and the time the body was found, authorities said, Fiorenza repaired a love seat as Mrs. Titterton had directed. It was when he returned with his employer to deliver the couch that the body was found.

In a joint statement announcing Fiorenza had admitted the crime, Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine and District Attorney William Cli. Dodge said the piece of string—the only tangible clew left by an otherwise methodical killer—solved the case.

They told how the string, only 13 inches long and a little frayed at one end, was examined strand by strand until it was identified as the type used by upholsterers, and how it was traced through Kentucky, Pennsylvania and New Jersey to the shop where the suspect worked.

They said it was part of the piece of twine he used to bind Mrs. Titterton's hands before he attacked her.

The district attorney said the case would be presented to the grand jury Thursday. He predicted an indictment carrying the death penalty.

Crime Is Re-enacted.

Fiorenza, a former convict, was taken to the Beekman place apartment during the afternoon to re-enact the crime.

A slim youth, he was handcuffed to two detectives and rushed into the building behind a "flying wedge" of policemen, while a crowd of curiosity seekers milled around.

Later he was taken to a police station for booking.

Commissioner Valentine said Fiorenza disclosed he had tried to drown his victim in the bath tub after ripping her clothes off and assaulting her. There was no stopper in the tub, however, and the water ran out.

An autopsy showed that Mrs. Titterton, 34-year-old wife of a broadcasting company executive, had inhaled some water, but had died of strangulation. A garrote fashioned from her pajama top and blouse was knotted about her neck.

When taken to the East Fifty-first Street Police Station after re-enacting the crime, Fiorenza flipped a cigarette from his lips, looked over a small crowd at the entrance, and said:

Called at Home April 9.

"What's all the excitement about?"

In the matter-of-fact words of Commissioner Valentine and District Attorney Dodge, his story was substantially as follows:

"Thursday, April 9, the day preceding the crime, he called at the Titterton home and secured a love seat to be repaired by his employer, the Kruger Upholstering Co., on Third avenue. The following morning, before reporting to work, he visited the Titterton home in Beekman place.

"Gaining entrance, he immediately set upon Mrs. Titterton, placing a gag around her mouth and tying her hands with twine. After attacking her, he carried her to the bath tub and placed her therein.

"He cut away and put into his pocket the twine that bound her hands and then left the apartment, eventually reporting for work, where he repaired the Titterton love seat.

"Later on in the afternoon, with his employer, Theodore Kruger, he returned to the apartment with the repaired love seat. During this visit

Republicans Pick Steiwer As Keynoter

Senator Is Only One Put Before Meeting; Exact Position Unknown.

By Franklyn Waltman.

A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, April 21.—Quietly reconciling all differences of opinion before the meeting opened, the Republican committee on convention arrangements today unanimously nominated Senator Frederick Steiwer of Oregon as the temporary chairman of the June assembly here, and thus the party keynoter.

Speculation immediately started as to which Presidential candidate's fortunes had been advanced by the selection of the Oregonian. Views were confusing on that score, however, because none seemed to know exactly where Senator Steiwer stood. The fact that he has not openly committed himself added to his availability.

Senator Steiwer's was the only name formally placed before the meeting. He was nominated by Ralph E. Williams, Republican national committeeman from Oregon, who is supporting the aspirations of Senator William E. Borah. Some consequently placed Senator Steiwer among the Borah supporters.

If any plan existed, as reported, to have both the Landon and the Knox forces back C. Wayland Brooks for the temporary chairmanship, who has just been nominated by the Republicans of Illinois for the governorship, it was shelved before the arrangements committee met this morning in the exclusive Terminal Club, former meeting place for the Van Sweringen brothers and their business associates.

Brooks Suggested.

Brooks' name was suggested at the executive session by Frank L. Smith, committeeman from Illinois and a Knox supporter. Smith also proposed the name of former Governor of Illinois Frank O. Lowden. He made it clear, however, that he did not formally nominate either man, but was presenting their names as worthy of the honor. He said neither man was seeking the temporary chairmanship.

As soon as the committee had unanimously voted to recommend Senator Steiwer to the national convention as keynoter, John Hamilton, Kansas national committeeman and manager of the Presidential campaign of Gov. Alf M. Landon, of that State, issued the following statement:

"Prior to the selection of the temporary chairman, I stated to the committee that my only interest both as a member of the arrangements committee and as the manager of the Landon committee was in the selection of a man who would forcefully and clearly state the position of the Republican Party to the convention and to the people of the Nation.

"Senator Steiwer will, I know, meet that test. It is an admirable selection."

It had been reported that the Knox-Landon camps had entered into an agreement to support the youthful and forceful-speaking Wayland Brooks for temporary chairman, but if this were true, it was found before the meeting started that such a movement would not be successful and it was abandoned. In one quarter it was intimated that this plan was blocked by Charles D. Hilles, New York national committeeman, and Williams.

This could not be confirmed. At all events, spokesmen for the Knox and Landon camps at the meeting, Smith and Hamilton, expressed complete satisfaction with the Steiwer selection and denied they had made any fight for Brooks.

Election Sure.

Election of the temporary chairman, as well as that of other officers, rests with the convention, but that body always accepts the recommendations of the committee on arrangements, so Senator Steiwer is as good as elected and may now start drafting his keynote speech, which will be delievered at an evening session of the convention, in order to attract as many radio listeners as possible. It will be one of the highlights of the convention.

Senator Steiwer's selection makes it almost certain that the permanent chairman will be an Easterner. The arrangements committee had not discussed possibilities for that office when a recess was taken early tonight until tomorrow. The committee may postpone action on a permanent chairman until the full national committee meets here in June.

House Republican Leader Bertrand Snell, however, was prominently mentioned in corridor conversations for the post of permanent chairman. He was permanent chairman at the 1932 convention and this

Washington Air Liner, 14 Aboard, Grounded

Newark, N. J., April 21 (AP).—Officials of the Eastern Air Lines said today that a twin-motored plane with 14 passengers aboard, en route from Washington, developed trouble in one motor and made a forced landing at Central Airport, Camden.

The plane left Washington at 1 p. m. and was due at Newark at 2:20 p. m.

The pilot, Charles Carneal, advised his officers he thought he could repair the motor and resume the flight. He was unable, however, to make the necessary repairs and another plane was sent from Newark to pick up the passengers, four of whom were women.

Republicans of Ways, Means Group Brand It 'Farcical.'

Complex Terms Puzzle Members

Measure Plans to Force Dividend Payments from Surplus

By Robert C. Albright.

Over solid Republican opposition, the Administration's revolutionary tax bill, reforming the whole basis of corporate taxation and claimed to yield $814,000,000 the first year, yesterday was approved by a 15 to 8 Ways and Means Committee vote and formally introduced in the House.

Although tax "simplification is a stated objective, the complex measure was received with no little bewilderment by House members, who awaited a more detailed committee report for explanation of its intricate terms. A scramble by newsmen, tax lawyers and lobbyists quickly depleted the available bill supply.

Immediately following the report, Ways and Means Committee Democrats went into conference with Treasury officials and experts of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue, in an effort to arrive at more definite revenue estimates. Claiming $814,000,000 as the first year's potential yield, committeemen conceded that a "lag" from delayed dividend declarations may carry much of this revenue over into the next tax year.

Minority Assails Levies.

In a stinging minority report made public last midnight, seven Republican members of the committee opposed "the imposition of any new taxes until the waste of public moneys is stopped."

"The proposed bill is unsound in principle, will undermine business stability, and is another step toward the regimentation of all business," said the Republican statement, filed along with the majority report.

"It is not designed to raise revenue, but is admittedly another New Deal experiment."

The minority, led by Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, charged Democratic members of the committee were "whipped" into acceptance, against their better judgment, of proposals advocated by no one of experience or ability in the field of taxation."

Republicans took the position that existing taxes might be sufficient to carry the cost of Government "if Government spending were placed upon a prudent and economical basis."

"As a face-saving, penitent gesture at budget-balancing, the bill is as much a farce as was the President's so-called 'share-the-wealth' measure of last session," declared the report.

Would Force Dividends.

Aimed at the wealth-sharing objective of forcing huge current corporate surpluses into dividend distribution, the bill has as its keystone a graduated tax on corporate earnings, steepened in relation to the volume of current profits withheld from dividends. This displaces entirely the present 12½ to 15 per cent corporate income tax. So that little of the distributed profits can escape the tax mill, the normal 4 per cent income tax is made applicable for the first time to dividends received by shareholders.

A preferred-rate schedule ranging from 1 to 29.5 per cent would be applied to so-called small corporations earning $10,000 or less, while corporations in the higher earnings brackets would pay between 4 and 42.5 per cent.

Alternative intermediate schedules are provided for companies having adjusted net income between $10,000 and $40,000. Here a formula would be applied, designed to give companies in this group some degree of the relief afforded those in the lower earnings brackets.

From the standpoint of constitutionality, the most questionable provision of the bill is a proposed 80 per cent "windfall" tax on unpaid or refunded processing taxes, designed to bring back into the Treasury some $100,000,000 of revenue released by the Supreme Court's AAA invalidation.

Provides Penalty Tax.

Another high point in the bill is a proposed intercorporate dividend section, which would tend to place a penalty tax on subsidiaries by not permitting full credit for distri-

Slavs, Rumania Likely to Desert Paris in Crisis

Trade Difficulties Result From Sanctions; Swing to Reich Indicated.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 21.—High French sources said tonight that Yugoslavia and Rumania, expressing increasing anxiety over France's "vacillation" in negotiations to end the Italo-Ethiopian war, will follow Great Britain's lead from now on.

These sources declared the information was conveyed to Premier Albert Sarraut and Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin by Joseph Paul-Boncour, minister of states who attended the League of Nations sessions at Geneva.

Rumanian and Yugoslavian delegates told Boncour, it was said, that their governments might be "forced" to seek protection from Germany if the League were proved definitely powerless to aid the smaller nations of Europe.

French officials acknowledged that Yugoslavia still fears a struggle with Italy over Dalmatia, and France's friendship for Premier Mussolini has made Belgrade fear the French will refuse aid in event of conflict.

Rumania, the French declared, is "alarmed" over the increase in treaty scrapping in Europe and fears Hungary, tied to Italy by economic agreements, will demand revision of frontier lines unless the League proves strong.

Yugoslav circles said their Government was "disappointed" over France's failure to compensate for losses suffered in applying sanctions against Italy.

Nation's Chiefs Mourn Howe At White House

President Attends Services for Political Mentor; Burial to Be Today.

By Sidney Olson.

The body of a frail little man, whose dynamic mind drove a young New York politico into the White House through 26 years of heartbreaking struggle, lay in state in the historic east room of the executive mansion yesterday as the leaders of the Government paid him solemn tribute.

Thus Col. Louis McHenry Howe, who died Saturday night at the very moment his friend, Franklin D. Roosevelt, arose to speak at the satirical Gridiron Club dinner, and who had never been in the spotlight in his life, was the center of attention in death.

In a great dark mahogany casket, under a spray of huge calla lilies from the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, before a ceiling-high background of Easter lilies, daffodils and roses, lay the man who was secretary, friend, guide and counselor in difficult times and in good days.

Before him, in an aisled semicircle of gilt, saffron-padded chairs, sat the chiefs of his country, Cabinet members, Senators, Congressmen, Army and Navy officers—and his family, friends and old newspaper associates.

President Roosevelt, almost the last to enter, leaning on the arm of his son James, stared straight ahead throughout the services, bowing his head only in prayer. His mouth was tight, his face flushed.

As the last dignitary settled into

Advance Into Ethiopia Marks 2,698th Anniversary of Rome

By the Associated Press.

Rome, April 21.—The "Hell on Wheels" column of Italy's southern army pressed forward more than 65 miles today as Premier Mussolini, celebrating the 2,698th birthday of Rome, declared "our ship is arriving in port with all sails flying."

Although rain hampered the celebration, Italy's equivalent to America's Labor Day, Il Duce sped from place to place inaugurating public works.

His first appearance was on a rooftop with a pick, where he gave the first stroke to a vast program for the demolition of outdated buildings surrounding the Roman Senate.

Later Il Duce spoke from the balcony of his offices at the Piazzi Venezia after receiving the homage of a vast crowd.

"Today in the city of Rome we celebrate the double festival of labor and victory," he said. "After difficult navigation, our ship is arriving in port with all sails spread, as it always will, to carry there the power, justice and civilization of Rome."

Mussolini, wearing the gray-green uniform of an honorary corporal of the Fascist militia, smiled broadly at the crowd and seemed to be in better humor than in many weeks.

Two new 8,000-ton cruisers were launched—the Duca Degli Abruzzi, at Spezia, and the Garibaldi, in Trieste in the presence of enthusiastic crowds.

Guglielmi Marconi, in a speech in the presence of the King at the Academy of Italy, said Italy's African undertaking would lead to new inspiration in poetry, history, sculpture and painting.

He presided over the conferring of Mussolini's prizes for literature, art and science.

In the daily war communique, Marshal Pietro Badoglio, commander in chief of the African armies, disclosed that the southern army was advancing in Ogaden Province and that he has transferred northern headquarters to Dessye.

D. A. R. Honors National Head With Reception

Thousands Crowd Hall to Pay Tribute to Mrs. Becker.

Five thousand delegates to the forty-fifth Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution and a distinguished gathering of 1,500 foreign diplomats, Senators, Representatives, Cabinet officials, Army and Navy officers and private citizens thronged Constitution Hall last night for the president general's reception.

Mrs. William A. Becker, president general of the organization, received the delegates and the honorary guests on the stage of the Constitution Hall auditorium, with the United States Army Band, led by Capt. Thomas F. Darcy, jr., playing stirring military marches and concert selections. The corridors outside the auditoriums were thronged with delegates being received by the State regents and vice regents.

Following the reception, Mrs. Becker and the national board of management tendered 200 pages of the Congress a ball at the Hotel Mayflower. White is the color decreed for the pages while on duty, but most of them took advantage of their "night out" to don their most colorful evening gowns, set off by equally colorful corsages of rosebuds, violets, gardenias, sweet peas and—not a few—orchids.

The delegates and guests to the president general's reception began

2 Coast Fliers Killed As Plane Loops, Burns

Alameda, Calif., April 21 (AP).—Two aviators were killed when their plane groundlooped and burst into flames at the San Francisco Bay airdrome today.

The victims were "Buzz" Morrison, prominent Reno, Nev., flier, and J. F. Long, head of an aircraft service.

Morrison had brought his plane here for repairs and the men were starting a test flight with Morrison at the controls. Flares aboard the plane burst into flames before rescuers could reach the victims.

Senate Will Get District Budget Of $45,000,000

Committee Allows $700,000 More Than Asked by Commissioners.

By James D. Secrest.

A balanced District budget, appropriating more than $45,000,000 for the fiscal year 1937, will be reported to the Senate today shortly after being passed upon by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The sub-committee charged with the local supply bill met in executive session yesterday and marked up the bill to Budget Bureau estimates for the most part, it is understood, while restoring the $3,000,000 cut from the Federal contribution by the House and utilizing the close to $3,000,000 surplus in District revenues provided in the budget submitted to Congress.

Neither Senator Thomas, chairman, nor members of the sub-committee would disclose the changes made in the $42,573,283 bill passed by the House pending approval by

'Good-Will' Marriage a Failure, Says Arabian Sheik's U. S. Wife

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, April 21.—Declaring she was stoned, beaten and poisoned by her husband's people, Frances Allison, New Jersey heiress, said tonight her attempt to promote international understanding by becoming the wife of an Arabian sheik had failed.

Three years ago Miss Allison, daughter of the late William O. Allison, New Jersey publisher and banker, married Khalil Ben Ibrahime El Raolf, a Saudi Arab, in a Bagdad mosque. She had been married twice before.

"I've never tried to explain to others my reasons for marrying him and then fighting for that marriage through the physical cruelty and mental torture that followed," she said tonight.

"What I wanted was to promote interracialism and interreligionism. I don't believe in differences between religions or lines of demarcation between the races.

"In marrying Khalil I saw a chance to show, by actual example, the absurdity of those artificial distinctions."

The ideal splintered on money and misunderstanding, she continued.

"My husband's retainers—he has a large body of native retainers—got the idea that if I should die, he would receive a large sum of money.

"Under Mohammedan law, if a wife has been good and faithful, and has been deserted, she may be freed and must be protected by the people," she said.

Politics And Relief

The two main points of the problem are these:

1. Is there politics in relief?
2. Should the handling of relief be given back to the State and local governments?

Voters all over the country have been asked to answer these two questions in the latest poll taken by the American Institute of Public Opinion. For the results, see

Barkley Seen As 'Keynoter' For Democrats

Forecast Places Robinson as Permanent Chairman of Convention.

By the Associated Press.

Selection of Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, as keynoter, and Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, as permanent chairman of the Democratic National Convention was forecast last night in informed Democratic quarters.

This predictioin shared political interest in the Capital when word spread that William Allen White, Kansas editor and supporter of Gov. Alf M. Landon, had discussed formation of the Republican platform with Senator Borah, of Idaho.

The official selection of the keynoter and chairman of the Democratic Convention at Philadelphia, at which the renomination of rPesident Roosevelt generally is regarded as a foregone conclusion, will not be made until Saturday.

An arrangements committee will meet at that time in Philadelphia, with Chairman James A. Farley of the Democratic national committee presiding. It was learned authoritatively today, however, that both Senators Barkley and Robinson have been found acceptable to the President.

Silent on Nomination.

Both Borah and Whte emphasized that they were old friends and that the matter of the Republican Presidential nomination had not been discussed.

"I feel that it would be easily possible," White said in New York, "for both of them (Borah and Landon) to agree on many important planks in the platform this year and disagree on only a very few, possibly three." One of the three was believed to be currency.

There have been intimations that the Landon forces want White to serve as a member of the resolutions committee which will draft the Republican platform. White, in turn, would like Borah to have a place on that group.

To serve in that capacity, Borah would have to be a delegate, and he has not yet announced whether he would go to the convention in that capacity. He has, however, promised a decision by May 9, when the Idaho delegation will be chosen.

Senator Robinson, who is reported in line for the permanent chairmanship of the Democratic convention, has served for years as his party's leader in the Senate, and in that capacity has had direct charge of guiding New Deal legislation through that branch of Congress.

Defends Administration.

In addition, he has shown a disposition to come quickly to the defense of the Roosevelt Administration when under Republican attack on the floor. Only yesterday he engaged in a heated exchange with Senator Hastings, Delaware Republican.

Barkley, also keynoter in 1932, has come to be known as an Administration spokesman in the Senate. He has been one of Robinson's active lieutenants and is regarded unofficially as assistant Democratic leader.

Inviting comparison of the "reactionary policies" of past Republican administrations with "Democratic achievements," Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, last night asked the American Electorate to choose between "Roosevelt or Reaction."

Clark said in a radio speech the issue in the November elections would be whether Americans "desire to return to reactionary policies which led to the tragic disasters of the Hoover administration or follow the path of progress and recovery under Franklin D. Roosevelt."

"The Democratic party," he said, "submits its case upon its record of achievement. The test of this Administration must be the effect of its enactments upon the well-being of the country, and a comparison between conditions as they were in March, 1933, and as they are today.

Co-operation Urged.

New York, April 21 (AP).—Col. Theodore Roosevelt, accepting the presidency of the National Republican Club for the third consecutive term, tonight urged the Republican Party to invite the co-operation of the "hundreds of thousands of Democrats who think as we do."

"Let us make common cause with them," he said. "Let us invite them to fight side by side with us for the democracy we love. Let us assure them not merely that we will welcome their aid, but that when we triumph we will invite them to a place at the council board."

He offered a three-point program to combat existing conditions:

1. Cut the cost of Government, dismiss political employes, discontinue "foolish experiments" and economize.

2. Revise and extend the anti-trust laws and definitely prohibit "any move such as the NRA, which to all intents and purposes gives Government backing and sanction to private monopolies."

3. Recognize the principle of co-operation and profit sharing which, he said, was being used successfully in many European countries.

Politics and People

G. O. P. Preaches Against Regimentation, Then Practices it in Housing Delegates at Cleveland.

By Franklyn Waltman

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 21.—As has been said in this column before, nothing is so funny as politics—and the less conscious the humor on the part of the politicians, the funnier it appears to sideline observers. A good part of the humor generated by politics flows from the inconsistencies of men and their parties.

WALTMAN

For instance, the Republicans for the last three years have toured the country posing as Paul Reveres, crying out warnings against Democratic efforts to regiment the United States, to make Americans do what an arbitrary dictator or group of dictators would have them do; in brief, to goose-step.

And then, when the first opportunity arrives to do something besides talk, what do the Republicans do? They give one of the most practical exhibitions of regimentation in action that has been seen in this country—with the usual favoritism and discriminations which always attend regimentation under the auspices of a governmental or political body.

This is the story: Last December the Republican National Committee was prevailed on to select Cleveland as the convention city this year. The reasons were partly sentimental, for it was here that Calvin Coolidge was nominated in 1924, and partly practical—the committee did not wish to select a city in the State of an active candidate, but it did wish to meet in the Middle West, which will be the battleground of the campaign. Once Chicago, the home of Col. Frank Knox, was eliminated, Cleveland became the alternative.

But it was soon found that Cleveland, large as it is, lacks sufficient first-class hotel rooms to take care of a meeting as large as that of the Republican National Convention. So a housing committee was named which virtually has commandeered for the week of June 8 all the hotels in the city.

Persons requiring hotel rooms for the convention were informed by the hotel managers that they were powerless to confirm reservations—that rooms would be allocated by the Republican arrangements committee under the chairmanship of Representative Chester C. Bolton, Why Bolton ever let himself in for that is a mystery, for down in Washington we always have regarded him as a smart, astute fellow.

Anyway, that was last December. In March, the Bolton committee undertook to allocate hotel rooms among the applicants. No particular rule was followed—not even that of first come first served. Bolton, with his secretary, James L. E. Jappe, West Virginia's National Committeeman Walter S. Hallanan and a local booster, sat down and apparently constituted themselves little dictators.

As far as can be learned, they arbitrarily decided that so-and-so was going into a hotel up a side street, far away from the convention hall, when this particular so-and-so filed an application for a reservation for rooms in a first-class hotel the day Cleveland was picked—and the latter hotel would have been glad to grant the reservation if it had not pledged itself to abide by the committee's allocations.

And it now has reached the point where reservations recently filed are being grabbed for favorites in the best hotels, whereas newspaper correspondents are being assigned cabins aboard steamers which it is planned to dock out in Lake Erie.

* * * *

Not only are the hotel men here angry over the situation—for none seems to know what is what—but members of the Republican National sub-committee in charge of passing on convention arrangements, meeting here today, were furious. From all accounts, Bolton spent an uncomfortable few hours before the closed doors of the meeting today. There even has been talk of shifting the convention to Chicago—but that generally is held to be impractical.

The humorous aspect of the situation is, however, that the liberty-loving Republicans have undertaken regimentation—forcing persons to go to hotels they do not want to go to, when they could have gotten better reservations for themselves—that Jim Farley never would have dreamed of attempting.

In Philadelphia, the Democrats are letting the hotels run their own businesses—and every one seems to be satisfied. If they are not, they have only themselves to blame for not making their reservations early enough. Here the reward for making an early reservation is to be assigned to second-class accommodations.

And there is a good laugh in the selection of Senator Frederick Steiwer as the Republican keynoter, able and pleasant though he is. The Republican chieftains have contended that the profligate spending of the Roosevelt Administration, with its detrimental effects on the Federal fiscal structure, will be their major issue this year.

Then they select as their convention keynoter the man, above all others, who led the fight in the Senate for the payment of the World War veterans' bonus and helped override the President's veto of that measure—and thus throw a strain of more than $2,000,000,000 additional on the Treasury. How can the Republicans convince the country they are sincere in their criticism of New Deal spending when they do such things?

Phone Witness, Becker Tangle On Stock Issue

Corporation's Comptroller Calls Questions at FCC Inquiry 'Foolish.'

By the Associated Press.

Punctuating a hearing before the Federal Communications Commission with sharp interchanges with witnesses, Samuel Becker, special F. C. C. counsel, hammered yesterday to find out how and why the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. had acquired $2,000,000,000 of stock in operating telephone companies.

Becker several times demanded hotly that C. H. Heiss, A. T. & T. comptroller, be "instructed to answer my questions." Heiss contended he had deviated from direct replies in order "to give complete answers."

Commissioner Paul A. Walker, directing the F. C. C. investigation of the utility, also took Heiss to task for his manner of giving testimony.

At one point, Heiss branded a query by Becker "a foolish question" and Walker interjected:

"Whether it is foolish or not, there are questions of fact that we want to know. You can answer it or say you don't know the answer."

Offering voluminous testimony given by A. T. & T. witnesses in previous telephone queries to bulwark his interrogation, Becker brought out that early "license contracts" granted operating companies by A. T. & T. contained options to buy stock upon termination of the contracts.

He said testimony in other hearings had shown that the A. T. & T took the view that it had acquired stock in operating companies in connection with its obligations under the license contract.

In response to a question as to whether this were true, Heiss answered that he could no reply directly, but added that the stock acquisition "was an outgrowth of the license contracts."

The witness added that the provision entitling the A. T. & T. to buy stock probably was inserted by the company "to protect itself" in the use of patents.

The present license contracts provide that Bell System companies shall pay the A. T. & T. 1½ per cent of their annual revenues in return for engineering, accounting and other technical services.

Bringing out that the A. T. & T. received about $13,000,000 under the contracts last year, Becker fired a series of questions designed, he said, to show that this money actually came from telephone subscribers.

Heiss conceded that practically all telephone revenues came from subscribers, but added that operating companies paid the service charges out of "any money they may have."

North Dakota Seeks 5-Million Seed Loan

Bismarck, N. Dak., April 21 (AP). Gov. Walter Welford asked President Roosevelt today to make available immediately to the State industrial commission $5,000,000 for loans to farmers unable to obtain seed loans under existing Federal regulations.

Welford said in a telegram to the President there are 10,000 farmers in this classification in North Dakota. He added soil and moisture conditions were the best in several years and that "it would be most unfortunate not to be able to provide seed for immediate planting" to take advantage of these conditions.

Further delay, Welford said, would be "calamitous."

Farmer Hunted as Killer Of Sheriff and Deputy

Colfax, La., April 21 (AP).—Sheriff W. L. Nugent and Deputy Sheriff B. L. Bronson, both of Grant Parish, were found shot to death in a lonely wooded section 6 miles east of here today.

The officers were said by investigators to have been killed after going to a farm to assist Federal range riders in forcing the farmer to dip his cattle. The Federal men asked their aid after, they said, they were fired upon by the farmer.

A farmer, whose name was not announced, was being sought.

Bishop John J. McCort, Catholic Prelate, Dies

Johnstown, Pa., April 21 (AP).—Bishop John J. McCort, 76, of the Altoona diocese of the Roman Catholic Church, died today after a long illness.

The aged prelate had been in a coma for several days. He entered the hospital February 16, and last rites of the church were administered to him more than two weeks ago.

He was born in Philadelphia and was ordained 52 years ago. He served as bishop for 24 years.

Senate Passes $272,000,000 Mississippi Bill

Measure Seeks to Control River's Rampages; 'Pork,' Cries Vandenberg.

By the Associated Press.

After a shouted warning by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, against "pork barrel" legislation, the Senate yesterday passed the Overton bill authorizing $272,000,000 for lower Mississippi flood control and sent it to the House.

The bill would authorize a five-year program of levee and reservoir building designed so that at flood peak on the big river huge spillways could be opened through the levees to empty surplus waters into floodways paralleling the main channel.

The Eudora floodway to be provided under the bill would open a ten-mile wide passage through southeastern Arkansas and halfway through Louisiana into which surplus waters could be diverted.

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisisana, author of the measure, said much of this territory was woodland and poor farm land.

No appropriation was carried in the measure, but Overton indicated $50,000,000 would be required the first year, to be provided through a subsequent appropriation measure.

Senator Vandenberg condemned what he termed a disposition by some Senators to impose upon the Federal Government the full cost of flood control, regardless of whether the problem was interstate or intrastate.

Flood problems, he said, had been "dramatized" to form the basis of demands for Federal spending. He insisted he would not measure money against human lives, but urged that Congress follow what he called the "completely wise" recommendation of President Roosevelt that only "emergency" projects be undertaken and that others be held up pending a study of a Nation-wide program.

Apple Blooms Fete Set April 30, May 1

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., April 21.—After carefully studying all available data on probable weather conditions and inspecting fruit buds, the executive committee of the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival today announced the two-day celebration this year will be held April 30 and May 1.

At this time, it is believed, the more than 11,000,000 trees in the Shenandoah - Potomac - Cumberland fruit belt will be at the height of their beauty.

Rehearsals for the pageant, in progress for months, are expected to reach the full-dress stage early next week and entries for the feature parade, "Trail of the Pink Petals," are being recevied in increasing numbers, Director Roy A. Cather said tonight.

6 of 'Bluecot Ring' Get 15 Year Terms

Seattle, April 21 (AP).—Six members of Seattle's "bluecoat burglar ring" were sentenced to 15 years in the penitentiary today by Superior Judge Chester A. Batchelor.

Mrs. Carl Bailey, wife of one of the prisoners, was carried screaming from the courtroom after she made a futile plea for leniency.

The six are Bailey, 34; Charles F. Buchanan, 44; William Voltz, 46, all former patrolmen; T. J. Lee, former National Guard sergeant; Charles Marchand, 37, and Paul C. Latimer, 37. All pleaded guilty.

Police arrested ten men and accused them of stealing thousands of dollars worth of loot in the business and industrial districts.

Two others of those arrested have been sentenced, one is awaiting trial, and another, Patrolman R. C. McWade, 54, committed suicide in jail.

Reaguer Made Threat on Life, Wood Testifies

Husband of Slain Girl Tells of Events Leading to Hotel Killing.

Speaking in a clear, well modulated voice in Justice Oscar Luhring's criminal court, Herbert Wood, husband of Willie Mae Wood, slain with a penknife in the Houston Hotel before dawn last October 12, testified yesterday afternoon that William Reaguer, 37-year-old Culpeper (Va.) undertaker, threatened his life only a few days before his marriage.

As Reaguer, on trial for the murder of the attractive Culpeper girl, stared solemnly at the witness, Wood told how the defendant, a respected citizen and the father of two married daughters, approached him as he sat in his parked automobile with his bride-to-be.

In his hands, Wood testified, Reaguer held a double-barreled shotgun. He stepped from the shadows of the warm Virginia night, across the lawn of the Fletcher home in Culpeper.

Ordered to Leave.

It was late in September, 1935, and Willie Mae had told her middle-aged suitor of her determination to marry Wood.

Reaguer, Wood asserted, flashed the gun in his face.

"Leave here now," Wood testified the undertaker asserted.

"Go away at once. You'll not get Willie Mae or anyone else. If you don't go, I'll kill you."

Wood then related details of his romance and marriage to Willie Mae—a marriage that was terminated when his bride was almost decapitated in one of the most brutal slayings ever recorded in Washington.

Wood, appearing as one of the Government's key witnesses in the first-degree murder trial of Reaguer, charged with the "pen-knife" killing, spoke in a slow, even voice.

As he told of his romance with Willie Mae, whom he met while he was a boarder in her home, the husky Virginia State Highway Commission employe often was on the verge of tears.

"I first met Willie Mae in March, 1935, when I went to Culpeper to work, and boarded at the Fletcher home. I left there May 4 of last year, but I went back to visit frequently," Wood testified.

"I never had anything to do with Reaguer, and my relations with him up till the time he threatened me were casual.

"But, the Sunday before we got married she told me she was going out with Reaguer in his car and tell him about what we were going to do. When she got back she came and sat with me in my car.

"Then Reaguer came up and threatened me, and told me he'd kill me if I didn't leave. He said I'd never have Willie Mae or anyone else. I told him if he'd put down his shotgun I'd get out of the car."

So much disturbance did the jealous undertaker make in the Fletcher yard that Mrs. Dolores Fletcher, mother of Willie Mae, came to the garage and persuaded him to go away, Wood testified.

"A few days later I saw Reaguer on the streets of Culpeper, but he did not speak," recalled Wood.

Tells of Marriage.

Wood then told of his marriage to Willie Mae in Rockville on September 28, 1935.

Wood described how he and Willie Mae took no wedding trip, but went immediately to live at his home, at Fairfax Station, Va., 10 miles from Fairfax Courthouse.

On the night of October 11, the night Willie Mae and her cousin, Miss Annie T. O'Bannon, came to Washington with Reaguer, Wood returned home and learned his wife had gone to Culpeper. He drove to Culpeper and then hastened back to Washington, where Miss O'Bannon often stayed with an aunt, to find her.

He searched most of the night for his wife and Miss O'Bannon. He said he must have been searching for Willie Mae and Annie at the time they were driving in the rainfall with Reaguer to Washington.

"When I couldn't find any trace of them I went home," Wood said. "I went home and I went to bed."

"When did you learn of Willie Mae's death?" Chief Defense Attorney James A. O'Shea asked in cross-examination.

"About 8:30 on the morning of October 12," replied Wood sadly. "A reporter called me and told me."

Night Clerk on Stand.

Following Wood to the stand late yesterday afternoon was John Sullivan, former night clerk at the Houston Hotel, where Willie Mae, Reaguer and Annie O'Bannon registered the night of the slaying.

Sullivan, now connected with the Willard Hotel, told of the three entering the hotel, and of Miss O'Bannon registering for the three as W. A. Thompson and party.

He described being informed that there was screaming on the ninth floor about 4 a. m. Then he told of going to the door of the room and knocking.

"There wasn't any noise, and I rapped again," related Sullivan as the crowded courtroom listened intently.

"Then someone slipped the chain on the door and opened it a few inches. It was Reaguer.

"'Open the door and let me in,' I said.

"He slid the chain and in I went. I saw Willie Mae Wood's body stretched across the foot of the bed. There was blood everywhere. I turned my head away."

Sullivan immediately summoned James C. Van Story, manager of the hotel. Reaguer asked both of them if they had a gun.

"This girl double-crossed me. She'll never double-cross anyone else again," the undertaker told the hotel man, Sullivan testified.

The Government suffered a momentary setback late in the afternoon when transcript of testimony offered by Reaguer at headquarters a few days after the slaying was not permitted as evidence.

The testimony concerned questions partially answered by the defendant. They were asked by Policeman William Kane, who took the prisoner from Emergency Hospital, where he had been examined, to jail.

Because Reaguer had been adised by his attorney to say nothing, and because he had answered these questions only partially, Justice Luhring ruled they could not be introduced into evidence at this time.

Miss Margaret Fletcher, younger sister of Willie Mae, testified yesterday morning and told the jury that Reaguer had at different times given Willie Mae two automobiles.

One of these, Miss Fletcher told the jury, was traded in for another one, for which the undertaker made up the difference, and the other was sold for $30 just before her marriage to Herbert Wood.

"I knew Mr. Reaguer about four years," said Miss Fletcher in tones so low Justice Luhring had to ask her to speak louder.

"He seemed to think an awful lot of Willie Mae. He'd say how he loved her—how he wouldn't stand for her going out with anyone else."

The second day of the trial opened yesterday with Miss O'Bannon returning to the stand. She told of the wild ride with Reaguer the night before the slaying.

Under relentless cross-examination by O'Shea, she stuck to her testimony that, while Reaguer had been drinking, he was not drunk.

"I was afraid for Willie Mae; I wasn't afraid for myself," she repeated.

O'Shea asked her repeatedly why she didn't go for aid during the ride, and afterward, when she had a chance to use the telephone at the Hotel.

"He would have been angry; he would hae hurt Willie Mae," Miss O'Bannon asserted.

String Solves Bathtub Death; Man Confesses

Mrs. Titterton's body was discovered by Fiorenza's employer, and he, Fiorenza, went to the phone and called the police."

Said He Went to Bureau.

During the routine questioning that followed, Fiorenza told detectives he had reported to the probation bureau on the day of the crime, Chief Probation Officer Irving W. Halpern today declared he had not reported on that day.

When Fiorenza, who had a record of four arrests for burglary and larceny, appeared at the bureau yesterday he was turned over to waiting detectives. He had been under constant surveillance for several days—ever since police had learned about the twine being used by upholsterers.

Commissioner Valentine, who only a few days ago had called it a "tough, hard case," and Prosecutor Dodge detailed the steps leading to Fiorenza, an unmarried youth with an overpowering urge to steal automobiles, as follows:

"With the discovery of the crime, special attention was given to the strand of twine found under Mrs. Titterton's body in the bathtub. This, as it later developed, had been dropped unnoticed by Fiorenza when he cut loose the bonds on the woman's hands and thought he had carried away all the twine.

Traced Through Firms.

"Detectives Shields and Quinn, of the Manhattan homicide squad, were directed to devote their entire attention to the twine. They traced it through various manufacturers in Kentucky, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, while the police department scientific laboratory endeavored further to identify it.

"Eventually the twine was identified as that used by upholsterers, and further investigation revealed it was one of a kind used in the Third avenue upholsterer's shop."

With this much of a lead, Valentine and Dodge continued, police decided to keep Fiorenza under the constant watch of detectives.

"He was questioned at various places and various times by various members of this detective group," the statement went on . . . "Each day reports of these various detectives were studied at conferences * * * and this morning it was decided to take Fiorenza into custody.

"Questioned, he confessed and detailed the crime."

Book-wormish detectives immediately recalled the De Maupassant story about a man who was hounded by a piece of string. They quoted the concluding words:

"A piece of string . . . a piece of string . . . look, here it is, M. Le Mayor!"

For several hours late in the afternoon on April 10, the husband of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton, together with John Fiorenza, the woman's confessed slayer, and a half dozen other figures in the fantastic Beekman place crime were huddled together in the small living room of the Titterton apartment.

Did anyone suspect the upholsterer's assistant, who but a short time before had summoned the police following the discovery of the nude body of Mrs. Titterton in the bathtub of the apartment? There is no record, unless it was the police, who kept together all figures in the tragedy until early the following morning.

Fiorenza and his employer had called at the Titterton home at 22 Beekman place shortly after 4 p. m. to deliver the repaired love seat.

The apartment door was ajar and the woman's body was found in the bathtub.

It was Fiorenza who called the police. Then the janitor of the apartment was summoned. He in turn called a friend, the superintendent of a neighboring apartment.

Titterton Called.

The two upholsterers, the janitor and the superintendent were at the apartment when the police arrived. In the meantime, Titterton had been called.

When newspapermen arrived, this tableau was presented: Titterton was sitting in a chair with his head in his hands. Friends were at either side speaking words of comfort.

Fiorenza was standing by a fireplace, his face a blank. The other three also were standing about the room, as detectives and police officers moved about the apartment in search of clews.

For three hours at least the husband and the confessed slayer were together in that room. Then everybody went to the East Fifty-first Street Police Station.

The upholsterer and his assistant and the two building employes were taken away together in a car. Photographers snapped them just as they started. Just as the flashes were made, Fiorenza turned almost full face toward the camera.

A slip of Firenza's tongue when the body of Mrs. Titterton was found was listed tonight by police as one of the items that pointed suspicion toward the confessed slayer.

When Kruger, his employer, saw the body he shouted to Fiorenza "something has happened to the missus. Telephone the police, quick." Kruger neither saw nor described the precise condition of the body.

But Fiorenza excitedly told police on the phone:

"There is a woman tied up in the bathroom."

How, police asked themselves, had he known the body was "tied up?"

Confesses Slaying

Victim of Flogging Denies Misconduct

Barton, Fla., April 21 (AP).—After relating details of the flogging of himself, and two companions, white-haired Sam Rogers, a former physician, today vigorously denied an attack on his testimony by the defense in the trial of seven former Tampa policemen.

Step by step, Rogers unfolded the story of how he, E. F. Poulnot and Joseph Shoemaker, who subsequently died, were abducted, flogged and tarred last November.

Then the witness was subjected to cross-examination during which he hotly denied an accusation by Defense Attorney Pat Whitaker that he had been discharged from a gasoline filling station job by C. W. Carlisle, one of the defendants, "for improper relations with Negro women and selling liquor."

Townsend Plan Foe Envisions 50-Cent Bread

Dr. R. R. Doane Tells House Group Unemployment Would Increase.

By Felix Bruner.

A House committee yesterday heard a description of conditions that would exist under the "Utopia" proposed by advocates of the Townsend old-age pension plan.

Here are some of the things they were told would happen:

Bread would cost 50 cents a loaf.

A suit of clothes costing $50 under present conditions would cost $250.

The country would experience the most serious unemployment situation in its history, in spite of the necessity of employing several million persons to collect the proposed 2 per cent transactions tax.

This description was given by Dr. Robert R. Doane, economist, who has been quoted in the Townsend Weekly, in Townsend literature, and over the radio by Townsend speakers as having approved the plan.

Denies His Approval.

Doane denied that he had ever approved it, asserting that Dr. Francis Townsend, founder of the movement, and Robert E. Clements, co-founder, knew that he opposed it, and said that Townsend had ignored letters asking that Doane's name not be used in connection with the plan.

The economist testified that he first became interested in the Townsend Plan through Frank A. Vanderlip, New York banker. Vanderlip, he said, was a "prospect" of the Townsendites looking for contributions. He said he was called to the banker's home and found Townsend and Clements there. Vanderlip, he said, asked him to make a report on the plan. Later, he testified, he was employed by Townsend to make a study of the movement and was paid "between $350 and $400" to testify before the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee. Even before he testified, he told the committee, he had made it clear to the two leaders that he did not think the plan would work.

"I understand that Vanderlip planned to back the movement if he thought it was feasible," Doane testified.

Estimated Yield.

Doane said Townsend and Clements wanted him to testify that the 2 per cent transactions tax would yield $24,000,000,000, but he said he felt the figure would be nearer $7,000,000,000, allowing nothing for the expense of collection and administration. He said rising prices resulting from the tax "would react against the possibility of collecting more than 50 per cent" of his estimate.

Representative Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, read an article in the Townsend Weekly saying Doane had approved the plan.

"I am quite convinced that the plan is impossible of performance," Doane said.

Chairman Bell (Democrat), Missouri, asked the witness if he thought the plan would increase or decrease employment.

"Imposition of a tax burden of that magnitude would increase the cost of living," the witness said. "I estimate that the increase would be 24 per cent, one-fourth of the budget of the consumer. The consumer would have to curtail his buying that much.

Employment Decrease.

"Production would naturally be scaled down and there would be a decrease in employment. We would have an employment problem far greater than we have now. The pensions would merely shift income from one group to another. They would have to be paid from existing wealth."

Doane said that under the plan 10 per cent of the people would receive half the national income and the other 90 per cent would receive the other half, while contributing all the income of the other 10 per cent.

Commenting on a statement of the Townsend Weekly that a 2 per cent transactions tax would balance the Federal budget, Doane said that "at the rate we are going now it would cost considerably more than 2 per cent."

Doane testified that both Townsend and Clements knew that the proposed tax would not raise enough money to pay each person over 60 an income of $200 a month.

Letter Is Read.

He read into the record a letter he sent to Townsend objecting to statements indicating that he had indorsed the movement, but he said he had received no reply.

"We could not proceed under our system of Government or under our system of doing business with the Townsend plan in effect," he said. "The plan is a system of rationing. Russia, under the collectivist system, is a rationed economy. If we had the resources we might be able to put the plan in effect under rationed economy. Under free prices it would be impossible."

He said the plan would immediately stifle the capital and produce markets. He estimated that in 1929 production of physical goods amounted to $426 per capita and the plan would add a $200 "service charge" to this figure. Physical capacity to produce has been greatly reduced since 1929, largely because of deterioration of plants, he said.

Doane estimated that persons with incomes of $2,400 and under would be compelled to bear 92 per cent of the burden of the Townsend tax.

"People with fixed incomes would be in a tough spot," he said.

President-Elect of Cuba Arrives might be held to disqualify him. There also was some talk of Representative James A. Wdsworth, of New York. He has Vice Presidential aspirations, which might be helped by that appointment.

From a viewpoint of advancing individual Presidential aspirants, the selection of a permanent chairman is regarded as much more important than that of temporary chairman. The latter, as soon as he makes his opening addresses and organizes the convention, retires to the sidelines. It is the permanent chairman who can help or impede the progress of a candidate by the way he makes rulings and through the power of recognition.

Discuss Housing.

A good part of the committee's meeting today was devoted to a discussion of unsatisfactory aspects of the housing situation. Complaints have been piling up with the manner in which hotel accommodations have been allocated by a local committee under the chairmanship of Representative Chester C. Bolton, of Ohio.

Following a lengthy discussion behind closed doors among the committee, Bolton, his aids and local hotel men, it was decided that West Virginia's national committeeman, Walter S. Hallanan, would work with the local group in an effort to straighten out the difficulties, Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the arrangements committee, announced.

As a step toward this end, the local hotel men held a meeting tonight in an effort to determine what they could do to alleviate the situation which has been the cause of some bitterness among delegates and others required to be here for the convention.

The arrangements committee also spent considerable time with a group of radio technicians discussing plans for broadcasting the convention's activities. It appears that the Republicans are counting heavily this year on using the radio to win the country over to their cause. Consideration will be given tomorrow to allocation of tickets for the convention sessions.

Senator Steiwer's selection as keynoter assures that the party's position will be projected from neither on ultra-conservative nor a radical viewpoint. Steiwer has been regarded as representative of Western thought during his years in the Senate. He has been mildly progressive, but has never drilled with the Senate Progressive bloc.

He has followed on the whole an independent course and is best known for the fight he made in behalf of immediate payment of the World War veterans' bonus. He also fought strenuously with subsequent success against the President's efforts to reduce veterans' compensation at the beginning of the New Deal.

The Oregonian has been more aggressive against the New Deal than his colleague, Republican Leader Charles L. McNary. He challenged recently the validity of the Black lobby committee's seizure of telegrams, and from time to time he has assailed other Democratic activities.

He opposed the $4,880,000,000 relief bill, the holding company act, the wealth tax and the Guffey coal act. On the other hand, he voted for the labor disputes act, TVA extension and AAA amendments.

Good News.

Topeka, Kans., April 21 (AP).—Gov. Alf M. Landon told reporters "I'm glad to get the news" when informed today of the selection of Senator Steiwer, of Oregon, as the G. O. P. keynoter at Cleveland, but he declined any further comment.

President-Elect Of Cuba Arrives For 2-Day Visit

Dr. Gomez and Wife Guests at Welles Dinner, Fete in Embassy Today.

Dr. Miguel Mariano Gomez, president-elect of Cuba, arrived in Washington yesterday afternoon for a two-day visit.

He and members of his party were met at Union Station by Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles and White House naval and military aids.

Th Army Band played the Cuban national anthem and then the President-elect, escorted by a squadron of motorcycle policemen, was driven to the Cuban Embassy, where he and members of his party will be the guests of Ambassador Guillermo Patterson y de Jauregui.

With President-elect Gomez are Senora Gomez, their daughters, Serafina, Graziella and Margarita Gomez, and his brother-in-law, Dr. Julio Morales Coello.

Dr. Gomez was scheduled to call on President Roosevelt at the White House, but this was postponed because of Roosevelt's trip to Fall River, Mass.

Last night Secretary and Mrs. Hull gave a dinner in honor of Dr. and Senora Gomez at the Sulgrave Club, the first of several parties in their honor here.

A luncheon will be given in their honor today by the governing board of the Pan-American Union. This afternoon there will be a reception at the Cuban Embassy and in the evening Dr. and Senora Gomez will be the dinner guests of Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Welles.

The President-elect and members of his party will leave here tomorrow for New York, where they will embark for Cuba.

He will be inaugurated as President of Cuba in Havana on May 20. As the nominee of a coalition party, he was elected chief executive of the island republic on January 10 in the first free and general expression of the Cuban electorate since the fall of the Machado government in 1933.

Dr. Gomez for a long time was Mayor of Havana. When he moves into the presidential palace, he will be following in the footsteps of his father, Gen. Jose Miguel Gomez, who also was President of Cuba.

Ambassador Long Ill.

Rome, April 21 (AP).—Ambassador Breckinridge Long of the United States, who intended to return home today on a vacation, was forced to postpone his departure several days because of a stomach disorder.

Mrs. Sage Loses Deportation Plea

By the Associated Press.

Mrs. Anna Sage, known as the "woman in red" in the John Dillinger shooting, has lost her final appeal against deportation to Rumania. She will leave Chicago Saturday on the deportation train for New York.

An appeal sent by her lawyer to Secretary Perkins was turned over to Daniel W. McCormick, immigration commissioner. He sent word that the deportation ordered by the Federal courts was mandatory. An order was sent to the Chicago authorities to send Mrs. Sage on the Saturday deportation train to New York.

It was Mrs. Sage who disclosed to Federal agents and officers the theater in Chicago which Dillinger was to attend in 1934 when he was killed as he left. Mrs. Sage is being deported as an undesirable alien because she was convicted of operating a disorderly house in Gary, Ind.

Scientists to Attend Farm Conference

Detroit, April 21 (AP).—Francis P. Garvan, president of the Chemical Foundation and the Farm Chemurgic Council, announced today that a second Dearborn conference would be held May 12 to 14 to promote industrial uses of farm products through applied science.

The conference is expected to attract more than 1,000 scientists, industrialists and agriculturists, and will be sponsored by the two organizations which Garvan heads, he said.

These are the 6 questions most people ask about Packard 120

1 What is the down payment?

If your old car is of more than average value, you may have no down payment to make at all. No fixed figure will cover all cases, of course. But a recent survey conducted in several cities revealed that down payments made by Packard 120 buyers averaged only $87.50 after allowance had been made for their used cars.

2 What are the monthly payments?

Because Packard spreads the payments over a period to suit your convenience, the monthly payments amount to only a few dollars more than those of a low-priced car. And Packard's 6% finance plan is unsurpassed for liberality.

3 Does it cost much to keep up?

Emphatically, no. There are two reasons why this is true. First, because the Packard 120, thanks to its better engineering, its greater precision, and its finer materials, should require less service than any other car you have ever owned. Second, because service charges for the Packard 120 are competitive with those of any other car in its price class. In fact, a recent analysis showed that charges for typical service operations, including parts and labor, are less on the Packard 120 than the average for five other comparably-priced cars.

4 Is it a real Packard?

If you will inspect the Packard 120 and drive it over any route you please, you will agree that it is a real Packard in performance, in appearance, in comfort and luxury. It is a car built in the fine car tradition instead of a car built to a price. It brings you everything Packard stands for—*yet it sells for as little as $990.

5 What is its chief advantage over other cars?

No other car can offer you the prestige of the Packard name. No other car can match Packard long mechanical life. But above and beyond these, no other car can offer you Packard's freedom from style depreciation.

Style depreciation is the biggest single influence in obsoleting any new car. If you choose a car whose history is one of radical yearly style changes, you take the risk of having the car soon lose its identity. But when you buy a Packard 120, you are assured that your car will stay smart, not just for the current year, but for years to come. Because Packard adheres to one basically beautiful design, a Packard 120 stays smart, stays a car you are proud of.

6 How is the car going?

The success of the Packard 120 has amazed the automobile world. This car has climbed from scratch to second place in a price class which includes twelve cars. No comparably-priced car in history has won so quickly such a large group of delighted owners.

Before you buy any car, match Packard 120 against the field. Compare it with any other car on any point you care to name. Go to a Packard showroom, drive the car, and get the facts as they apply to your own case on how easy the car is to own. Then we leave it to you as to whether you want to own any other car.

U. S. Reports 225,000 Gain In Employment

Heaviest Foreign Trade in Five Years Is Shown for First Quarter.

While Commerce Department statisticians recorded the heaviest volume of foreign trade in five years for the first quarter of this year, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins reported a 225,000 gain in employment yesterday for manufacturing and nonmanufacturing industries in March.

Secretary Perkins, pointing out that weekly pay rolls in the industries surveyed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics had increased $10,000,000 and $20,000,000 more than a year ago, denied recent conclusions in some fields that there has been any "startling" evidence of technological unemployment resulting from the adoption of labor-saving machinery. She offered this comparison between July, 1929, peak-month of the pre-depression period, and March:

Industrial production 116 per cent and 96 per cent.

Employment, 108 per cent and 84 per cent.

Pay rolls, 115 per cent and 75.7 per cent.

The factor once called "an unfavorable balance of trade" and now termed by Administration economists "an excess of imports over exports" amounted to $5,387,000 for the quarter, according to the Commerce Department figures.

The same report revealed under scrutiny that despite Mussolini's pressing need for war supplies in Ethiopia, the volume of Italian purchases in the United States has dropped.

For the three months the total of exports to Italy was $18,719,391 as compared with $19,985,913 in the first quarter of 1935. Total exports to Italian Africa: 1936, $534,774; 1935, $111,183. Total exports to Ethiopia, $3,777 this year; $28,602 last year.

Commerce Department officials pointed to the fact that exports of agricultural products had increased and imports had decreased as a significant tendency.

For the three-month period, exports totaled $575,123,000 as compared with $524,248,000 for the same period in 1935, $525,910,000 in 1934, $330,119,000 for 1933, $458,870,000 for 1932 and $709,843,000 for 1931.

Imports for the first three months aggregated $580,510,000; 1935, $496,679,000; 1934, $426,564,000; 1933, $274,614,000; 1932, 397,709,000 and in 1931, $568,296,000.

The month's increase in exports, $195,336,000 for March, against $181,838,000 in February; was largely due to gains in shipments of industrial and agricultural machinery, electrical refrigerators and automobiles.

The Labor Department statistics stressed the fact that 4,500,000 young people had entered the labor market since 1929, and that employment would have to be 124 per cent of the "normal" level before these extra potential workers could be absorbed.

Petworth Association Opposes Sports Arena

The Petworth Citizens Association adopted a resolution, last night, opposing the erection of a proposed sports arena at Thirteenth and Kansas avenue northwest.

A resolution presented by James G. Yaden, to elect a city council by popular vote and election of the two civilian members of the District Commissioners by vote was referred to a special committee.

The membership committee announced enrollment of 158 new members in a recent drive.

Freight Train Hurts Girl, 2, At Riverdale

Two-year-old Eleanora Natol, of Riverdale, Md., was struck by a Baltimore & Ohio freight train yesterday near her home.

R. H. Campbell, of Riverdale, working nearby, saw the accident, picked up the child and called her mother, Mrs. Sarah Natoli.

The child was sent to Providence Hospital in the ambulance of the Bladensburg Rescue Squad. She was treated for a possible skull fracture, a dislocated shoulder and lacerations.

W. R. Anderson, engineer of the locomotive, said he did not see the child until the train was almost on her.

Eleanora had been with her brother, Joseph, 7, to visit her father, who was working on a house a few hundred yards from the tracks. Returning, she wandered away from her brother.

Funeral Today For R. O. Beene, G. P. O. Worker

Native of Tennessee Was Descendant of Boone's Frontier Friend.

Funeral services for Russell Owen Beene, 67, superintendent of accounts, Government Printing Office, who died Monday at his home, 1915 Calvert street northwest, will be held at 4 p. m. today in the Hysong funeral parlors. The body will be cremated.

Born in South Pittsburgh, Tenn., Beene was a descendant of William Bean, who accompanied Daniel Boone into Tennessee and founded the first white settlement, Bean Station. The name later was changed to Beene.

In his early days he became associated with the Ochs brothers during their ownership of the Chattanooga Times. The friendship continued, and when the New York Times came under their control Beene was sent to Cuba to cover the Spanish-American War as special correspondent.

He was a member of the National Press Club here, and numbered many newspapermen as his friends. He had been associated with the Printing Office for 45 years.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Alice C. Beene; one son, Robert, of Pulaski, Va.; three sisters, Miss Ida L. Beene, St. Mary's, Ohio; Mrs. Avis Olmstead, Cincinnati, and Mrs. F. H. Berndt, Seattle, Wash., and three brothers, Joseph C. Beene and C. T. Beene, both of Nashville, and J. C. Beene, of Chattanooga.

President Hopes To Visit Canada

By the Associated Press.

Hope for a visit to Canada was held out yesterday by President Roosevelt in acknowledging an invitation from Lord Tweedsmuir, the governor general of the Dominion.

Roosevelt said last week that his future plans hinged on the conclusion of work on Capitol Hill, including his long-scheduled visit to the Texas and Arkansas Centennials the first week of June. In a White House statement yesterday it was said Roosevelt "is not yet certain" whether he would be able to accept the Canadian invitation.

It was believed that if Congress adjourned by early June, the President would continue his proposed journey to the Southwest to include a call at Ottawa. This would be during the week when the Republican National Convention is meeting.

Briton Denounces U. S. Trade Pact

London, April 21 (AP).—Herbert William, conservative member of Parliament, today demanded the denunciation of "the commercial treaty with the United States in order that we can impose oppressive duties on American goods until they stop this."

The "this" referred to the alleged subsidizing of United States ships in the Pacific, a question under discussion by the House of Commons at the time.

Walter Rumciman, president of the board of trade, who was under interrogation, did not reply to William's remark.

Commerce Department officials said yesterday they knew of no differences in the ship subsidy system for Pacific as against Atlantic vessels.

James Craig Peacock, director of the Shipping Board Bureau, said improvements in American ships had made them strongly competitive with old British lines in the Pacific and that some empire traffic had been diverted to American ships. He said he could not discuss remarks of Herbert William in the British House of Commons.

Mrs. Considine, 47, Dies at Walter Reed

Mrs. Constance M. Considine, 47, wife of Lieut. Col. John A. Considine, U. S. A., 6607 Sixteenth street northwest, died yesterday after a short illness in Walter Reed Hospital.

Born at St. Paul, Minn., she moved to Seattle while a young girl and lived most of her life there. After her marriage to Lieut. Col. Considine she spent much time in travel to Army posts in foreign countries. Mrs. Considine came to Washington last year when her husband, stationed in Guatemala, was assigned a post here.

She is survived by her husband and two daughters, Miss Dorothy M. Considine, 19, and Miss Jeanne E. Considine, 17, all of this city.

A requiem mass will be said in the chapel at Walter Reed Hospital tomorrow at 9 a. m. Burial will follow in Arlington National Cemetery.

C. A. R. Leader Asks Campaign On Radicalism

Patriotic Education Is First Line of Defense, Mrs. Sinclair Says.

A more energetic drive to combat radical organizations in attracting the youth of the country was urged yesterday at the opening of the forty-first annual convention of the Children of the American Revolution in the Red Cross auditorium, by Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, national president of the organization.

The convention, attended by more than 200 delegates from every part of the country, will continue through Thursday. The high light of today's session will be "free-for-all" amateur contest for delegates at 8 p. m. in the National Red Cross auditorium.

"Don't let these young people get away to other organizations," warned Mrs. Sinclair. "Twenty-five years ago it might have been possible to have taken things gradually. Now on every side the handwriting on the wall is evident.

"We can see in many States the results of the radical element, which will react directly, unless curbed, upon the safety of our homes and our children. I say again, gather in your young people and stand fast together.

"Patriotic education is our first line of defense. Today it is through our schools that we have to reach our young people. That is why great care should be exercised in seeing that teachers are secured who are themselves true Americans and who not only know our Constitution, but impart to their pupils the principles and ideals learned through knowledge of our Constitution."

The convention was opened with concert selections by the United States Marine Band and the parade into the auditorium of the color-bearers and pages escorting the national officers.

The Rev. Harry Lee Doll, of Christ Church, Alexandria, read the invocation, which was followed by the pledge of allegiance to the flag, led by William Keys Fillauer, of Tennessee, and the reading of the American's Creed, by William Tyler Page 3d, grandson of the author of the creed.

Greetings were extended to the delegates by Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, national vice president; Mabel Boardman, secretary of the Red Cross; Henry F. Baker, president of the Sons of the American Revolution; Dr. Thomas E. Green, president of the District Sons of the Revolution, and Mrs. William A. Becker, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The afternoon session of the convention was given over to business matters with the reading of reports of the various committee heads. Because of the death of Louis McHenry Howe, the reception of the delegates by Mrs. Roosevelt, scheduled for yesterday afternoon, was canceled.

Last night a party was held for the C. A. R. delegates at the Washington Club, with Mrs. Blair Banister, assistant treasurer of the United States, receiving them.

District Budget

the full committee this morning. Several items are controversial and may be altered by the larger group.

The question of whether any of the proposed traffic amendments are to be attached to the bill as riders remains to be decided by the full committee.

Appropriations for public health and hospitals have been raised to Budget Bureau estimates or above, it was indicated, but the amount for unemployment relief has been held to the budget figure of something over $1,500,000, with the understanding that the District Commissioners will be authorized to spend whatever they need prior to January, 1937, when further appropriations may be voted.

Beyond the Budget Bureau estimates, the Senate sub-committee agreed to retain the three major additions made by the House, comprising $1,000,000 to start work on a courts building, $353,000 for an addition to Eastern High School, and $250,000 to begin replacement of Chain Bridge.

These items account for $1,603,000 of the estimated $3,000,000 surplus anticipated by the Budget Bureau.

By restoring sundry other items to budget figures, the Senate sub-committee will put back about $700,000 slashed from the President's recommendations by the House sub-committee.

The remaining $200,000 has been distributed by the sub-committee among various minor projects requested by District officials or civic organizations, although obviously the vast majority of requests outside the Budget Bureau recommendations have had to be discarded.

House Bloc Claims 180 Back WPA Plan

By the United Press.

A Congressional bloc seeking to "earmark" half the proposed $1,500,000,000 relief appropriation for PWA last night claimed support of more than 180 House members.

Representative Alfred F. Beiter (Democrat), New York, leader of the bloc, said he hoped to have more than 200 names on petitions asking President Roosevelt to aid the drive when they are ready to present to him next week.

Beiter said 108 House members have signed petitions circulated by 11 members of his committee. He estimated at least 80 names were on 8 petitions not returned to him.

President Roosevelt already has indicated objections to the "earmarking" proposal. He wants the $1,500,000,000 in new relief funds to be spent on "quick action" projects under WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins. The recalcitrant House group hopes to persuade him to agree for at least $700,000,000 to be used for heavier construction projects under PWA Administrator Harold L. Ickes.

to arrive at Constitution Hall shortly after 7 p. m. Three abreast, they ranged themselves in a line that stretched through the corridors, clear around the auditorium, and slowly filed through the reception room onto the stage.

There they were introduced to the president general and the other officers of the organization. From 9 o'clock, when the reception opened officially, until 11, when the officers left for the pages' ball, a never-ending stream of delegates and guests moved across the platform.

So great was the assembled throng that many of the Daughters were forced to wait as long as half an hour before reaching the platform to be introduced to Mrs. Becker.

They stood in the hallways, all of them in evening dress and many with bouquets of fresh-smelling flowers. Here and there were motherly Daughters, who had to be assisted along by younger Daughters, adding to the dignity and impressiveness of the ceremony.

D. C. Women to Get Posts.

Virtually assured of election, according to "administration" sources, are Mrs. William J. Ward, of Summit, N. J.; Emeline A. Street, of New Haven, Conn., and Mrs. Harry Colfax Groves, of the District of Columbia chapter. Other candidates are Mrs. Eli Dixson, of Roseville, Ill.; Mrs. Mortimer Platt, of Fort Worth, Tex., a candidate from Missouri; Mrs. Allen Harris, of Johnson City, Tenn.; Mrs. J. Harris Baughman, of Tallulah, La.; Mrs. Thomas J. Maudlin, of Pickens, S. C., and Mrs. Harold Theodore Graves, of Jamestown, N. Dak.

The president general's reception came after a morning devoted exclusively to the business of the organization and an afternoon of luncheons and teas of the various State delegations.

Reading of the reports of the various committees will continue through today's morning session into the afternoon. Considerable interest has been aroused in the report on national defense through patriotic education to be made by Mrs. Vinton Earl Sisson, chairman of the committee.

Following her report the congress will be addressed by Brig. Gen. Harry E. Knight, assistant chief of staff of the United States Army, and Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations.

At yesterday's morning session, the Daughters adopted a resolution conveying to the President and to Congress their "hearty commendation for the appropriations recommended and enacted in fulfillment of the defense policy of the United States." In a message read at the opening session of the convention Monday night, President Roosevelt declared that our Army and Navy were adequate for our national defense and that there would be no expansion of armaments unless other nations increased theirs.

The problem of how to preserve the youth of the land from radicalism was raised repeatedly in the reports of the committee chairman and national officers and in the greetings of the honorary presidents general.

The fact that daughters of D. A. R. members are not coming into the organization in sufficient numbers to make up for the loss of membership through death was "something to worry about," Mrs. George Thacher Guernsey, one of the honorary presidents general, warned the congress.

Roll Is Decreasing.

"Out total membership is now some 25,000 fewer than eight or nine years ago," she pointed out.

"We are not in competition with worthwhile organizations appealing to young women," she continued. "But there are too many junior leaguers, university women, educational association and sorority girls who have not followed mother into our society for the simple reason that somewhere along the line we, who have perhaps become 'too set' in our ways, have laid down on the job."

"Church and college, welfare and social organizations today offer too many outlets for youthful vitality for us to compete with a mere membership in our society with opportunity for service limited to minor junior roles."

In her report Mrs. Becker said that 36 chapters had helped "some young person in the name of your society." Among the activities she described were the making of new dresses and shirts for children, programs of indoor evening entertainment, a school for transients and a boys' camp, and helping to keep high school children in school by paying their car fare.

At the close of the morning session, Mrs. Becker, accompanied by a group of the Daughters, placed a wreath on the D. A. R. memorial fronting along C street. Janet Richards, who has attended more than 40 D. A. R. congresses, delivered the tribute.

The committee for the president general's reception was headed by Mrs. Edward Murray, chairman, and Mrs. Joseph W. Byrns, Mrs. George H. Dern and Mrs. John Slaton, vice chairmen.

Assisting them were:

Mrs. John S. Adams, Mrs. James S. Ardern, Mrs. Herbert Backus, Mrs. Charles R. Banks, Mrs. John Lester Barr, Mrs. Nathaniel Beaman, Mrs. Albert L. Calder 2d, Mrs. Norman Case, Mrs. H. THE SCOTCH THAT CIRCLES THE GLOBE
Critics agree in CAIRO and CHICAGO
From the Middle West to the Near East, the standard for Scotch is McCallum's. Every drop of this famous whisky is like every other drop—and every drop is eight years old. That's why the seasoned drinker of Scotch specifies "McCallum's Perfection" when he puts in his order. He knows he can depend on a whisky that has the traditions of the House of McCallum behind it. Imported only in convenient oval bottles, taped and sealed, with a useful jigger top for measuring spots.

More Than A Local Issue.

Reluctantly, House leaders have been forced to cancel the April 27 date set for consideration of District legislation. The next possible date will be May 11, and perhaps not until May 27. With Congress working for adjournment in early June at latest, it is entirely possible that District bills still waiting action may not reach a vote this session. This would be the more deplorable because the Sisson bill, repealing the red rider, is one of those pending.

The reason for the postponement of District day is that the House has not yet disposed of the Navy and deficiency bills, both of which require lengthy debate. To the disappointed District it is explained that national bills claim precedence over local bills. But it must not be forgotten that the Sisson bill, too, has pronounced national significance.

For Washington is the National Capital. And decisions of Congress with regard to Washington's public school system may properly be regarded as a national model. If Washington has its teachers gagged, then gags on teachers have been given a most unfortunate imprimatur of approval.

This being so, there is additional desirability for repeal of the red rider. And if the House saw fit to take special action to postpone consideration of the Sisson bill, under the circumstances it can also take action to insure a vote on the far-reaching measure before adjournment. Specifically, a rule should be sought to limit debate on the brief proposal. The special rule granted on the Ellenbogen rent commission bill last week provides more than sufficient precedent.

Distrust Of Boondoggling.

In demanding a division of the proposed $1,500,000,000 work-relief fund between the PWA and the WPA a powerful group of Congressmen is really expressing its distrust of the entire program engineered by Harry L. Hopkins. Ordinarily many of these Representatives might be inclined flatly to oppose this vast new outlay for trifling projects. But this is a political year. They have chosen a more subtle way of manifesting their hostility to the idea of "boondoggling our way out of the depression."

The WPA has become a constant source of embarrassment to members of Congress. It subjects the Administration to the charge, which can be proved in all too many instances, of wasting the public money at a time when the Federal deficit is mounting to dangerous proportions. Sooner or later the country must turn its back upon this reckless procedure and face the unemployment problem in a realistic way. Some members of Congress already see the handwriting on the wall, and are conducting an astute campaign to curtail the WPA without offending the President or curbing the outflow of money.

If Congress had the courage to face our most baffling national problems, instead of fencing with their shadows, the controversy now arising would not turn upon such secondary matters as the relative merits of PWA pump-priming and WPA boondoggling.

Made To Order.

Considering the vast amount of drama which forms the daily design for living on Devil's Island, comparatively few authors or playwrights have used it for background. True, Blair Niles wrote a book about the French penal colony some years ago which was followed by one from the pen of Richard Halliburton, who managed to inject the Princeton slant even into that desolate site. But both these works come under the head of nonfiction. Perhaps the surprising dearth in Devils Island romance is explained by the fact that a writer would be hard put to top, or even equal, the true stories which emanate from there.

Recently five more convicts went a. w. o. l. from Devils Island and landed 800 miles up the coast on Trinidad. After being fed and sheltered by the local police, they were put to sea once more with a supply of provisions which may, or may not, run out before they find a haven willing to let bygones be bygones. But what gives this small group particular singularity is that one of them is Henri Le Clerq, once well known as a Parisian playwright.

If Monsieur Le Clerq's theatrical abilities have not been dimmed by hardships, he should be able, provided his ship comes in, to produce a prison play that would put "The Big House" to shame. The first act would naturally open aboard the Martiniere, which transports its tragic human cargo annually from France to French Guiana. The second and third acts should give the audience an idea of life on the Island and eventual escape therefrom.

The torrid heat, the beating rains, the insects, the monotony, the effects on a man's body and soul—this was part of the popularity of "Rain." Strong fare, but it spells good boxoffice. And for those theatergoers who could not endure a three-hour sentence to Devils Island, there are always ten-minute intermissions. But both the happy ending and the unhappy beginning of such a play are contingent upon the successful escape of the playwright himself!

A Tale With A Moral.

With the fate of Ethiopia in the balance, the Council of the League of Nations on Monday night approved continuation of present sanctions against Italy, and adjourned until May 11. By then the general election in France will be over and a firmer League stand may be possible. The other side of the picture is that three weeks from now organized Ethiopian resistance to Italian aggression may also be a thing of the past.

It was the ambiguous French position at this week's Geneva meeting which, more than any other factor, prevented a last attempt at effective action to restrain Italy from reaping the fruits of her aggression. The present sanctions are undoubtedly injuring Italian economy. But instead of saving Ethiopia they have stimulated the Italians to put every ounce of energy into a speedy conquest. It may be argued that without the pressure of sanctions Mussolini's commanders would not have found it advisable to use poison gas, in violation of Italy's signature to the convention prohibiting that horrible weapon. And gas has served its purpose. More than anything else it has crumbled the morale of Haile Selassie's soldiers.

With a stronger French attitude, even allowing for the non-participation of several important countries, sanctions could probably have saved Ethiopia from collapse under the barefaced aggression of a stronger fellow-member of the League. The essential reason for French temporizing—fear of antagonizing a potential ally against Germany—is clear enough. But it is far less certain that their diplomacy has served the French well in electing to prevent the League from being a decisive force in this crisis. It has created the impression, in the words of the Russian delegate to the Council, that "there are tendencies to treat an aggressor with the more tolerance, even indulgence, the more the aggressor is arrogant and tenacious."

There has been much misrepresentation of the one real issue in the effort of Geneva to make the invasion of Ethiopia unprofitable. It may be that Italy could make this primitive country blossom like the rose. It may be that Great Britain sought to protect her own selfish interests in opposing this extension of Italian power. But beyond these and other factors a vital underlying principle was at stake: Can the League of Nations prove an effective European instrumentality to defend the victims of national aggression?

Although France has since 1919 urged that the League should be strengthened for just that purpose, she has in the present test abandoned her traditional attitude. She has abandoned it in order not to offend a single potential ally. And by her abandonment she has caused Great Britain to consider withdrawal from the crumbling system of collective action, as her foreign minister broadly hinted at Geneva on Monday.

The moral in all this is not likely to be lost upon Germany. As Hitler perfects his military machine, the defenses of the collective system crumble. With virtual French approval, Mussolini has set an example of forceful seizure. France will now be in a poor position to oppose when the time for his country to apply it seems ripe to another powerful dictator.

Altruism, Plus.

It is only natural that Dade County, Florida, wherein lies the resort city of Miami, should feel jubilant over the $300,000 brought to the county within the past three months by persons seeking—and getting—divorces there.

The Flower State's new law permitting divorces after only 90 days "residence" became effective only last summer. Yet in the first three months of this year 649 divorce suits were filed in Miami alone, an increase of 317 over the first quarter of 1935.

Ponderous arguments involving sociological factors are advanced when a State lowers its divorce standards. Nevada became much concerned over the menaces to civilization in permitting married people to stay married longer than six weeks after one tires of the bonds. Arkansas became similarly troubled in spirit, and made "residence" for divorce purposes almost a matter of checking in and checking out.

On the other hand, South Carolina remains adamant on the divorce question. And the New York State Legislature has lately killed a bill (offered by a spinster Assemblywoman) which would have permitted divorce after three years' desertion.

But the frank Floridians are the first to admit that lucre is an element. In Miami it is figured that if a divorce seeker spends $10 daily for maintenance and $100 in fees, that swells public coffers. And, curiously enough, Florida's residential requirement coincides splendidly with the resort season. "Get a sun tan and a decree at the same time," might make a good advertising slogan. Or else: "Get rid of your cough, cash, nerves, inhibitions and husband on our golden sands."

Mr. Ickes On Housing.

Secretary Ickes' testimony on the Wagner housing bill was particularly impressive because of its divergence from policies now pursued by his own PWA. No doubt Mr. Ickes has learned a great deal from his experience as landlord on behalf of the Government. At any rate, the principles he now enunciates are far more practical than those he has attempted to demonstrate through the emergency housing program.

The first point in Mr. Ickes' advice is decentralization of responsibility. At present the housing division of PWA, under his direction, is building low-rental projects that will be owned and operated, at least temporarily, by the Federal Government. Nevertheless, Secretary Ickes is quoted as saying: "It is extremely desirable that there be as much decentralization of responsibility as possible in the execution of a long-range slum-clearance and low-rent housing program." No further advice should be necessary to exclude from the Wagner bill experiments of the type now under way.

Mr. Ickes' second point is that legitimate private enterprise should be protected against Government competition in home construction. In this case, also, the experience of the PWA emphatically illustrates the soundness of his present view. That agency is building the type of home that should unquestionably be left to private enterprise. If the Government hopes to stimulate private building, it must confine subsidies to more modest quarters to house the lowest income group.

One of the weakest aspects of the Wagner bill is its failure to draw a clear and proper line of distinction between public and private housing. Great Britain's very successful housing program is being carried out with subsidies for only about 15 per cent of the homes constructed. From the viewpoint of recovery, it is obviously most important to stimulate an unsubsidized program of low-cost houses comprising 85 per cent of all residential construction. The Wagner bill is altogether too oblivious of the 85 per cent.

As the Secretary of the Interior pointed out, Federal loans and grants will be necessary to encourage local communities to eliminate blighted areas. However, programs of this sort are certain to move slowly, for they involve important questions of city planning as well as public relief. The increased volume of employment, which Senator Wagner, as well as Secretary Ickes and other officials, seeks to stimulate, is not likely to be obtained in this way. The most promising field for large-scale home building is the private development of new communities in the low-price range.

Neat Navigating.

With the Daughters of the American Revolution meeting in Constitution Hall and, just across the park, an Emergency Peace Campaign getting under way, Washington indeed lives up to its title of the City of Magnificent Distances.

On the one hand rise demands for an ever bigger navy, verbal assaults on pacifists and defense of military training in the colleges. And a former Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Hyde, stands up to aver that "Christian socialism is impossible." Meantime, from the other camp, go up diametrically opposite protests, with speeches designed to show that only Christian socialism can save civilization from collapse.

Between this Scylla and this Charybdis, Mr. Roosevelt was asked to steer. And, though it must have tested his every trick of seamanship, he came through magnificently. The present military and naval establishments of the country have been increased until they are quite adequate, he declared soothingly, and there will be no further increase in armaments unless other nations increase theirs. Even so, we shall continue to take the lead for limitation of armament by international agreement while renouncing war as an instrument of national policy.

While neither Scylla nor Charybdis seems wholly satisfied, both must admit that the Rooseveltian barque slipped through.

Which Way, Spain?

From the Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

Reports from the Riviera, which represent former King Alfonso of Spain as in daily conference at Nice with a group of his exiled sympathizers, suggest that he may be considering ways and means of returning to his native country to save it from becoming a communist state. There are many Spaniards who would like to see the monarch restored, who think of it as the only hope for stabilized government.

Republican movements have always had hard sledding in Spain. That which came into power in 1873, following the nominal sovereignty of Amadeo of Savoy, produced three presidents within a year and was beset by anarchy until Gen. Campos dissolved it in 1874 and put Alfonso XII on the throne. The only other anti-monarchial movement, prior to that which upset Alfonso XIII, was that led by Ruiz Zorilla, in 1886, which collapsed almost as soon as it was born.

Baltimore Reflections.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having heard criticism of the President's Baltimore speech last Monday night, I have just taken the time to read it with care.

While there is much of the speech that I might disagree with, I now call attention to the following extract:

Work out for yourselves what would happen if all the boys and girls of 14 and 15 and 16 and 17 who are now working in industry found it possible to stay in school until they were at least 18 years old.

How many jobs would that give to the young people of the Nation who have been graduated from high school and from college? And how much better equipped would be these youngsters who are now at work if they could stay in school to the completion of their education?

The President evidently overlooked the fact that all States—so far as I know—have "attendance" or "truant" laws which, if enforced by State officials, would not make it necessary for the Federal Government to seek to "extend the school age in every State." It looks as if the President is further inclined to interfere with States' rights.

It occurs to me that the President might see fit—at some convenient time, to encourage boys and girls to attend school—learn the fundamentals of education the same as did their fathers during "horse and buggy days," work diligently at something worthwhile to make an honest dollar, contribute to the support of the family and go to church regularly—and follow the teachings of Christ. Social Justice.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Word comes through an obscure news note that Gov. Allred of Texas has pardoned the man, who in March of this year, fatally wounded the Governor's sister by a truck. The driver admitted on trial that he was nodding and did not see his victim. Conviction was on negligent homicide, but the Governor investigated and learned that the driver was paid by the trip, and in order to make a living found it necessary to work long hours. With these facts in hand the Lone Star State's chief executive took the viewpoint that the driver was not the only guilty party, and since others could not be convicted under existing laws, the truck operator should not be made the goat.

For such a decision no one can find fault with Gov. Allred. His action deserves, as an act of justice, more than a passing notice. Surely the Governor's decision was void of any prejudice! And it should serve to remind us that criminals are often made by the neglect of others.

Conditions under which men live and work are often the cause of crime. It is for this reason that millions are fighting for some form of decent living. They crave some of "the better things of life." It is easy to say that they would do it anyhow, but low pay has been the means of causing many men to shortchange the cash register and otherwise stoop to improper methods to provide for their families. The tempter is equally guilty with the tempted, and until we raise the standard of social justice many criminals will be made from otherwise honest men. C. B. R.

"On Our Way."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Alice Roby's "Why I Fled Italy" in April's Reader's Digest amuses me. Poor girl, tired of regimentation, "wanted America"—the America she had known—"wanted to hear someone laugh spantaneously, right out loud." "The Italians move like robots." "no longer seem to make any motion of their own volition." "I was running away from apathy, resignation, suppressed thought," "Italian newspapers—always the same—Mussolini's pictures—frowning, smiling."

These supercilious detractors of American dictatorship are unfair. "Children with countenances of old men"—we have them, and I haven't seen a business man smile since the President's Baltimore speech to 10,000 Young Democrats, nor have I heard one "laugh out loud" since they received the Black questionnaire invading their private lives with: Have you been in Washington since January 1, 1935? How often? Where did you stop? How long? Who paid your expenses? How much were they? Did you discuss politics with any member of Congress? Folks are locked up for discussing politics in Italy. Well, we're "On Our Way." V. T. M.

Overpopulation in Italy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The future historian will be puzzled in trying to reconcile the civilization attained to at this time with the military behavior of our so-called civilized nations. What will be thought of a great nation of 41,000,000 people, highly skilled in the arts and sciences and successful in every industry undertaken, submitting themselves to the rule of a ruthless dictator who wastes their wealth in carrying on a war of conquest?

And the puzzle will be greater when it is revealed that this war has cost vastly more than the coveted territory could have been purchased or leased for in accordance with civilized methods. What will be thought of this sacrifice of thousands of precious lives of its own young men, all of them presumably wrested from devoted relatives, and who might otherwise have developed into the master minds for which the country has at all times been famous? What will be thought of the bombing of Red Cross hospitals and villages of defenseless people?

Italy has not even the excuse of needing additional territory for its people. According to the Fascist Annuario Statistico, 2,478,412 Italians possess 15,084,452 hectares of cultivated land. A hectare is about 2½ acres. Of that number 2,465,922 have from one-half to 100 hectares, an average of a little over 2½ hectares; 12,490 Italians have 7,049,682 hectares, an average of just over 564 hectares.

There is still plenty of room in Italy for Italians. History again repeats itself. An unjust system of land tenure is, as always, the root of the evil. But Italy should be outlawed as a nation until it secures a civilized government.

Sightseeing Courses.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Taking advantage of the national capital's famous display of historic memorials, a sightseeing course of study, as proposed in a previous letter, should long ago have taken first place in the public school curriculum as a means of developing patriotism in citizens of the future.

But without reference to the question of whether there is any special need for Americanization or not, a body of school children well informed in respect to the Capital city would be welcome as a distinctive feature of Federal City development. It might well command the admiration of tourists as well as the serious attention of educators everywhere. As a result of their school training, Washingtonians would be well acquainted with the sightseeing aspects of the city. In a few years the citizen would be exceptional who, if brought in contact with an eager tourist of an inquiring turn of mind, would be forced to assume the distressful role of an uninformed Washingtonian.

Arlington County's Future.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In 1931, the voters of Arlington County had a manager appointed to administer the affairs of the county, and a board of five members to act in an advisory capacity. The present manager has resigned recently. In appointing a successor, a new policy of government should be adopted: that of reducing taxes, debts, and placing the county on a pay-as-you-go basis, thereby eliminating the large interest payments on present debts as soon as possible so as to direct these funds to county improvements.

However, just recently there has been a demand from certain groups for a special election to decide another bond issue to borrow money for additional schools when the schools we now have are not fully paid for and are heavily in debt besides for money borrowed each year for their maintenance.

All this brings up the question of how long the Arlington County bonds will be worth anything and how long the present taxpayers will be able to maintain their homes if the present policy of borrowing funds needlessly is allowed to continue with constantly mounting taxes with which to pay debts and interest bound to ensue such policy.

Diploma Mills.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent issue of a national magazine is an article under the heading, "You Can Be a Bishop for Forty Dollars." It seems that the editor, for forty dollars, received three certificates, making him an ordained minister, a doctor of divinity and a bishop, from the Spiritual Psychic Science Church of California.

The States have nothing on the District of Columbia, as far as this religious racket is concerned, for here ordination is sold for bargain prices. In recent years, churches have sprung up over night and started diploma mills, wherein anyone for the consideration of five, ten or twenty dollars can be ordained. If this practice is done within the law, then the law is corrupt, that allows such practice and should be repealed.

The 'Beauty Doctors' Of Washington

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently one of your reporters had an article in The Post on the construction work in Lafayette Park in which he compared the change being made to that of an old woman having her face lifted.

A more accurate comparison would be with a young girl who fell into the hands of "beauty doctors" who plucked out her eyebrows, thinned her hair until she was nearly bald except for a straggling fringe around the edges, and then painted great ghastly stripes all over her face so that she looked like a circus clown.

No, Johnny, you've plucked the wrong rabbit out of the right hat. You should consult your New Deal phrase book.

"Controlled shortage" makes life more abundant, so that "property rights before human rights" covers the case. But shucks, a bloke peering cynically over my shoulder says I've got it exactly reversed, an impeachable offense in most territories. ENTRENCHED GREED.

The Post Impressionist

A Pitcairn Problem.

Post Office, Wednesday.

AREN'T the benefits of education occasionally overrated?

Certainly this columnist often feels that there are some people who should not have been taught to read. They never get out of a book anything its author put there.

Of that our friend the Major furnishes a glaring example.

Fortunately, he reads few books. Unfortunately, however, when he does read one, his fatal capacity works overtime: his capacity for twisting that hapless volume to support his own warped opinions.

Now he has picked up Dr. Harry L. Shapiro's remarkable study of six lonely generations, "The Heritage of the Bounty," which Simon & Schuster published the other day—and the result is a typical Majoresque anti-feminist letter to your Post-Impressionist.

It begins:

"Mighty few men honestly believe that women are a success in politics; the majority of the men who say they believe it are politicians and need the women's votes. As for the men who say there is a place for a Woman's Party, they're all lying; if you could look into it, you'd find out every last one of them's got some woman that he's afraid of.

"There'd be a lot less loose talk on these subjects if folks would remember the political history of Pitcairn Island.

"About every 40 years," the Major continues, "somebody writes a book on the mutiny aboard the 'Bounty,' and everybody else reads it like fresh news from the front page. But everybody forgets it just as quickly as they forget front page news, too—and hardly anybody follows through with an account of how the mutineers built up a government for Pitcairn. This fellow Shapiro has gone the whole way, though, and he shows what happens when women get the upper hand in politics.

"The mutineers," says the Major, "made their first mistake when they sailed away from Tahiti. They were going to an uninhabited island. They had a perfect chance and a good excuse to cut out the woman problem, and yet they took nine Tahitian women along with them.

"You can guess that these women were stowaways. But this only makes it all the worse. Their persistence was a plain warning of danger ahead. Besides, not having any legal right aboard, they could have been put ashore anywhere alon gthe route. Only, no, the men let them stay!

"In other words, the mutineers simply asked for a mutiny.

"And they got it.

"They landed at Pitcairn in 1790. In 1794, the men, their number being decreased by death refused to let the widows keep their husband's skulls for parlor decorations. All the women got together and decided this law was an infringement of the rights of their sex by a man-made state. They organized and formed a plan to take over the whole show.

"Here's what the book says, and Shipiro quotes it from authentic records:

"'On the 11th November a conspiracy of the women to kill the men in their sleep was discovered; . . . but no punishment appears to have been inflicted, in consequence of promising to conduct themselves properly . . . However, it was agreed that the first female who misbehaved should be put to death.

"And then what?

"Why, of course, 'on the 30th November the women again collected and attacked them—the men—and just because 'no lives were lost,' the rebels were pardoned a second time, 'but were again threatened with death' the next time they tried any throat-cutting.

"Wouldn't you think those hardy sailors must have known about how much effect 'threats' would have if not one of them was carried out? Listen to the book:

"'The women formed a party whenever their displeasure was excited and hid themselves in the unfrequented portions of the island, carefully providing themselves with firearms. In this manner the men were kept in continual suspense, dreading the result of each disturbance.'

"Who," concludes the Major, "can endorse a Woman's Party when the record of the only successful Woman's Party in history is as black as that?"

If the Major had ever read "Rasselas," he would misquote it thus:

"Ye who listen with credulity to the whispers of Femininity and pursue with eagerness the phantom of Equal Rights; who expect that the elected Woman will perform the promises of the woman Candidate, and that the deficiencies of the present governmental system will be supplied by the Feminist State—attend to the History of the Skull-Kissers of Pitcairn Island!"

Fair Enough

Presidents Play Ball.

It has been more than a year since I visited Washington, but the last time I was there I had a feeling that the disposition of the Government was unnecessarily bossy and that a lot of politicians and appointees in office were just reckless nobodies, who never amounted to much in their old home towns, enjoying a wild time in protected jobs at much better pay than they could hope to obtain in private business.

Roosevelt had horned his A. a defiant note addressed to the money changers; J. P. Morgan had sat for his picture, bouncing a midget on his lap, and Ferd Pecora had dug up enough pay-dirt to send some of the worst of the big shots to prison with Al Capone, if the Department of Justice hadn't forgotten its reason for being and turned to playing a game of cops and robbers.

It may be a good thing for the G-men to shoot to kill in dealing with the Dillingers and Baby Face Nelsons, but when the Department goes after men in the politer brackets the custom is to bring 'em back alive. Thereafter it is the task of the prosecutors to prove they did what they did, but the record shows that the most notorious white-collar bad men wiggle off the hook. The Department of Justice would look better if it had nailed just one big shot for illegal parking.

* * * *

"Reckless" or "irresponsible" is the word which I would select to describe the frame of mind of too many people who had their feet in the trough in Washington.

It was fun, all right, to crack down on the big shots and see them rub where it hurt, but I don't believe that while we were laughing at that we realized that all the petty jobholders were developing the crack-down psychology and coming to think of themselves as lower case Roosevelts and Hugh Johnsons. There are nobody knows how many thousands of appointees in Washington who are merely the objects of political charity, and it isn't the best thing for the country that they should forget their true status and worthlessness and convince themselves that they are masters of the people. I thought as long ago as a year back that the Government personnel was acquiring the frame of mind of one of those low-down, to-hell-with-the-taxpayer administrations which occur in the cities.

* * * *

In the pleasant excitement of the early days of the New Deal, when Mr. Big was dumping his great big box car numbers into the lap of Congress and the personnel was enjoying the first delights of repeal in the dairy lunches and drug stores of the National Capital, nobody but a disgruntled Republican would have thought to question the future. The atmosphere was full of noise, commotion and initials, the Government buildings were full of deserving Democrats.

Now, after three years, it strikes me that Mr. Roosevelt has too little to show in the way of sound results and much too much in the way of arrogant authority in public positions which were designed for public servants.

It is no defense to blame the Supreme Court for turning back his fondest undertakings with the word "phooey" written across them, because other Presidents have had to play ball under the rules and abide by the decision of the umpire, and he took the job on the same terms. His NRA was a dizzy undertaking, in the first place, as he probably knew in his own heart from the very beginning, and though the big parade in New York and the picket-line language of Gen. Johnson were good entertainment, the show played to a big loss in the end.

* * * *

Like all other Presidents, the Boss hadn't settled into his chair before he started campaigning for re-election and therefore couldn't do his stuff, if he had any stuff, with a free hand.

It would be foolish, of course, to suggest that he call in all his minor crack-downers at this time and compel a wholesale, conscientious delousing of the Government departments, because campaign time is no time to fire the boys who turn out the vote. But Roosevelt is one President who could do the honest thing and still be re-elected, because his contract has a four-year renewal clause as plain as if it had been written in by a lawyer.

But, at least, he could let the idea percolate down through the Government that the wild party is over now and that henceforth it is up to the Roosevelt Administration to make good with achievements, not excitement. But he won't do that, either.

Vacuum Cleaner Fraud Nets Year in Jail, Fine

Harrisonburg, Va., April 21.—T. W. Franklin, 34, of Oxford, Pa., who made a racket of taking vacuum cleaners for repairing from housewives and then failing to return them, was sentenced to 12 months on the State roads force and fined $50 today by Trial Justice Hamilton.

Franklin was arrested last week at Pulaski for Rockingham authorities. The officers found a half dozen cleaners in Franklin's possession and know of six more that he took. They learned Franklin would sell the cleaners for whatever he could get. He apparently 'operates' throughout the Shenandoah Valley.

Million Dollar Blaze Sweeps Sharon, Pa.

Sharon, Pa., April 21 (AP).—Fire, spread by five explosions and fanned by high winds, swept Sharon's business district today doing damage estimated by Fire Chief Roy Hall at $1,000,000.

Destroyed were the Protected Home Circle Temple and two other large buildings. Six clothing stores and a dancing academy were ruined. Chief Hall said he suspected a smoldering cigarette started the flames in the temple, headquarters of a $7,000,000 insurance system with lodges in a dozen States.

9 U. S. Agencies Pay Employes $327,587,977

Budget Director Reports 8 Are New Deal Bureaus to Fight Depression.

By the Associated Press.

Nine Federal agencies, eight of them created by the New Deal as anti-depression instruments, were reported officially yesterday to be paying gross annual salaries of $327,587,977 to 427,301 employes as of April 1.

Conservation work alone accounted for 354,434 employes—305,000 of them enrollees in CCC camps, with gross annual salaries of $201,131,700.

The figures, supplied by Daniel W. Bell, acting budget director, to the House Ways and Means Committee, were made public in a final compilation of hearings on the new tax bill.

The material showed among other things that:

The total cost of the defunct NRA was $25,057,164.

The Government's proprietary interest in Federal corporations and credit agencies amounted, on February 29, to $4,385,400,000, an increase of 1,880,800,000 under the present administration.

Outstanding bonds guaranteed by the United States were valued on January 31, at $4,561,980,117.

The nine agencies for which Bell supplied pay roll figures were the CCC, Electric Home and Farm Authority, Relief Administration, PWA, Housing Administration, HOLC, Rural Electrification Administration, RFC and WPA.

About 1,275 persons were drawing more than $5,000 a year, with 39 in the $10,0000-a-year class.

WPA had 38,393 administrative employes drawing $57,778,380. HOLC was next with 17,961 workers receiving $28,702,271 and PWA third with 9,136 getting $22,664,460.

The Resettlement Administration was listed for 17,055 employes with annual salaries aggregating $25,062,085.

Clifton Forge Is Host To Missionary Sessions

Clifton Force, Va., April 21.—Approximately 200 delegates to the twenty-third annual conference of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Baltimore Methodist Conference heard reports by Miss Cora M. Miss Perkins and Green Favor Slum Riddance Bill at Hearing

While Government experts were making public plans for a four-room house to cost $1,200 each, Secretary of Labor Francis Perkins and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, appeared before the Senate Labor Committee yesterday and urged adoption of the $876,000,000 Wagner program for slum clearance and low-cost housing.

"Something of this sort should be started within a short time," Miss Perkins said of the bill, which would provide for a system of loans and grants by the Federal Government to local housing authorities over a four-year period. She stressed that the program should attempt to reach two particular groups, namely:

1. Persons who can afford to pay rentals sufficient to make new housing a profitable venture.

2. Persons whose needs can not be met by privately financed construction.

"One way of assuring that subsidized housing shall be available only to those who cannot afford to pay economic rents," Miss Perkins said, "is to make one of the conditions for the receipt of Federal subsidies the tearing down of slum areas and the provision that newly erected dwellings be available to those families that are moved from demolished slum properties. The subsidized dwellings should be provided at rents not in excess of those now being paid by the families that are to be removed from slums. As far as practicable, also, subsidized housing should be erected in areas not too far distant from those slums from which the new tenants are to come."

Miss Perkins agreed with Secretary of the Interior Ickes, who testified before the committee Monday, that the proposed housing program should be organized under an existing Government department—not as a seperate authority as the bill provides.

"The American Federation of Labor gives unqualified support to this bill," President Grene told the committee. "I, personally, am going to do everthing in my power to arouse public opinion for it," he said. Green said he saw the Wagner bill, together with the 30-hour week proposal, as a complete solution to the problem of unemployment. He placed the number of the unemployed in February at 12,550,000.

"It is well known that building construction operates as an electric spark on the heavy goods industry," he declared, "and the one thing retarding recovery is the failure of the heavy goods industry to move along with the consumer goods industries."

Green filed with the committee a number of tables prepared by the A. F. of L. showing the extent of unemployment caused by the depression in building trades.

Coincident with the Senate housing hearing yesterday, the Federal Housing Administration announced that its experts, after months of study, have evolved a four-room house complete with plumbing that can be built for as little as $1,200.

Several designs have been prepared, in order to prevent monotony and standardization. One plan for a "minimum house" provides for two bedrooms, a bathroom, and a combination living room-dining room-kitchen. The exterior walls could be of wood siding, shingles, brick, concrete blocks, stucco, stone or a combination of these materials, it was said.

No End Of Books

By Theodore Hall

Enter Intrigue.

Thirty-five years ago Ford Madox Ford was collaborating with Joseph Conrad, writing "The Inheritors" and "Romance" with him by dint of polish and patch-work. If you are curious, as was I, as to which author had fathered that final and resplendent paragraph of "Romance," it was Mr. Ford—he once told me so. In 1908 Mr. Ford was editing The English Review, bringing to it a galaxy of great names hardly to be paralleled since. Much later, after the war, came the four martial and subtle novels centered on the character, Tietjens. Then there were what we must call "travel books" (as diamond comes under the heading, carbon) on America and Provence, and yet other novels. And a study, "The English Novel," which is wisdom itself. And now, bless you, he has written a mystery novel!

"Vive le Roy" (Lippincott, $2.50), as you can surmise, is no ordinary piece of work. Here is no corpse, no baffling stain on the lorgnette, no cry in the night. But when, through Mr. Ford's limpid and ingratiating style, you begin to follow the fortunes of Walter Leroy and Cassie Mathers, you will not dare to put the book down until the end. Even though a fair guesser might lay his finger on the secret in 30 pages. And that, gentlemen, is writing!

* * * *

Walter is a young and aristocratic-looking New York doctor bound for Paris, where he is to do research. Cassie, vivacious young painter, falls in love with him on the boat. But under that top-lid is the fact that Walter has been chosen by Communists in New York to take $20,000 to their confreres in Paris, where revolution rages between Royalists and Reds. Before the ship lands, the field is cleared—the Royalists have won, but at the expense of the death of their young king.

Luck would have it that on the ship Cassie and Walter have made friends with M. de la Penthievre, grand chamberlain of the king, and with Inspector Penketham, high police official with the League. And when, in Paris, Walter disappears off the face of the earth, you may expect as neat an array of intrigue among these remaining three as you could wish.

* * * *

Pick up this next book with asbestos gloves! Theodore Roscoe's "I'll Grind Their Bones" (Dodge, $2) is a corking farrago of European war, diplomacy, sudden death and foul intrigue, which comes pretty close to scaring the daylights out of the reader. It starts rather slowly, introducing to us John H. W. Keats, crack American correspondent, in the act of being offered $100,000 by the old munitions magnate, Count Vasil Garganoff, to cease his antiarmament investigations. But when, in a Berlin hotel room, the premier of "Teutony" and the foreign minister of "Esperance" shoot each other to death, you may be sure things begin to happen.

Let me suggest, as two pieces of grandly thrilling writing, the attack on Paris by aerial torpedoes and the massive, overpowering advance against "Esperance" of "Teutony's" mechanized army. And when that army, led by a dictator named Arthur Schnitzler (with black forelock and stubby mustache), enters another country, there is such a defense as was never seen on land or sea.

From small murders to great wars, Mr. Roscoe does up his prime yarn in pink ribbons. I'd prescribe it for all ailments from ennui to low blood pressure.

* * * *

More open in its use of current and imminent history is A. D. Divine's "They Blocked the Suez Canal" (Lee Furman, $2). If, lying awake at night, you ever had that notion as a means of stopping the Italo-Ethiopian mess, you will revel in this briskly written tale.

A handful of Ethiopian sympathizers in England determine to sink two ships, filled with scrap iron and with cement which will set in sea-water, across the narrowest stretches of the canal. There is treachery in their own band; there are kidnapings and gang wars in Marseilles to face; there is the gantlet of wary officials at Port Said to be run. You feel in your bones that our hardy band will succeed, but you will assuredly stand by to watch them do it.

* * * *

With the most definite pleasure I remember George Dyer's "A Storm Is Rising," written many months ago. That was a tale of intrigue at its very best—laid among us, in our own time, made credible by very interesting factual data and made exciting by the greatest audacity of invention. Mr. Dyer plans to him God speed.

In the meantime he has given us "The Catalyst Club" (Scribner, $2), a straight mystery arising from the gory death of a beautiful California girl on her millionaire father's estate. Her nude and mutilated corpse is found between the swimming pool and the mansion. Suspicion points to two pet dogs, lying dead beside her. Then to a familiar household utensil in the hands of parties unknown. Then suspicion clusters around one of the strangest implements of murder ever devised by a mystery writer. All is solved, after some shrewd but unexciting work, by the Catalyst Club, a band of amateur criminologists who hold meetings at night in Golden Gate Park, San Francisco.

The tale is good going, but we need Mr. Dyer back with an Oppenheim plot bolstered by plans, data and diagrams.

A. E. Slaymaker Rites Set Today; U. S. Worker

Funeral services for Alexander E. Slaymaker, 79, of Alexandria, Va., who died Monday at Emergency Hospital, will be conducted at 4 p. m. today at the Wheatley funeral home, in Alexandria, by the Rev. William B. McIlwaine, jr., pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church. Burial will be in the Presbyterian Cemetery.

Mr. Slaymaker is survived by three cousins, Miss Elizabeth Slaymaker and Miss Elizabeth Whitmer, of Alexandria, and William Slaymaker, of Washington. The last 17 years he had been employed in the United States Shipping Board in Washington. He was a son of the late Alexander and Mary Slaymaker and was born in Alexandria.

Maryland University Branches Honor Byrd

Faculty and staff members of the Baltimore and College Park branches of the University of Maryland last night gave a reception in honor of H. C. (Curly) Byrd, new president of the university. It was held in Ritchie Gymnasium and 850 persons attended.

Dr. Ernest N. Cory, State entomologist and head of the entomology department of the university, introduced President Byrd. Evelyn Byrd, the latter's daughter, acted as hostess. Others in the receiving line were Mrs. Harry Holzapsel, wife of a member of the board of regents; Mr. and Mrs. John E. Raine, Mr. and Mrs. J. Milton Patterson and Mr. and Mrs. Hay Nuttle.

Husband Shoots Pests; Wife Is Given Divorce

Chicago, April 21 (AP).—Flies and mosquitoes bothered Rudolph Tompach, 24, when he tried to sleep nights.

So, Tompach's wife testified in court today:

He shot the pests off the walls and ceiling with a silenced pistol.

"He was a gun collector," the wife said. "He had about 12 of them scattered around the house, but the one he used for flies he kept underneath the bed. The place is full of holes."

Judge Rudolph Desort agreed the holes were grounds for divorce.

England Faces New Tea Taxes To Buy Arms

Budget Seeks High Levy on Incomes Also; Commons Critical.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 21.—The British taxpayer will have to dig a little deeper into his pocket to pay his income tax and buy his tea, the chancellor of the exchequer told the House of Commons today.

(The current standard income tax is four shillings and six pence to the pound, or roughly $1.12.)

A 1936-7 budget expanded by military expenditures for defense would put the government "in the red" without the addition of levies on incomes and tea as well as a surtax on lager beer imported from non-empire countries, Neville Chamberlain advised a critical chamber.

To Continue Special Levy.

Moreover, he said, duties on key industries, which were to have expired this year, would have to be continued ten years more.

The income tax, he said, would be raised 3 pence a pound (about .823 per cent. (The dollar was quoted in the London foreign exchange market today at 4.94 1-16 to the pound.) The tax on tea will be increased immediately 2 pence (4 cents) a pound; it applies to both empire and foreign tea.

However, the income tax exemption for married persons will be raised from £170 ($850) to £180 ($900) and the exemption for children from £50 to £60.

Lager beer from non-empire countries will be taxed a pound sterling a barrel.

The chancellor estimated Great Britain would have to produce £797,897,000, including at least £20,000,000 for additional defense purposes, for expenditures in the 1936-37 fiscal year.

"Budget of Shattered Hopes."

Calling the tax boost a "bitter disappointment," the chancellor immediately was set upon by the opposition. Clement Atlee, labor leader, called his budget one "which ultimately leads to war."

Sir Archibald Sinclair characterized it as "a budget of shattered hopes. The financial outlook today is graver than at any time since 1931."

The chancellor estimated the government would benefit by £12,000,000 from the increased income tax and £3,500,000 from the jump in the tax on tea.

He estimated he would balance the nation's books with a surplus of £484,000 with the increased levies, on an income of £798,381,000 from the usual sources plus the fresh revenue.

He reminded the nation that since the rearmament program was "in the interests of all, it is only fair that all should contribute toward it."

Asks "New Sacrifices."

"At the outset of this new financial year," he added, "apart from the complications of the European situation, there were prospects of a full continuance of the returning tide of prosperity. But that hope has been deferred. Instead, I've had to ask for new sacrifices."

His report related that the government operated at a profit of £2,941,000 last year, but that without new revenues it would have a deficit of £21,291,000 in the next 12 months.

The government intended, he disclosed, to close a loophole for the avoidance of taxes through the transfer of property to persons abroad by introducing new regulatory resolutions in Parliament.

The British national debt at the close of the fiscal year was fixed at £7,796,056,000.

By the Associated Press.

When Chamberlain announced yesterday that Great Britain closed her fiscal year with a surplus of $14,700,000, he took no notice of the $582,803,306 which the British government has defaulted in war debts to the United States since June, 1934.

House Unit Votes Tax Bill

bution of dividends to companies within an interlocking corporate group. Thus a wholly owned subsidiary might be fully taxed, even though it paid all of its dividends to a parent company higher up.

Dropped into the hopper by Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, the new draft completed by a subcommittee headed by Representative Samuel B. Hill (Democrat), of Washington, will be called up for House consideration tomorrow. At the same time, hearings will get under way on this bill as a base, in the Senate Finance Committee. Under a 16-hour debate agreement, the House expects to complete consideration by the end of this week, but a month's rocy road appeared to lie between the measure and final enactment by both Houses of Congress. Probabilities are it will be altered in major particulars before it reaches the end of that road.

Only one Democrat—Representative Arthur P. Lamneck, of Ohio—voted "no" at yesterdays Ways and Means Committee meeting. His vote was cast by proxy. Seven Republican members of the committee also cast "no" ballots.

Other highlight provisions of the bill are:

Delays for six months the proposed repeal of the capital stock and excess profits tax, with the capital stock tax reduced from $1.40 to 70 cents per $1,000 of declared value of capital stock. Claimed to add $83,000,000 to bill's total yield.

Effect on Debt-Ridden.

A flat rate tax of 22½ per cent is applied to so-called debt-ridden corporations under contract not to pay out dividends pending liquidation of the debt. The flat rate would apply to all corporate taxable net earnings used for debt discharge. Corporations saddled with large indebtedness but not having such contracts also could use the 22½ per cent flat rate, but must spread these tax credits over a period of at least five years.

Foreign corporations having an office in this country also could apply the 22½ per cent rate on earnings derived from domestic sources, as could foreign banks—the latter only on income derived from other than banking business in this country.

A special flat rate of 15 per cent could be claimed by domestic banks, trust companies, corporations in receivership, foreign and domestic insurance companies, foreign corporations not having an office in this country, and foreign banks' income strictly from their banking business.

Non-resident aliens could apply a special 10 per cent flat tax on all income derived from United States sources.

A $35,000,000 refund from taxes imposed on floor stocks on hand when the AAA was invalidated, and refund of taxes levied against processed commodities, where they were either exported or sold to tax-exempt institutions.

Committee members said they had picked up some $4,000,000 of revenue through changing the laws relating to distribution liquidation. As a result of this change, it was claimed that the individual on income received from liquidation would have to pay less taxes than under present capital gains levies. Members claimed the provision would encourage liquidation of certain trusts kept intact for tax purposes.

The bill followed in the main suggestions outlined by the President in a message to Congress exactly seven weeks ago. Efforts to soften the iron-clad operation of the principles outlined by the President has kept the Hill sub-committee in almost daily session, and resulted in some deviation from the President's views.

Only on one point was the President flatly rebuffed. He had asked imposition of some $221,000,000 in modified processing taxes, and this the Ways and Means Committee refused to have anything to do with. The Administration is expected to carry this fight to the Senate.

Much of the bulky document introduced in the House was devoted to restatement of continued provisions of the present law. The new income tax provisions are applicable to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1935.

Schedules Are Definite.

The bill for the first time has reduced to definite schedules prior formulae used for computing the tax on companies in the two principal taxable income groups—concerns earning less than $10,000, and those profiting in excess of that amount.

In addition, an intermediate formula is provided, offering some degree of preference to companies earning between $10,000 and $40,000. This would permit the use of both the schedules for the $10,000 corporations and those earning in excess of that amount.

The intermediate formula provides as follows:

"If the adjusted net income is more than $10,000 and less than $40,000 the tax shall be computed by adding:

"(a) A tax computed under schedule I—For such purpose the percentage which the undistributed net income is of the adjusted net income shall be ascertained by subtracting from the adjusted net income the dividend credit and a tax determined under schedule II or IIA; and

"(b) A tax upon the amount of the adjusted net income in excess of $10,000 at the rate which would be applied if the tax upon the entire adjusted net income were being computed under schedule II. For such purpose the percentage which the undistributed net income is of the adjusted net income shall be ascertained by subtracting from the adjusted net income the dividend credit and a tax determined under schedule II or IIA."

This formula operates to tax that portion of corporate net income below $10,000 under the lower schedule, and the part in excess of that amount under the higher schedule.

A thoroughgoing effort is made to plug the loophole which might enable a corporation to avoid the undistributed net income tax through distribution of stock dividends and rights.

A specific prohibition on this form of tax avoidance is provided as follows: "If any part of a distribution (including stock dividends and stock rights) is not a taxable dividend in the hands of such of the shareholders as are subject to taxation under this title for the period in which the distribution is made, no dividend credit shall be allowed with respect to such part."

To further stop such leakage, restrictions are placed on a variety of types of dividend payments, such as dividend payments in kind, obligations or promissory notes.

In another provision, the committee attempted to prevent the pyramiding of dividends within intercorporate structures to escape taxation. This would apply to wholly owned companies deriving 80 per cent of income from other concerns. Some members viewed this as an attempt as well to discourage large holding company structures, where smaller subsidiaries through dividends provide income for larger units in the group. In the main, credits would be granted to such subsidiaries only if dividends are paid out to taxable sources or non-taxable institutions.

Where complete exemption from the proposed corporate tax is provided, organizations exempt from taxation under the present law are carried over into the new. These include labor organizations, agricultural and horticultural organizations, mutual savings banks without capital stock represented by shares, and a variety of charitable and co-operative associations.

Don't Mention It.

Small Papers' Problems Told To Publishers

Pennsylvanian Says Readers Chiefly Interested in Politics, Laws.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 21.—John L. Stewart, Pennsylvania publisher, declared today at the opening session of the American Newspaper Publishers' annual convention that because of the vital effect which national politics and legislation have on the average man the small town paper has taken on a national outlook.

Today's session was devoted entirely to the problems of newspapers which have a circulation of less than 50,000. About 300 of the 500 publishers registered for the three-day convention attended the meeting.

"Today," said Stewart, who is editor and publisher of the Beaver Falls, Pa., News-Tribune and the Washington, Pa., Observer and Reporter, "as we look out on the world of our own circle we find the workers on the streets and highways on many public projects with their minds centered on Washington and not on local affairs.

Bureaus Greatest Sources.

"The sources of the greatest news—from a political standpoint—are the various bureaus which have been set up by Federal and State authorities.

"Thus our local situation has taken on a national environment. It makes for an influence which cannot be escaped and certainly cannot be ignored. Each community is a cross-section of the entire country. What happens in our town now is happening in every other in much the same way.

"As interpreters of the news and in asserting our editorial influence we have taken on a national outlook rather than a strictly local one; and at no time, perhaps, in journalism has the editorial column in the small newspaper become so important to reader interest. In making over our country we must make over our newspapers."

The publishers discussed virtually every phase of newspaper production, including advertising, circulation, photography, engraving, sydnicates and mechanical problems. They also devoted considerable time to the relation of radio to the newspaper.

Declares Radio Helpful.

J. S. Gray, of the Monroe, Mich., News and president of the Inland Daily Press Association, declared that radio broadcasts of news features helped rather than hindered newspaper sales.

"Speeches delivered over the radio increase the interest of newspaper readers," he said. "They want to see the text to confirm their oral record."

Walter W. Krebs, of the Johnstown, Pa., Tribune, said all newspapers should own their own radio stations. During the five days his plant was disabled by the flood, he stated, his paper broadcast over its own station the hour-by-hour developments.

The convention tomorrow will consider three questions: Freedom of the press, radio and newsboys.

Control Over Films Demanded by Pope

Vatican City, April 21 (AP).—Control of motion-picture production was urged today by Pope Pius in an emphatic address to several hundred delegates attending the international convention of movie and press writers.

His Holiness said:

"Control is one of the great needs, one of the great necessities for keeping moving-picture production in lines where it ought to remain—under pain of enormous guilt."

Making one of the longest speeches he has delivered in recent years, Pope Pius said this control should be just, neither too severe nor too indulgent.

He called bad movies "a real insult to all that's beautiful, delicate and honorable in souls, particularly young souls," and urged independent movie criticism divorced from producing companies.

"The cinema would not be what it is today," he said, "if motion-picture press criticism had, from the beginning, fulfilled its duties according to virtue, truth and justice."

Warm Weather Spurs Summer Night-Life Plans

By Chanticleer.

Another week or two of warm weather, and the umbrellas will be blooming 'way out thar on the Marlboro pike in the Maryland Club Gardens terrace.

Lawns are getting their first trimming, the shrubbery pruned, the pool its first scouring. The tentative date for opening of the open-air season is set for late May. All depends on when summer really decides to stay put.

That walnut shell and pea game, famous gambling device, is being played this week right on the Shoreham's ballroom floor by Tom Osborne, who is expected to take over Houdini's toga before he's many years older. But Tom, of course, just works the old shell game for your personal amusement. Tck, tck! No gambling. Osborne is a native of Maryland, so they say, and is regarded highly in the magic inner sanctum. Claymo is at the Shoreham, too, this week. He models faces you recognize, with breath-taking speed. And if you're very good he may do a likenes of your best girl. Lola and Andre dance. Charley Mayer sings—and Barnes plays.

The Mayan room at the Madrillon is going strong on wedding parties this week. They may even tag it the "Brides' Room." Four colorful parties were staged last Saturday in Host Peter Borras's attractive place—with Palon and Brusiloff, noon or night as the case might be, providing music in the spirit. Gina and Giano dance, Priscilla Bennett sings.

Warm weather may bring a swan song to some of the city's supper clubs, but it's just beginning, folks, at the Dude Ranch, where warm breezes and cool stars greet you after a stuffy day in town. On the floor this week are Dixie Dyer in new vocal moods indigo; Billy Mason's Revue with Sherry Tyler, hula hula interpreter; Tinker and Shallot, ballroom specialties, and Shallot in acrobatic and eccentric steps.

They're still talking about the size of the Tom Collins being dispensed at the Embassy Tap Room. And is this getting to be Tom Collins weather, or it it?

Our ear-to-the-ground department reports that Brinkley's is seriously considering a floor show.

Mil Christopher, who again proves the hand is quicker than the eye in his nightly appearances at the Mayfair Cafe of All Nations, observes that the Washingtonian is keenly interested in mind reading, mental telepathy and kindred phenomenon. Invariably the Mayfair guest, after being duly baffled, asks Christopher "Can you tell my fortune?" And Milbourne does the best he can in psychic shenanigans. Jack Campbell, at the miniature piano, plays your favorites, and Roy Kiser sings the lyrics.

Cooling systems. Ah, yes, we'll be hearing a lot of them now. The Hi-Hat, for example. That's the place where "Ward 8" is going strong. You're right, "Ward 8" is a fancy beverage . . . Kitty Simons has fully recovered from her cold and everybody's happy around the Ambassador.

The Tolmacks, a novelty show packed with surprises, is No. 1 act at the Lotus this week. Comes all the way from the West Coast. And there's also Manno and Stafford, ballroom team, and Dorothy Hoghton, of the twinkling toes and sparkling personality—direct from Miami. Judy Ellington sings the lyrics to Bill Ellington's tunes.

It's a sort of League of Nations at the Russian Troika. Just seems that distinguished foreign visitors always visit Helen Hamilton's place before leaving town. A glance at the Troika's mailing list reminds you of a world tour—with names from France, Italy, Egypt, Denmark, Brazil, South Africa and a dozen other far-flung countries registered. And they say that wherever you may be from—someone at the Troika will be able to converse with you.

On the Floors of the Supper Clubs This Week

On the Air Today

H. V. Kaltenborn, Columbia's commentator on topical events, yesterday observed the fifteenth anniversary of his first radio talk. It was quite an event, that broadcast back in 1921. Kaltenborn attended a dinner of the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce, thence to Newark for the radio talk. He had explained, before leaving the dinner, just how the novel business of bringing his voice back to the gathering would be accomplished.

In 15 years of broadcasting, Kaltenborn naturally has seen radio advance out of its swaddling clothes into full fledged young manhood. Some of his impressions follow:

"When I began broadcasting, my earphone listeners were thrilled just because they heard something. I have 1,000 early fan letters with the phrase 'Your voice came in clear as a bell.' They were grateful for everything and anything that came over the air.

"People were, and are, much more easily excited by what they hear than by what they read.

"Accustomed to extemporaneous platform speech, it never occurred to me to write a script, yet the concentration and effort required to keep on talking for 30 minutes before an unresponsive microphone left me perspiring and exhausted. (Fifteen-minute periods for talk or music didn't become common until after the middle twenties.) A momentary break in the continuity of thought or the failure of the right word to present itself instantly created the same feeling of sickening helplessness that comes to a schoolboy who forgets his lines in a speech or a play.

"In those early days there were no networks of high power—but the absence of interfering stations made it possible to cover wide areas. I had regular listeners in Alaska, England and South America.

"The most notable advance in broadcasting, apart from technical development, is increasing respect for free speech on the air."

U. S. Seizes 3 In Raid, Last Of Bandit Gang

Tourist Camp Near Kansas City Scene of Gunfight With O'Malley Aids.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, April 21.—The end of the Walter (Irish) O'Malley gang of bank robbers was claimed by State and Federal officers tonight after an early morning roadhouse gunfight that ended in the capture of two men and a woman.

A Federal agent whose name was withheld was wounded as officers and one of the captured men sent more than 400 shots through flimsy walls of a tourist cabin hideout near Hickman Hills.

Wounded three times, Clarence Sparger, 32, crept from the cabin and surrendered.

Officers found a woman inside who said she was his wife, Lillian Juanita Sparger, 28. In the attic of a nearby building they captured John Langdon, alias Langan, 35, sought for questioning in the wounding of a Kansas officer.

"Sparger is positively a member of the O'Malley gang," said W. A. Smith, head of the Department of Justice Bureau here. "Langdon probably was associated with the O'Malley gangsters on the outside."

O'Malley was arrested here a year ago. He is serving an Illinois prison sentence for the kidnaping of aged August Luer, Alton, Ill., banker.

Acting on a "tip," a party of 15 officers surrounded the tourist cabin early today and ordered the occupants to surrender.

Sparger, they said, responded with revolver shots and the officers opened fire.

Smith said Sparger is wanted in connection with a bank robbery at Neosho, Mo., March 2, 1935. Langdon, he said, once was accused of a Springfield, Mo., bank hold-up and both men were named by Charles (Bad Eye) Abrogast as his companions in an attempt to rob a Blythedale, Mo., bank in 1934.

Smith said names of the two entered the investigation of the gangland slaying of Vivian Chase, indicted Luer kidnaper and one-time feminine public enemy No. 1. Her body was found huddled in the back seat of an abandoned automobile here several months ago.

Culbertson on Bridge

Entry Trouble.

"Entry trouble" is one of the most prevalent of all bridge maladies and is responsible for the painful death of many a contract. It is particularly vicious because it is so difficult to anticipate and guard against in the bidding. Often a perfectly legitimate contract goes on the rocks for lack of one vital entry.

At other times the trouble is more apparent than real. Entries not always are aces and kings; not always plainly visible. If a desperate need exists a declarer must go to great lengths to discover an entry that may be lurking in the bushes.

The penurious policy of conserving a high card, when to do so cost him an entry in the dummy, accounted for the declarer's defeat in the hand shown below:

South, dealer.

NORTH
♠ Q 10 4
♥ 7 6 3 2

WEST
♠ J 8 6 5 2
♥ Q 9 5 4

EAST
♠ A 3
♥ J 10 5
♦ K 6 4

SOUTH
♠ K 9 7
♥ A K
♦ A J 10 9 8
♣ A K 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 no trp	Pass	3 no trp (final bid)

South's opening bid probably was motivated by the fact that he considered himself a player far superior to his partner. His play of the contract did not verify this opinion. North's raise was slightly shaded; he, too, probably admired South's game.

West opened the fourth highest spade, dummy played low, and East put up the ace. Now, on the very first trick, declarer made a fatal error—he followed with a low spade. East, after serious consideration of the bidding, made the good return of the heart jack. Declarer won and led the ace and another diamond. But he now was playing a lost cause. West ducked the second diamond, East won with the king and continued hearts. When the third round of diamonds lost to West's queen, two good hearts promptly were cashed and the contract was down one trick.

Had South's excellent opinion of himself (as indicated by his unorthodox two no trump opening bid) been warranted he would have brought home not eight but ten tricks! The king of spades should have been thrown on East's ace with neatness and dispatch. It was apparent that if East should shift to hearts, two entries in the dummy would be necessary to establish the diamond suit before both heart stoppers were removed. In other words, South could not afford to give up two diamond tricks, and the only logical method of establishing the suit with one trick loss was to lead twice from the dummy, finessing each time in the closed hand.

With the king of spades out of the way South could have finessed dummy's ten for one of those vital entries. As a matter of fact there would have been only a slight risk in this procedure, since East hardly would have put up the ace, holding the jack as well.

With the favorable adverse lay of diamonds the proper method of play would have given South two spade, two heart, four diamond and two club tricks.

Rural Aid Shows Increase in April

College Park, Md., April 21 (AP).—E. I. Oswald, State director of the rural rehabilitation division, reported a rapid increase today in the number of rural families aided.

He said 76 families had been given help up to April 11, and that 240 cases were pending. The aid consisted of loans from funds of the Resettlement Administration.

The loans were made to farm owners, tenants, share croppers and farm laborers.

Farm debt adjustment is still an important phase of the rehabilitation work, Oswald said. Many farmers, facing foreclosure, had been refinanced on a more liberal basis. On April 11, there were 94 such cases that had been adjusted, he said.

French Decree Bars U. S. Customs Brokers

Paris, April 21 (AP).—American shipping and express companies were hit by a Government decree today prohibiting foreign companies or individuals from acting as customs brokers in France unless their own countries accord this right to Frenchmen.

American businessmen said that, inasmuch as the United States allows no foreigners to act as customs brokers, the decree would divert lucrative business from American shipping and express companies to French concerns.

Rohwer, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine; P. I. Taylor, Bureau of Reclamation; Dr. L. L. Williams, Public Health, and Abel Wolman, water resources committee.

Indian Program Held.

A large group of Government workers witnessed a novel exhibition of Indian activities in the National Museum Auditorium on Monday. Sixteen Hopi Indians presented a number of ceremonial dances and songs. Specimens of their arts and crafts—weaving, pottery and silver-smithy—were shown.

Dan P. Mularkey (C), Reconstruction Finance Corporation, calls on the 2,500 Floridians in Washington to attend to their absentee registration for the June primaries at the Absentee Voters Bureau, District National Bank Building. This office is open until 10:30 p. m. daily.

40-Hour Week Favored.

Letters on the five-day proposal are pouring in and the percentage is high in favor of the Ramspeck 5-day 40-hour plan. Here is a good exampler today:

"It is not unnatural or unreasonable for an individual to favor what is best for him or her. Thus, in connection with the 5-day plan, self interest leads me to assume a partial attitude toward the 5-day week that retains the present hours.

"Retention of the present hours will not interrupt the class schedules of those of us who study after the day's work is done.

"Since most of the Government work is routine and monotonous, it is at least questionable whether lengthening the working day will increase efficiency or the output of the employes.

"Of course the beneficial effects of a 5-day week are well known to Government workers. I am so eager to see Government employes placed on a 5-day schedule—not only for the welfare of the employes, but also as an example to private business—that, as a last alternative, I should be willing to accept the Rampspeck 40-hour plan. In that event, I suggest that the present work schedule be amended in only one respect—shift the morning hour so that work begins one hour earlier for all employes, say from 8 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. This arrangement will permit those who study in the evening to continue their studies without interruption and those who have other diversions will not be inconvenienced—Melvin L. Winson" (P), General Accounting Office.

How a Baby GROWS

By Dr. Arnold Gesell, M. D.

INFANT EYES—Today's pictures are the fifth set of photographs, prepared under the direction of Dr. Gesell, showing the development of a growing baby's eyes and the gradual co-ordination of the eyes with other parts of the body. In the pictures below, the baby, at 32 weeks of age, catches a glimpse of himself in a mirror and is successful in the use of his arms and legs to bring about a face-to-face inspection . . . of himself. TOMORROW: The Prenatal Hand.

Hull, Wife Give Dinner For Gomez

Ambassador to Entertain Today for Visitors From Cuba.

The Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson y Jauregui, will give a reception this afternoon at the embassy in honor of the President-elect of Cuba and Senora de Gomez, who arrived in Washington yesterday afternoon from California and were entertained at dinner last evening by the Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull.

This evening Senor and Senora de Gomez will be honor guests at a dinner given by the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles at Oxon Hill, their country estate in Maryland overlooking the Potomac. The President-elect will be the guest of honor at a luncheon today given by members of the governing board of the Pan-American Union.

The President-elect and his party were to have been entertained at the White House, but, due to the cancellation of all entertaining by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt because of the death of Col. Louis McHenry Howe, the dinner last evening was given by Secretary and Mrs. Hull.

The President-elect and Senora de Gomez were accompanied by their three daughters, Senorita Serafina de Gomez, Senorita Marguerita de Gomez and Senorita Grociela de Gomez, and by Senor de Gomez's brother-in-law, Senor Dr. Julio Morales Coello, Undersecretary of the State of Cuba, and the President-elect's secretary, Senor Dr. Francisco Arango Romero.

The party arrived in Washington at 4:40 yesterday afternoon and was met by the Ambassador of Cuba, members of the embassy staff and officials of the State Department. They plan to leave for New York tomorrow.

Among the guests at the dinner given by Secretary and Mrs. Hull last night in addition to the members of the President-elect's party, were the Ambassador of Cuba, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, Mrs. William E. Borah, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, Representative and Mrs. Luther A. Johnson, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Welles, the Director General of the Pan-American Union, Dr. L. S. Rowe; Miss Mabel T. Boardman, and the Chief of Protocol and Mrs. Southgate.

Claudia L. Kyle Becomes Bride Of C. E. Brush

Miss Claudia Lois Kyle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Kyle, 14 West Lenox street, Chevy Chase, last night became the bride of Lieut. Charles E. Brush, United States Coast Guard, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Brush, of Portland, Me. The Episcopal ring ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock in All Saints Church, Chevy Chase, by the Rev. Dr. Henry Teller Cocke, rector.

The bride, whose father gave her in marriage, wore a gown of white satin, made on simple lines, with full sleeves gathered into a band at the wrist; the skirt falling in a long train and a Queen Anne collar of old rose point lace the only trimming. Her tulle veil was gathered to a cap with pleating framing the face, and held in place with a wreath of orange blossoms. The round bouquet was of white roses, lilies of the valley and sweet peas.

Her matron of honor and only attendant was Mrs. George Campbell, of New York City, who was one of her sorority sisters in the Kappa Delta Sorority at George Washington University. Mrs. Campbell wore pink chiffon, with a hat of the same material, and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of spring flowers.

The best man was Mr. John Brush, of Portland, a brother of the bridegroom. Ushers included Mr. Howard Kinzer, of Chicago, a cousin of the bride; Mr. Paul Tomalin, Mr. George Clendaniel and Mr. George Fonger, all of this city. A small reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the wedding.

The bridal couple will sail from New York today for a short cruise of Cuba, and after their wedding trip will live in Washington.

Guests at the wedding from out of town included Mr. and Mrs. Brush, of Portland, parents of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Failyer, of Manhattan, Kans., grandparents of the bride, and Miss Lois Failyer, of Davenport, Iowa, her aunt.

Luncheon of 73 Club Scheduled for Today

Mrs. David Kushner will present original readings and Mr. John Marville, bass barytone, will sing today at the last regular monthly luncheon of the 73 Club to be held in the large ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel.

Guests of honor will be Mrs. Pierce Butler, wife of Justice Butler, and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture.

The Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

Word has been received in Washington of the engagement of Miss Virginia Dawes, adopted daughter of the former Vice President and Mrs. Charles G. Dawes, whom Washington remembers as a schoolgirl during the Coolidge Administration, to Mr. Richard Thompson Cragg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl J. Cragg, of Evanston, Ill.

The engagement, it is said, is the result of a childhood romance, for when Vice President and Mrs. Dawes were in Evanston in the days before he was in public office, their tiny foster daughter, Virginia, and the tall Dick Cragg were inseparable chums.

In Washington, Virginia Dawes is remembered as a bright-eyed little girl taking a shy but delighted part in Mrs. Dawes' afternoon teas. She sat primly in a little chair while the guests chatted. When a little older she attended the subdeb parties and was very popular. It was a matter of amusement in the Dawes family that when Virginia went Christmas shopping an underslung pipe for father was on her list.

It is safe to venture that when Virginia Dawes is married "Melody in A," by Charles G. Dawes, will be among the musical numbers. When the former Vice President became Ambassador of the United States to the Court of St. James, Virginia was presented at court and was a leader in the younger American set in London.

Time and space are given due consideration at the Corcoran Gallery of Art each day at noon, when all members of the staff, from Director C. Powell Minnegerode, and his secretary, Miss Emily Millard, to the watchmen, suspend office work for a brief second to look out of the window for the ball on top of the flagpole of the State, War and Navy Building to fall exactly on the stroke of noon. Mr. Herndon Phillips, of the staff, sets the official gallery clock at the split second and then activities in the art center go forward—on time to the dot.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Henry B. Wilson are guests of their son-in-law and daughter, former Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, at Belmont Plantations, their spacious country estate near Leesburg, Va. The Wilsons' return is welcomed in Washington, where they have played important social and official parts for the last quarter of a century.

To the Navy, Admiral Wilson has added distinction in that he is a member of the famous "Annapolis Class of '81," which included so many who won success and high rank in after life. In this class were the late Maj. Gen. George Barnett, World War commandant of the United States Marine Corps; the late Secretary John W. Weeks, and former Senator Weller, of Maryland.

The admiral was a strict disciplinarian in his service years. A story is told that one day when he was captain, he was served some soup in his quarters. It was not to his taste so he sent it back with instructions to the cook to drink not only that plateful but all he had made as well. The captain's soup was much more palatable the next day.

Patricia Hurley, daughter of former Secretary and Mrs. Hurley, resembles her mother greatly. Looking at Patricia, it is easy to recall the appearance of the schoolgirl Ruth Wilson, tall and slender, with two golden braids down her back. She would be coasting down S street hill, or taking part in Beaux Arts balls. Then came her debut and her marriage. The Hurleys were in Oklahoma for years after their marriage until he entered official life first as Assistant Secretary of War and then as Secretary, when Mrs. Hurley became one of the youngest Cabinet hostesses in the history of Washington.

Wayside Picnics to Precede Maryland Hunt Cup Race

Saturday's Classic in Worthington Valley to Attract Horse Lovers of East; Warrenton Race to Be Held Following Week.

By Francesca McKenney.

Members of Capital society who have been spending Saturdays driving to Middleburg, Fairfax and other nearby hunting sections since the racing season started will take picnic luncheons along this Saturday to eat en route to the Maryland Hunt Cup race in Worthington Valley, near Baltimore. This point-to-point race is one of the outstanding in the country, and horse lovers from New York, Pittsburgh, Washington and Virginia are always on hand.

The following Saturday the point-to-point season for Washington will be brought to a close with the Warrenton Gold Cup race at Broadview, the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Alex B. Hagner.

The countrysides of Maryland and Virginia are ideal for hunting and point-to-point races, and the steeply sloping hills overlooking the miles of rolling country make a perfect grand stand for the thousands of spectators.

Buffet Lunch to Precede Race.

Preceding the race, Mr. and Mrs. Hagner will entertain at a large buffet luncheon in the marquis.

Others who will entertain at luncheon before the Warrenton Gold Cup are Mr. and Mrs. Amory S. Carhart, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Winmill and Mr. and Mrs. George Cutting.

Following the five races, starting at 2:30 and lasting until about 5 o'clock, will be many cocktail parties. One of the largest will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Winmill, who entertain every year.

That evening the members of the Gold Cup Association will entertain at a dinner dance at the North Wales Country Club, one of the most beautiful in this part of the country, which was formerly a private estate.

The Gold Cup race was held over the Broadview course 20 years ago, when the estate was owned by Mr. William Wilbur. The scene of this race later was transferred to Mr. and Mrs. Winmill's property and was returned to Broadview after it came into the possession of Mr. and Mrs. Hagner.

Indigo Is Favorite.

Last year's winner, Indigo, with Burley Cocks up, owned by Mr. John M. Schiff, is expected to be the winner again over this gruelling 4-mile timber course, which is open to 4-year-olds and up. The Gold Cup will become the property of the owner winning it three times, and the winner of each year's race receives a silver plate. All riders in this race must be amateurs holding certificates from the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association, or those eligible for the same, in racing colors, or officers of the Army and Navy.

Many smaller events of interest to turf enthusiasts will precede the famous Warrenton "Gold Cup." The first is the gymkhana to be staged Monday for the benefit of the Virginia Tuberculosis Association. It will consist of potato races, thread and needle contests, and judging of pets of children. A ride on a tally-ho coach drawn by four ponies will be one of the attractions.

Mrs. William Doeller and Mr. Carhart, who, with Miss Charlotte Noland, is joint M. F. H. of the Warrenton Hunt, are among the judges and Mr. Howard Fair, son-in-law of the pianist, Josef Hofmann, will be ringmaster.

An association to found a perpetual memorial to the late John Barton Payne has been organized to establish a fund of $10,000 for a large silver cup and tray and two silver bowls. Contestants for the cup must be riders in the Corinthian class in full hunting costume.

The cup, to be retained for one year, will be contested for each succeeding year in the Warrenton Horse Show. The small silver bowls will become the permanent property of the winners and will be replaced each year with new bowls donated by the club.

Misses Harcourt Are Hostesses

Talented English Artists Entertain Friends at Cocktail Party.

The talented young English portrait artists, the Misses Anne and Aletha Harcourt, who have painted many distinguished persons during their stay here, entertained at a cocktail party yesterday in their apartment on Twentieth street. The Misses Harcourt, who made Washington their last stop on a trip around the world, plan to leave some time next month to return to England.

Members of the British Embassy staff present yesterday included the newly arrived Counselor of the British Embassy and his blonde wife, Mrs. Mallet; the First Secretary, Mr. Philip Broadmead; Miss Irene Boyle, whose portrait the Misses Harcourt have just completed, and the Commercial Secretary and Mrs. Heywood. Maj. and Mrs. Heywood will go with their children next month on a four months' leave, most of which they will spend in England.

Diplomats were in the majority at yesterday's party. From the French Embassy came the Third Secretary and Mme. Saint, who are planning a trip by motor to California this summer; Countess Roberti, wife of the Secretary of the Italian Embassy, was there, wearing a tweed suit and sable scarf. Mr. Edward Weintal, Attache of the Polish Embassy, who leaves today for a stay of several days in New York, came with another Attache of the Embassy, Mr. Michal Budny.

Others present were Mlle. Nora de With, daughter of the Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. de With, with her cousin, Mlle. Pauline Schimmelpennick, who will visit for a month at the Legation before returning to her home in Holland; Mr. Denis Smith, correspondent of the London Post, whose wife, Jane Trenholme, is making such a success as a member of the cast of "Victoria Regina," and Baron Mario Bucovich, the Italian photographer. Baron Bucovich has had so many orders for photographs, including one from Mrs. Roosevelt, he has extended his stay here three weeks.

Miss Harper to Be Wed.

Mrs. Harry F. Harper, 3616 Connecticut avenue, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Glenn Harper, to Mr. Courtland Lee Warfield, son of Dr. and Mrs. Edgar Warfield, of Alexandria. The wedding will take place in June.

Alabama Group Of D.A.R. Feted At Dinner Here

Washington Woman Heads Committee Sponsoring Entertainment.

The Alabama delegates to the D. A. R. Congress last night held a dinner in the Jefferson room of the Mayflower Hotel. Mrs. B. Y. Martin, a member of the Alabama D. A. R., now a resident of Washington, was in charge of the dinner, assisted by Mrs. C. M. Ward and Mrs. Wallace Collins, both former Alabamans.

Quantities of red and white peonies, sent from the gardens of Mrs. Val Taylor, Alabama State regent, whose home is in Uniontown, were used on the tables, and salted nuts from her pecan grove were in little red and white nut cups. Mrs. Taylor presided at the dinner, which was attended by 75 guests.

Vera Neely Ross, contralto, an artist of Washington and New York, presented the musical program following the dinner, accompanied by Annie Laurie Martin, of Alabama. Mrs. W. A. Becker, president general of the D. A. R., and the other National officers were guests of honor. Among them was Mrs. Zebulon Judd, of Alabama, vice president general. Miss Grace Bradley, winner of the good citizenship award in Alabama, also was an honored guest.

Illinois delegates to the D. A. R. Congress will be guests at a tea, at which Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, wife of Senator Lewis, of Illinois, is entertaining this afternoon at the Sulgrave Club, from 4:30 to 5:30. Mrs. Samuel Campbell, Illinois State agent, will be guest of honor. The Illinois delegation, one of the largest of the convention, includes 150 women. Mrs. Lewis also has invited the wives of members of the Congressional delegation from Illinois and a few Illinois friends residing in Washington. About 250 will be present.

The board of governors of the Woman's National Democratic Club will entertain at tea at the club house, 1526 New Hampshire avenue, on Friday afternoon from 4:30 to 6 o'clock in honor of the delegates to the D. A. R. conference.

Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, president of the club, will receive the guests. Assisting her and pouring will be Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler, Mrs. Bennet Champ Clark, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. Blair Bannister, Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin, Mrs. David Tucker Brown, Mrs. Basil Manly, Mrs. Frank S. Bright, Mrs. Rosa May Mulcare, Mrs. Samuel Major, Mrs. Lucile Cary Lowery, Mrs. James Gavin Field, Mrs. Thomas Walker Page and Miss Eleanor Connolly.

Mrs. William Henry Belk, State regent of the North Carolina D. A. R., and other State officers, will be guests of honor and will receive with the president and board of governors of the North Carolina State Society tonight at a reception at the Shoreham Hotel. The society's annual business meeting and election of officers will precede the reception.

Through the State regent of Illinois, Mrs. Samuel James Campbell, all delegates from her State have been invited to attend the dance and card party being given tonight at the Roosevelt Hotel by the Illinois State Society.

Mr., Mrs. Tietjens On Bermuda Trip

To Be at Home at Dupont Circle on Return.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman O. Tietjens, now on their wedding trip to Bermuda, will be at home in the Dupont Circle Apartments on their return.

Mrs. Tietjens is the former Miss Lucretia Norvell Larkin, daughter of Mrs. William Peyton Larkin and the late Mr. Larkin. Her marriage to Mr. Tietjens, son of Mr. O. P. Tietjens and the late Mrs. Tietjens, of Napoleon, Ohio, took place last Saturday at Trinity Episcopal Church in Manassas, Va., with the Rev. A. Stuart Gibson officiating. Miss Maude Larkin, a sister of the bride, and Mr. Joseph J. O'Connell, jr., of Saranac Lake, N. Y., were the only attendants.

Mr. Tietjens, a graduate of Brown University, received his degree in law at the University of Michigan and at present is engaged as special counsel for the Public Works Administration.

Old Blair Home Open to Public For Benefit of Lee Foundation

Visitors to Historic Home See Walking Cane of Andrew Jackson; Art Treasures Add to Interesting Exhibitions.

By Dudley Harmon.

Blair House, built in 1824, is not as old as its doormat.

One of the visitors at the opening of the house yesterday, for the benefit of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, saw the street number, 1651, on the mat. "Look," she said, "it means this house was built in 1651. Has the doormat been here all this time?"

"Yes," was the solemn reply of Miss Betsy Burke, whose mother, Mrs. John W. Burke, was a member of the committee in charge of arrangements, and who was among the younger members of society who helped take tickets.

The pictures and furnishings and the history of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gist Blair, on Pennsylvania avenue, are such, however, that even without a doormat made in "1651" the visitors found in every room relics which recalled famous people and events of other days.

Many persons there yesterday afternoon had interesting family connections with the pictures and furnishings which make this home one of the most historic in Washington.

"Why, we have the exact duplicate of that picture in our home," said Mrs. McCook Knox, pointing to an engraving of Lincoln's Cabinet which hangs on the wall of Blair's study, "My great-grandfather, George McCook, was a law partner of Edwin Stanton. Secretary of War under Lincoln, and Stanton gave him a copy when the picture was made."

One of the portraits in the engraving is of Montgomery Blair, father of Mr. Gist Blair, who was Postmaster General in the Lincoln Cabinet. Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., whose husband is a nephew of Mr. Gist Blair, helped take tickets at yesterday's showing, wearing a grey checked suit, a black hat with a nosegay on the brim, and an orchid pinned on her shoulder.

Opened for First Time.

Mrs. Casanove Lee was another committee member hard at work yesterday to see that visitors got the most out of the tour. Her husband is a direct descendant of Richard Henry Lee, who, like his distinguished descendant, Robert E. Lee, was born at Stratford Hall, the colonial home of the Lees of Virginia. Mr. and Mrs. Blair opened their home to the public for the first time yesterday and today for the purpose of raising funds for the restoration of Stratford.

"This house is just like a museum, only a hundred times more attractive," exclaimed one of the visitors. Many of the furnishings and objects d'art in the Blair home are actually museum pieces. In the library upstairs is a hickory walking stick originally presented to Andrew Jackson by the people in the little town where he was born. "Old Hickory" in turn presented it to Francis Preston Blair, his good friend and a member of his famous Kitchen Cabinet. Blair was the aggressive editor of the newspaper The Globe, and on the top of the cane is a miniature globe in gold, placed there by Andrew Jackson.

George Bancroft occupied the house when he was Polk's Secretary of the Navy and was founding the Naval Academy. The Department of the Interior was born in the house when a later resident, Thomas Ewing, was in Zachary Taylor's Cabinet. On Saturday a small tablet was unveiled in the study commemorating the fact that in this room Robert E. Lee was offered the command of the Union Army by Francis Preston Blair, who acted on Lincoln's suggestion.

Contains Art Treasures.

Aside from the political interest attached to this old home, it contains numerous artistic treasures collected by the Blair family through generations. In the drawing room are an original Duncan Phyfe chair, a Chippendale china cabinet of classically beautiful design, and several chairs decorated with scences from the Hudson painted by the artist-inventor, Robert Fulton. The oval table in the dining room is original Sheraton and yesterday was set with Queen Anne silver and Chinese Lowestoft of a rare and beautiful pattern.

Others beside Miss Burke who sold tickets yesterday afternoon were Miss Anne Carter Greene, who looked smart in a tweed suit and Robin Hood hat; Miss Kathleen Knox, attractive daughter of Mrs. McCook Knox, and Miss Elizabeth Lister. Among those who attended the opening were Mrs. Truxtun Beale, who is opening her own home, Decatur House, on Friday and Saturday; Mrs. Tracy Dows, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, with some friends from Chicago, and Mrs. George Moses, wife of former Senator Moses.

Mrs. Adams to Honor D. A. R. Delegates

Mrs. Alva B. Adams, wife of Senator Adams, will entertain at her apartment tomorrow afternoon from 4 to 5 in honor of the Colorado delegates to the D. A. R. congress. Assisting Mrs. Adams will be Miss Elizabeth Adams, Mrs. B. Moreland, Mrs. Harry Moore, and Mrs. James Byrnes.

Ohio Alumni to Dine.

Alumni of Ohio State University will hold their annual spring dinner on Friday evening at Mrs. K's Toll House Inn on the Colesville pike. Election of officers will precede the program. The president, Mr. Quincy A. Campbell, and the secretary, Dr. Martin Leatherman, are in charge of reservatoins.

Minister, Mrs. MacWhite Hosts At Last 'At Home' of the Season

Many Diplomats, Senators and Members of Cabinet and Wives Attend Event at Shoreham; Several Assist in Pouring of Tea.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Minister of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Michael MacWhite entertained yesterday afternoon at the last of their "at homes" for the season in their apartment at the Shoreham Hotel. Mrs. MacWhite received in a black gown, an embroidered design in points, done in gold thread decorating the full sleeves.

The tea table was decorated with a center bouquet of pink gladioli and lighted with tall green candles. Assisting Mrs. MacWhite were Senora de Calderon, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, Mrs. F. Ryan Duffy, Mrs. William Phillips, Mme. Sokolowska, Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr and Mrs. Harry Woodring, who alternated in pouring. Mrs. Robert Brennan, wife of the Secretary of the Irish Legation, and her daughter, Miss Emer Brennan, also assisted Mrs. MacWhite.

Among the guests was the Ambassador of Peru, Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander.

Senora de Espil was there, wearing a black suit trimmed in russet brown and a hat of the same material with a band of brown corresponding to the trimming on the suit.

The Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso, was among the guests to arrive toward the end of the afternoon. Others were Mme. Troyanovsky, wife of the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, who wore a short moleskin cape over her dark gown; the Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertegun; Mme. Aranha, wife of the Ambassador of Brazil; the Ambassador of Switzerland and Mme. Peter; Mme. Bianchi, wife of the Minister of Portugal, and her daughter, Mlle. Sibella Skidelsky; Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Minister of Norway; and Mme. van Haersma de With, wife of the Minister of the Netherlands, who was dressed in a tailored costume of black with a trimming of white down the front of the blouse; also Baroness van Brugel Douglas, wife of the Counselor of the Netherlands Legation.

Among other guests were Mrs. Homer Cummings, wife of the Attorney General; the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Miss Frances Perkins, the Secretary of Labor; the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips, the Solicitor General and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Senator and Mrs. Marcus A. Coolidge, Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, wife of Senator Lewis; Mrs. Charles J. Colden, wife of Representative Colden; Admiral Hillary Jones, former commander of the United States Navy, and Mrs. Jones; Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Dr. Stanley Hornbeck, Mrs. Bowler Hull and her niece, Miss Lucille Schultz, who is here from Oklahoma visiting her; Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Keith Merrill, the Misses Mary, Helen and Josephine Patton, Mrs. Louis Titus and her sister, Miss Therese Rooney; Mrs. William MacCracken, Miss Pauletta Guffey and Mrs. Harold Hinton.

Mrs. McCook Knox had come from the Blair House, where she will be one of the hostesses today. She was there yesterday verifying her information as to the historical facts about the relics on display so as to be able to answer the visitors' questions today. Her fear that her information would be inadequate was allayed when one of yesterday's hostesses told her a majority of the visitors had asked about only one thing—the fan-shaped arrangement of paper in front of the logs in the fireplace. It was simple to tell them it was quite modern; the butler had arranged it in the morning.

Mrs. Knox was one of the strikingly dressed guests at the tea, wearing a large red straw hat with two gray quills in the apron and a blue silk dress with a small white figure, trimmed with a red scarf and belt, the figure in the red material identical to that in the blue, with which she wore blue shoes and carried a blue bag.

The rooms of the MacWhites' apartment were bright with pictures, many of them oil paintings done by Mrs. MacWhite, who is an artist of widely recognized ability.

J. S. Wurts to Address Colonial Order Today

"Your Pre-Colonial Inheritance" is the subject of an address to be made by Chancellor John S. Wurts, of the Colonial Order of the Crown, at a reception and tea this afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Chinese room of the Mayflower.

The group meets annually with three other old English hereditary orders, Knights of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, of which Dr. Josiah Harmar Penniman is president; the Plantagenet Society, of which Mrs. William Satterthwaite Hallowell is regent, and the Society of Americans of Royal Descent, of which Mrs. George Harrison Houston is president. Miss Margaret Antionette Lennig is vice sovereign of the Order of the Crown.

Ida L. Raymond Will Wed Today

A wedding of interest to Washington society will be that of Miss Ida Louise Raymond, daughter of the late Col. and Mrs. William Henry Raymond, U. S. A., retired, to Mr. Douglas Metcalfe Amann, of Brooklyn, son of Mrs. Ida Jane Amann, which will take place in New York this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, with the Rev. Earnest K. Banner officiating.

A reception at the apartment of Miss Virginia Kirkus will follow the ceremony.

Mrs. John Walker Evans, of New York, will be the matron of honor and Miss Olivia von Schrader Cover, of Bryn Mawr, and Miss Katherine Persons, of Worcester, Mass., will be bridesmaids.

The bridegroom will have as best man Mr. Robert H. Tweedie, of Brooklyn. The ushers will be Mr. Paul E. Douherty, of Jersey City, and Mr. Ferdinand Van Sicklen Parr, of Brooklyn.

The Young couple will make their home at 50 King street, New York City, on their return from a trip to Puerto Rico and Santo Domingo.

Alumnae Bridge Party.

The Alumnae Association of the Convent of the Sacred Heart, 1719 Massachusetts avenue northwest, will hold a bridge party at the Carlton Hotel at 2:30 this afternoon.

Feminine Humor Is Belied When 'Secretary' Maintains She Is No Valet to Her Boss

By Malvina Lindsay.
(Woman's Page Editor.)

HAS WOMAN a sense of humor?

For centuries men have been shouting "No!"—possibly because the wish has been father to the thought. At any rate, it has been accepted as a truism by every husband that while his wife was the "best little woman in the world," she always had to have the point of a joke explained to her.

• • • •

Meanwhile women have done their best to disprove this charge (not very loudly, of course, when men were around) but at least in their own circles. Personally, I have never met a woman who did not possess an undying faith in her own sense of humor. Young women in search of husbands inevitably list their "sense of humor" along with their trim figures and affectionate dispositions as matrimonial qualifications. Care-ridden wives and mothers and harassed club women unfailingly declare it is only their great sense of humor that enables them to carry on.

• • • •

Only recently, two outstanding women, Mary Ritter Beard and Martha Bensley Bruere wrote a book to show how women have laughed at the world through the ages. And a few years ago the Women's Press Club of New York sponsored a literary contest to prove that women, besides laughing at men's jokes, could even produce wit themselves.

IN VIEW of all this I had until recently fervently believed that my own sex had a sense of humor. In fact I even believed I had one myself. But now I am not so sure. For one who signs herself "Secretary" writes to complain that I have insulted all self-respecting women office workers by a recent article entitled "School For Secretaries," which I had fondly believed was a satire.

My correspondent says she has been a secretary for 20 years to one of the brainiest and most influential of men and that not once in that time has she ever had to maintain a hanging basket or a canary in his window, remove spots from his vest or compliment him on his ties. And what is more, she declares, she has never found it necessary to keep either a triple mirror or a small folding screen on her desk to repair her make-up between dictation periods.

IT WOULD of course, be futile to point out to "Secretary" that the article was not designed to reflect upon secretaries (or even their highly respected bosses) but rather upon those writers and lecturers who make a racket of telling women how to become efficient and devastating by the simple device of making fools of themselves. It would be futile to tell her that the article was meant as a gentle protest against conditions rather than individuals, against a Fascist philosophy that is finding increasing expression in the economic world.

• • • •

The fault of course was mine. The article should have been accompanied by a comic strip showing an employer hurling a custard pie at his secretary and her lisping back at him "Oh Mr. H.! you have such wonderful biceps!"

I SEE NOW it would be futile to point out any of these things (or even to pass on the information sent me by "former secretary," who says one of her duties was to bite the end off her employer's cigars before he smoked them). For I have at last become convinced that women do not possess a sense of humor. But for that matter neither do men. None of us do. Otherwise we would not live in a world of disorder and injustice: a condition due to our taking ourselves too seriously—and too selfishly.

Mrs. M'Jannett Trains Children To Stress Ideas

Progressive Education Exponent, Here From Paris, Describes Methods.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

"JACK AND JILL went up the hill——"

How many pupils have read those words slowly, painfully peering at each letter, spelling all out so carefully they have finished the rhyme without any idea of Jack and Jill—where they went, or what happened to them? Later, of course, when the lines were memorized, the thought came to the fore, replacing in importance the words and letters in the rhyme.

Mrs. Donald Ross MacJahnet, of Paris, widely known as Charlotte Blensdorf—exponent of progressive education—believes, however, the thought should be emphasized from the very first; that it is much more important to show children how to develop freedom in breathing and movement, how to preserve their natural vitality and their flare for "acting out ideas" than to spend so much time teaching them to spell and pronounce words.

Her theories along this line are much deeper than that. Yesterday at the Wardman Park Hotel, Mrs. MacJannet explained some of them in detail and elaborated on her ideas of speech, reading, and musical training.

Discipline First Problem.

"In the first place, the problem of discipline must be solved before any educational method can progress," she said. "As I see it, the only natural discipline is rhythm, which is always pleasant—never irksome. Then why not base teaching on rhythm? Why not develop a system of education according to eurythmics—the sciene of harmonious movement?"

That is exactly what this attractive, brown-eyed woman has tried to do. First trained at home by her father, Otto Blansdorf, the noted German composer of music for children, she subsequently became a pupil of her father's instructor, Dalcroize, who created the eurythmics system for teaching music. Later, she worked with Thulin Lund in his school for training teachers along this line and eventually established the Blensdorf School for Eurythmics in Sweden.

She also at one time was connected with the Ministry of Education in Germany and later taught in England. Her wide experience with pupils and instructors has convinced her the most effective way of teaching children how to preserve their natural grace is by showing them how "to use body movement as a means of expression." In teaching the Jack-and-Jill nursery rhyme to tiny tots, for example, Mrs. MacJannet favors the system whereby they learn to dramatize each idea and to speed up their speech or slow it down, according to the thought.

Dramatizes Ideas.

Such a method, she believes, makes for freedom of breathing and movement, keeps children from becoming self-conscious, teaches them the development of natural body movement and stresses the importance of ideas rather than letters and words.

"Dramatized ideas make an indelible impression on the child's mind," she explained, "and they involve a freedom of movement and breathing that make for better health and greater beauty. A child taught by the letter-and-word-method tends to get 'tightened up' inside, to develop a self-conscious attitude that impedes his breathing and curbs his native gestures. The more progressive method of teaching trains pupils to develop themselves according to breathing and movement characteristic of their infant days."

In this connection she told something of Delacroize's method of teaching music by eurythmics.

"Instead of allowing a pupil to sit 'tightened up' before the piano, hunched over the keys, studying out each note and losing the effect of the whole in the painful execution of each part, he trained the pupil to act out the idea of what he was to play before he sat down to the piano. In this way, the pupil not only got the idea of the composition, but he released in himself the freedom of movement so essential to any interpretation."

Prominent in educational circles in Europe, Mrs. MacJannet was among the outstanding persons to offer a course in eurythmics when the New Education Fellowship Association met in Nice in 1932. This summer, when the association convenes in England, she will offer a similar course at the Cheltenham School, and will later spend the summer at the MacJannet Camps on Lake d'Annecy in the French Alps.

Her husband, Donald Ross MacJannet, is an American. Since the war he has gained recognition as an outstanding educator in France. He founded the first school for Americans in Europe—the MacJannet Country School at St. Cloud, near Paris. The summer camps he established several years ago have attracted students from many countries.

The MacJannets will be in Washington until Friday, when they will return to New York. On May 8 they will sail for France.

Worry Blamed As High Blood Pressure Cause

Nerves, Too Often Bring on Overstimulation, but Cure Is Simple.

UNTIL recent years it was thought by medical men generally that every case of high blood pressure meant hardening of the arteries or Bright's disease. The more the subject is studied, however, the clearer it becomes that there are some cases of high arterial tension that are not dependent on either of these factors. Nevertheless, if the pressure continues at an increased level over a span of years, the kidneys and the arteries may be affected secondarily, just as a garden hose may be worn out quickly if it is under a continuous overload.

What then is responsible for this type of abnormal pressure that comes seemingly out of a clear sky? As near as can be determined, here are factors (stimuli) which in the sympathetic nervous system and which bring about a contraction (later hardening) of the arterioles (small arteries) and capillaries in the brain, the heart, and the kidneys. This is the explanation for many cases of rupture of blood vessels in men past 50. The sequence of events is quite different, however, from that which occurs in aging or senile sclerosis. The situation is not called arteriosclerosis, but, for want of a better name, is termed essential hypertension, which is another way of indicating that it is unexplained. It is an individual characteristic.

Characteristics Individual.

Let us assume that we are faced with such a perdicament. What will occur if the condition is allowed to continue unchecked?

Take the case of a middle-aged business man who has led a busy but not a strenuous life. He is not suffering from Bright's disease and yet he shows a high systolic pressure. But a few years ago such a patient would have been starved, deprived of meat and eggs, of tea and coffee, and of any activity whatsoever. Had the history been gone into carefully, periodical high-pressure readings would have been noted even in early life, for example, between the ages of 20 and 30. To be sure, these intervals were short, but they were exhibited whenever excitement or worry became manifest. We may logically assume that the constant reiteration of strains of this sort may lead to the development of a more or less continuous state in which the level of pressure within the arteries is raised.

Cures Are Simple.

Can anything be done to ameliorate the tension? The first consideration is the diet, which should be so regulated that the patient's weight is a little below average for his height and age. Protein (meat) is not responsible for high blood pressure and the normal amount should be eaten. Common salt may be used when there is no edema (swelling). If tobacco has been employed to excess the amount should be reduced, but it need not be eliminated entirely.

Periods of rest should be increased, but the one who gives up business is worse off than he who carries on a moderate schedule. Rest for an hour in the middle of the day is of more value than two or three hours at a later period. More important than all of these, however, is that the patient's mind shall be at ease. Some one in the business or in the family must assume the burdensome details.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

Wife Who Listens to Another Man's Love Making, Though She Protests Against It, Is Tacitly Encouraging His Suit.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young married woman without any children, working in a public office. There is a young man working at the same place, but not in the same office, who continually asks me if there isn't some way he can prove his love for me. Also, he asks to see me after office hours.

Mary Haworth.

• • • •

Although I have seen him alone a few times, I have tried to explain to him my standing and that I would not consider getting a divorce. But in spite of my talking and trying to explain to him that some day he will be sorry he has waited for me—when at the present it is impossible—he always says he is willing to wait for the opportunity when he can call me his own. Since he is a single man and can easily obtain work elsewhere I have asked him to make a change, but he replies each time that he is afraid to leave because he will not see me each day, and knows he would not be satisfied anywhere else.

• • • •

I have tried to explain to him that we can continue being friends and that he should think of me in that light. I enjoy his company, enjoy talking to him, as he is a very well read man and has traveled a lot, but just seem to lack the words to utter that will persuade him to think of me as friend and not as lover. I have tried introducing him to other girls, to try to get him interested elsewhere, but all to no avail. He has been to our home several times and my husband thinks well of him, but I know things must change before three lives are wrecked.

PERPLEXED.

DEAR PERPLEXED: Actions speak louder than words. So long as you continue to meet this young man after working hours; so long as you invite him to your home; so long as you engage in wordy protestations that you can never be more than friend to him; so long as you listen, even with superficial evidences of reluctance, to his lovemaking, so long and in so many ways are you tacitly encouraging his guilty suit. There is but one way of making clear your thorough-going loyalty and devotion to your husband. That is to refuse to see or to listen to the young man. To do anything less is to be unfair to both your husband and your would-be lover. If you must be dramatic about the situation, tell the young man he can prove the quality of his love for you by leaving you absolutely alone.

"Sphinx" Is Challenged.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Fifty years ago I was "just a good friend" of one who must have been "Sphinx's grandfather. I refer to that "Sphinx," who wrote your column April 15 to say, "I can't for the life of me see anything especially wrong or unfair in seeing a lot of one girl, even if marriage isn't in the picture . . ." The man who was a good friend of mine 50 years ago expressed the same noble sentiments about friendship between boy and girl that your correspondent does. But furthermore, he also insisted on the fightness of kisses and caresses, which made the good girl friend secretly believe he was really in love with her, though he was suddenly called away to a new place of employment among strangers. In six months, the announcement of his marriage was in my hands. It broke my heart. The new girl's kisses were fresher perhaps.

• • • •

Mary Haworth, please tell "B. J." and "Sphinx" that they are playing with matches; that they are treating sweet, innocent girls like toys. Playing with matches may cause a fire and somebody will get burned and carry a scar which lasts through life. Such accidents may all be a part of this business of living, as "Sphinx" says; but why not be a little less selfish in one's playing? It is not right for "friends" to kiss and caress too much. If he who hurt me were not now dead, I would not dare to write this—even after 50 years.

SEVENTY—STILL CRYING.

• • • •

DEAR SEVENTY: I suppose it is rather to be expected that the points of view of men and women in matters of love should be as far apart as the two poles. And I suppose as many men's hearts as women's have been broken by this failure—or is it perhaps refusal?—of each to understand the other's thoughts and motives. I hope "B. J." and "Sphinx" will study your letter well. It conveys a moral which needs no pointing up from me.

M. H.

Happy Married Life Attributed To 'Good Sense'

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 21.—The longest-married couple among active opera singers in this country agreed today that "good sense" is perhaps the greatest factor in a happy marriage."

Mr. and Mrs. Mario Chamlee, who have been married for 17 years, also ranked "a philosophy that meets daily problems" as a leading requirement.

"And there is a great deal of luck involved in a happy marriage," the two singers said.

Chamlee, who was leading tenor at the Metropolitan Opera for eight years, then smiled, "it's advisable to be very much in love—fortunately, we still are."

The tenor's wife, pretty Ruth Miller, a lyric soprano who formerly sang at the "Met," recently emerged from a five-year retirement. During that time she devoted herself to their young son, Archer Mario.

"A woman should always be willing to give up her career temporarily for her husband's, if it is possible for only one of the two to go ahead," said Mrs. Chamlee.

Many Chronic Ills Branded Mere Habit

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

CHILDREN learn far more by imitation than by precept, and they learn the bad habits quite as easily as they do the good ones.

Sick headaches were apparently hereditary in the women of the Brown family, and fainting spells in those of the Smith family. The chances are, however, that if Sally Smith had been brought up by Mrs. Brown she would have developed headaches instead of fainting spells.

Defense Mechanisms.

Half of the chronic ailments of mankind for which no real physical basis can be found are what the psychiatrists call defense mechanisms.

Mrs. Brown's great-grandmother may have been overworked to the point where her head ached from sheer exhaustion and she had to go to bed. This necessarily threw the work on her eldest daughter, and she, rebeling against the burden, developed headaches like her mother's so as to shift the responsibility.

Self-Induced Headaches.

In time it became a habit with her to have a headache when she felt imposed on. They were real enough, but self-induced. She was always able to do pleasant things, but responsibility or hard work were apt to put her out of the running.

Mrs. Brown herself found the same way out when she was quite small, and in turn taught the trick to her daughter, who probably handed it on to hers. And so this illusion of heredity grew. It is generally the daughter most like the mother who carries the disease.

The charm can be broken the moment one of the long line of sufferers faces the real reason for her headaches or fainting spells, or whatever her defense may be. Facing it, she must acknowledge it, and then can overcome it.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WHEN THEY got married, he discovered to his horror that the sweetest girl in the world couldn't hit a ball, throw a ball or do anything much about balls, and, in fact, she really wasn't much interested in balls. Somehow or other during their courtship he was too much entranced with dancing with her and dashing her around to theaters and things to check up about golf for instance.

But when a man settles down to every day living, what's the use of anything without golf? And his heart was set on having her play with him. She's learning gradually even if she isn't exactly the golf type . . . anyway, the thing she'd like help with . . . besides learning the difference between mashies and niblicks . . . is fixing up a room in the basement for golf clubs, balls, trophies, and collecting the cronies before and after the game. They don't play at a club, so they usually meet at her husband's . . . she'd like to make over an unused part of the basement in a man's style (even though the wives go along, these golf excursions always have a way of seeming masculine).

The room would serve as a place for beer and pretzels, welsh rarebit suppers and other informal refreshment occasions, and it might even be used for bridge and games . . . We'd suggest modern furniture in tweedy coverings, grass green painted walls, with tees and golf balls careening all over the landscape . . . they'd be easy to paint on. A sand-colored linoleum floor might be a good idea, then plenty of built-in cabinets and shelves for golfing paraphernalia, and, for refreshments, a roadside hot dog stand. It might be nice to have the bridge tables kept open to be used as refreshment tables on odd occasions. Add a radio and the room could also pinch hit for dancing.

LOSING OUT on a better job and more money—all because of bad speech! But Molly would never believe it.

She's a bright, energetic girl, as Mr. Boss has observed. So when the firm needed a new reception-desk clerk, Mr. Boss thought Molly might be given a chance. He stopped by her desk for a little chat about the office work.

"I can't hardly enthuse about the new files," she said. "They hadn't ought to be such a long days off from our desks. Those kind of records ought to be kept handy."

She was right about the files, but how frightfully wrong about her English! Regretfully Mr. Boss crossed her off his list as a possibility for the reception desk.

Molly is clever enough to spend a half hour a day on care of hair and nails. But how about 10 minutes a day spent on weeding out errors in English?

Her bad speech is holding her back in many ways. It grates on Bob's nerves so that he's never dated her. Claire likes her, but is afraid she wouldn't quite fit in with her other friends at a party.

Hair Tinted Light Aqua To Go With Jewelry

Feeling that a coiffure should be in keeping with one's jewelry, Lady Mendle tints her hair a light aqua to match her aquamarine tiara and diamond aquamarine necklace. One Parisian hairdresser suggests that pastel tints are well suited to blondes in the spring. For brunettes he suggests vivid greens and purples.

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

By Priscilla Wayne

Forced to pose as June Bradley, whom she greatly resembles, Ruth Dayton finds herself involved in a plot to murder the man she loves, Jim Bradley. Jim, step-brother of June, has been seriously injured, and blinded, in a mysterious accident. Ruth is brought into the Bradley home by Joseph and Clara Bradley, uncle and aunt of Jim and June, who have been caring for June. They explain to Ruth that June is ill and cannot come—and that Jim is dying and will never know. Ruth falls in love with Jim and he with her. Fearing that he may die, he plans their marriage. The Bradleys and Pascoe, man nurse who is in the plot and who wants Ruth himself, appear to agree with Jim's plan, but arrange a fake marriage. Pascoe is convinced that he can have Ruth for the asking—and he has convinced the Bradleys that he has already won her.

Chapter Eighteen.

"And how!" Bradley chuckled. "Hurry along. Let's get it over with. I'll wait in here."

Left alone, the two women hurried. Ruth's heart was simply pounding in nervous excitement. Clara Bradley was excited, too. "I guess every woman loves a wedding," she laughed. "I'm just as excited as if this one was a real one. What are you going to wear?"

"This dress," Ruth indicated the blue dress.

"O. K., the bridegroom won't know the difference," Clara smiled at her own crude joke. "What a pity we didn't have time to shop. There's nothing I should have liked better than to buy a wedding gown.

"But that wouldn't do, of course," she decided, after a moment's thought. "Someone would have been sure to recognize us. We wouldn't want any society notices on this, would we, Ruth?"

Lovely Gown.

She held the dress high for Ruth to slip her arms into it, then dropped it slowly down over the girl's slimness. "Gee, you look pretty." Her admiration was genuine. "It is a pity we didn't have bridal things."

"I am a bride," Ruth said softly, under her breath. "I am a bride. Oh, no matter if there isn't a minister or a license or anything, just Jim and my hand in his, I feel exactly like a bride."

"What are you muttering like that for?" Clara scolded, all good naturedly. 'Does it get on your nerves, too? Well, I'll confess it does on mine, just a little. Now, then, are we all ready? Well, then, here we go. Now act like a bride."

Man by Bed.

She opened the door for Ruth, who walked slowly down the wide, deeply carpeted corridor. Pascoe stood at the door. He smiled at Ruth as she passed, shook his two hands together as if in mock congratulations.

A man in a plain black suit with a little book in his hand stood by the bedside.

But Ruth was not seeing any of these things. She did not see the man with the book. She did not see Pasco leering impudently at her. She did not know that Joseph and Clara Bradley followed close on her heels. She only knew that she saw the face of the man she loved.

She walked swiftly toward it—as one walks toward a star of hope.

With a little sob she sank on her knees at Jim's bedside took his thin hand in hers. "Jim," she whispered, "Jim, how are you?"

"Better, sweet," he whispered. He held her hand very tightly. Ruth could have swooned with happiness that his grip seemed stronger than she had ever known it. "I love you, dear, I love you," she whispered, her lips close to his ear.

A smile crossed his lips. "My sweetheart."

"I'm crying because you're sick, because I'm excited, oh, I guess because of everything."

Jim's smile was beautiful. "Dear," he said softly that no other ears but hers could hear, "Dear, I'm better. So much better. I believe I'm going to get well."

Joseph Bradley came forward. "Well, what's stopping us?" he asked almost impatiently.

Ruth stood straight beside Jim, who was propped high on the pillows. The strange voice began, "Dearly beloved, we are gathered together here in the sight of God and these witnesses——"

It was the beautiful ritual of Ruth's own church. She had heard it before. As though from far, far away came her own voice, repeating slowly the pledge, "I, June, take James, for better or for worse, through sickness or in health, in poverty or riches to be my legal, lawful husband."

"I pronounce you man and wife."

For an instant creepy silence shivered over the room. Only for an instant. Clara's ugly laugh broke the magic spell. "Now you're Mrs. Bradley instead of Miss Bradley," she told Ruth.

"I wish that all of you would go. I want to be alone with my wife," Jim was saying.

Pascoe tried to argue. "But don't you think you'd better rest?"

"My Husband."

"I'll sit very quietly here at his side," Ruth said. 'I want to stay with—my husband."

They went away then, reluctantly, Ruth knew. Jim said, "Close the door after you, Uncle Joe," and Ruth added, "I'll call you if I need you."

The tender kisses of this brief half hour alone with the man she loved! Ruth wondered if she could ever forget their gentle, passionate sweetness. "I've asked Uncle Joe to bring Bob Reagan right away. I want to see that the will is right."

Ruth held his head close in her arms. "Darling, don't talk like that."

"I want to, June, just to be sure."

"But you're better."

Jim's tender smile was reassuring. "I know I'm better, June. I feel it. You know I didn't like that Dr. McGuire, but something happened last night."

Ruth could hardly breathe, waiting for him to go on. "What happened, Jim? Tell me."

"He stayed her all night. Twice he gave me some medicine, some powerful medicine. I felt better, almost right away. I think I've misjudged him."

Ruth did not speak. She scarcely knew what to say. She was remembering that conversation she had overheard the night before. Dr. McGuire, it seemed, had small liking for the "job" Pascoe said they must accomplish.

A wild hope came to Ruth. Those two times that he gave Jim powerful medicine. Did that mean that he gave his patient a stimulant to counteract whatever Pascoe gave him?

But she did not dare worry or frighten Jim with her suspicions.

"I'm going now, sweetheart," she told him. "I'm going to take off this pretty dress—put it away—where I can keep it all my life."

Looks Sweet.

"I'll come back quietly," Ruth said.

"I'll be waiting," Jim told her. She kissed him tenderly, patted the pillow just a little. "You look so dear in that dressing gown, Jim."

Jim smiled. "Not much of a wedding suit, was it, darling, but I had to dress up a little."

"You look sweet to me, Jim, sweet," Ruth said, close to him. "I'll be back quickly."

Ruth's mind was made up. In some way she meant to establish immediate communication with the outside. Jim's added strength had acted like a stimulant to her own courage. There was so much at stake—so much—love, happiness, life itself.

Clara and Joseph Bradley argued in front of Clara's door.

"I think," Joseph said cuttingly, "that you made a huge mistake."

"Oh, yes?" Clara was sarcastic. "Well, ask June here. Now that she's mistress of the house. June, it was all right to hire another servant, wasn't it?"

"Why, yes——" Ruth wondered what the argument was all about.

Joseph Bradley was not slow in explaining. "She's gone and hired a strange servant. As if we hadn't complications enough."

"We had to have another servant," Clara defended herself spiritedly. "This house is a mess Jim's ancient Abigail is a good cook, but she can't or won't do anything else. The whole kitchen is piled high with dishes."

"Just the same, we could have put up with it. Every move you make, you complicate the situation."

"Nonsense," C'ara Bradley said angrily. "Complicate things? I merely hired a dish washer, a houseman, or whatever he chances to be. Here he comes. See for yourself. A perfectly innocent young man. Look!"

Ruth followed Joseph Bradley's quick glance down the corridor.

A young man was coming toward them. A tall, broadshouldered young man. There was something about the young man—something familiar about the swing of his broad shoulders—

Cottage Cheese Recipes Victors In Post Contest

One Prize Recipe Was for Cream Puffs; Pie Also Named.

At least one-quarter of the recipes submitted last week in The Post's contest for ways of serving cottage cheese were for cottage cheese pie. Though many of these recipes were excellent, many were also identical or so much alike that it was hard to choose between them. The cottage cheese pie recipe that was finally selected for one of the ptizes was unique in being the only one of its kind submitted.

Those winning prizes are Mrs. M. L. Dillinger, 161 Fairfield avenue, Johnstown, Pa., $5 for her recipe for cottage cheese cream puffs; Miss Florence B. Gaither, 723 Boundary avenue, Silver Spring, Md., $3, for her recipe for grandmother's pot cheese pudding, and $1 each to Mrs. J. J. Waters, 5614 Third place northwest, for her recipe for cottage cheese muffins, to Mrs. Robert O. Jolin, 6916 Willow street northwest, for her recipe for farmer's chop suey, and to Miss Miriam Block, 1301 Fifteenth street northwest, for her recipe for cottage crumb pie.

Cottage Cheese Cream Puffs.

1 cup boiling water.
¼ cup butter
½ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
Few grains cayenne
½ cup cottage cheese
2 eggs

Heat water and butter to boiling point. Add flour and salt and cayenne, stirring constantly until mixture leaves the sides of the pan. Add cheese and mix well. Cool. Add unbeaten eggs, one at a time, beating well after each egg is added. Drop by teaspoons on a greased pan, making small balls. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 30 to 40 minutes. This recipe makes 48 puffs. They are delicious for afternoon tea.

Grandmother's Pot Cheese Pudding.

1½ cups cottage cheese
1½ cups milk
4 tablespoons cocoa
¾ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
3 eggs
½ teaspoon almond extract
1-3 teaspoon ginger

Force the cottage cheese through a fine sieve. Beat eggs to mix, but not as much as for cake. Combine with milk, add to cheese and beat with a spoon. Mix sugar, salt and ginger and cocoa, add to first mixture. Add almond extract and blend all together. Pour into a greased casserole. Set in pan of water and bake the same as you do a custard in a slow oven. Serve warm or cold with sweetened table cream flavored with a little nutmeg.

Cottage Cheese Muffins.

3 cups yellow cornmeal
3 tablespoons granulated sugar
3 teaspoons baking powder
3 eggs, beaten very light
1 cup sweet milk
1 teaspoon salt
¼ pound butter melted
1 cup cottage cheese

Mix ingredients in order given, beating cottage cheese in last. Bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven.

Farmer's Chop Suey.

1 green pepper
1 peeled, diced cucumber
¼ cup finely sliced radishes
¼ cup finely sliced spring or Bermuda onions
2 firm tomatoes, chopped
1 head lettuce
1 package cottage cheese (12 ounces)
1 cup soured cream
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Salt, pepper and paprika

Chill all ingredients thoroughly before preparing. Mix chopped vegetables gently with fork to avoid crushing. Salt and pepper to taste. Shred lettuce and arrange in nests in individual bowls. Fill a small mold with creamed, salted cottage cheese and turn out on lettuce nests. Arrange chopped vegetables around cheese and pour over all, soured cream, whipped and flavored with lemon juice. Garnish with green pepper rings and paprika. Return to refrigerator a short time to complete chilling.

This also may be served in a large salad bowl, using one large or four small molds of cottage cheese. Served with pineapple juice and salted crackers, this is a complete luncheon or light supper dish.

Cottage Crumb Pie.

Crumb crust
¼ cup butter
1 cup graham cracker crumbs
¼ teaspoon nutmeg

Mix ingredients in the order listed, creaming together well. Press in pie pan.

Cottage Filling.

1½ cups cottage cheese
½ cup granulated sugar
3 tablespoons evaporated milk
Grated rind one lemon
2 whole eggs

Mix cheese and sugar together. Add milk and then grated lemon rind. Beat eggs well and add to cheese mixture. Mix well. Fill crust with the filling. Bake in moderate oven until firm and the top is a golden brown.

Household Hints

To keep artichokes firm and green add half a lemon to the water in which they are cooked.

Sweet pickles wrapped in thin slices of baked ham are excellent in buns to be served on picnics.

To mayonnaise which is fairly sweet, add tomato catsup, diced hard boiled egg, chopped celery and a suggestion of onion. Serve this dressing on a head of lettuce.

Fried chicken should be placed on heavy brown paper when it is removed from the pan. The paper will absorb the excess fat, leaving the chicken crisp.

When making fruit pies, cut the upper crust a half inch larger than the lower, and fold the edges under the lower to prevent the juice from running out of the pie.

It's High Time for the June Bride's Shower

In this table centerpiece for a bridal shower of kitchen utensils, the engaged couple is appropriately represented by wooden salad fork and spoon, dressed in wedding costumes of frothy cellulose film. Favors of silver cardboard pails with tiny mops carry out the kitchen symbolism.

Kitchen Shower Is Made Dramatic

Table Centerpiece and Favors May Reflect Same Theme.

THE pleasant custom of giving showers for a prospective bride offers her friends an opportunity to arrange parties that she will remember not only for the gifts but for the appropriate table decorations.

A shower of kitchen utensils, for instance, may be a dramatic affair if the table centerpiece and favors cleverly reflect the same theme. An unusual centerpiece of this character, which is easy to create, transforms a wooden salad spoon and fork into bride and bridegroom figures, with costumes made from cellulose film. The happy pair are starting their matrimonial voyage in a washtub boat of silver-covered cardboard, with a flag of blue film for a sail and a masthead mop made from a clear-color piece. Ocean waves are represented by light green film, crushed with the hands and overlaid with a crushed blue sheet.

Make the cardboard washtub first, cutting an 8½-inch circle for the bottom and fitting around it a 3x30-inch band, fastened with Scotch cellulose tape. Then cut a pattern from folded tissue paper 14½ inches long, 5 inches at folded end, and 3 inches at the other, the bottom edge curving and the top edge straight, with a 3-inch-long handle rising at center. Unfold the pattern and duplicate in cardboard, then glue around box. Place a band of red Scotch tape around the tub and across the handles. The tub will tip when set on the blue-green "waves," which are spread over a 16-inch cardboard square.

Mast Is Made Next.

Now construct a mast from 3 No. 7 wires 19 inches long, wound together with white crepe paper and covered with silver paper. For the mop, use a 5-inch by 100-inch piece of the clear-color film, folded to several thicknesses and cut to a 4-inch fringe. Wind the uncut edge around the mast top, and tie with spool wire so the fringe falls downward. Tie again 1 inch up from the mast, cover this tying-wire with the red tape and cut fringe even.

The flag attached to the mast is 15 inches long, 12 inches high and is tapered to a slashed point. A frame of No. 7 wire is covered with white crepe paper and laid on light blue film, which is cut out and taped in place. A line wire of silver Scotch tape is added.

Use the spoon for the bride and the fork for the bridegroom—a 10-inch set is a good size. Tie wire, covered with crepe paper, to small part of each utensil, to make dolls stand, having ends extend below handle. Wire for arms is tied at center to narrow part of handles. For the heads, cover tines of fork and back of spoon-bowl with clear-color cellulose film and applique features cut from red Scotch tape and black film.

Clear-Color Pieces.

The bride's costume has sleeves cut from two clear-color pieces, 2¾ inches square, and wound around the arms. The dress is white crepe paper cut 5 inches along the grain and 6 inches across it, and pasted to form a 5-inch tube. Insert spoon, cut down tube 1 inch at top for sleeves, gather at neck and tie on with spool wire. Make wrist ruffles from clear-color film, 2 inches by 10 inches, doubled the long way, gathered on wire and tied on. Then a matching neck ruff with a doubled 2½-inch-by-12-inch piece. Complete the outfit with a bridal veil made from a printed lace doily of the cellulose film and a vegetable bouquet.

Give the bridegroom a shirt front and collar band of white paper and fashion tubular sleeves of black film, cut from 2¾-inch squares. Tape these on, then give him a tail coat of the black, making it in one piece, with slits for arms, and lapels bent back. Cut a black top hat, place over end of fork and tape sides together. A radish from the bride's bouquet is a suitable boutonniere.

Appropriate favors are little pails of silver-covered cardboard made over paper nut cups and decorated with red Scotch tape and tiny mops to match the centerpiece.

Contest May Settle Shortcake Debate

The controversy is on again. Should strawberry shortcake be served with a real short cake dough or a sponge cake mixture? Help solve this old-age problem, by entering your favorite strawberry shortcake recipe in The Post's contest this week.

Naturally, this question can't be settled once and for all by a mere contest, for no matter what the judges decide your own recipe will still remain the true conception of a strawberry shortcake in your own opinion. But it will tell which type of cake is favored above the other by the number of entries for each particular type of this dessert.

Cash prizes will be awarded—the first prize will be $5; the second, $3, and the other three, $1 each.

Send your recipes to Dorothea Duncan in care of The Washington Post. All entries must reach this office by Saturday morning. Announcement of winners will be made in next Wednesday's food pages.

Peanut Bread Makes Novel Sandwiches

FROM Georgia, long famous for its good cooking, come recipes for breads which seem to have been invented for spring days. Bread and butter sandwiches made from peanut bread are just the thing to take on early spring picnics and hikes and violet-hunts. Any nut bread is good, but peanut bread is special, and in addition it is one of the most economical nut breads we have ever found. Some persons will never know how good peanuts are until they taste them in this form. Hot peanut biscuits are good, too. Served as the foundation for strawberry shortcake they are delicious.

Peanut Bread.

2 cups flour
½ cup sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup chopped peanuts
1 egg
½ cup milk
2 tablespoons melted shortening

Sift flour, sugar, baking powder and salt together. Add the peanuts. Beat the egg, add the milk and shortening. Add to dry ingredients, mixing only enough to moisten the ingredients. Bake in greased loaf pan in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 50 minutes.

Hot Peanut Biscuits.

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons shortening
½ cup chopped peanuts
¾ cup milk

Sift the flour, baking powder and salt together. Cut in the shortening and add the peanuts. Add the milk to form a soft dough. Roll out ½ inch thick and bake in hot over (425 degrees F.) 12 to 15 minutes.

Spring Shoes Go Historical

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK—Spring shoes designed for the most "modern women" in the world have borrowed their ideas from history. Colonial shoes with squared toes and buckles caught over the tongue, adaptations of Grecian sandals and a modern version of Renaissance shoes which are cut out in a series of straps mounting high over the instep, are all there.

In the modernization of the designs the shoes show a decided note of independence. Lower heels—from an inch to an inch and a half in height—are much in vogue. Toes are often squared and heels beveled. Shoes show a tendency to rise over the instep again. The most varied fabrics and colors shown in many a year are seen. Russet, navy blue, deep forest green, luggage tan, sand, cinnamon and beige appear. Calf, kid, reptile leathers and patent leathers are all used, often combined with wool gabardine or tweed.

Deep green tweed or navy gabardine shoes with heels and bandings of russet calf rimming the lower part of the shoe, brown basket weave braided leather trimmed with russet tips and sand colored suede with brown lizard tips are typical combinations. Besides these there are many plain shoes of kid, calf or patent leather.

Tea Hour In Washington Favorite Time for Entertaining.

By Margaret Wallace.

THE TEA HOUR in Washington is a most important one for those who belong to the social, official, professional and business worlds. The late afternoon in Washington is the favorite time for recreation and relaxation and the meeting of friends. Incidentally, many important decisions are made at the tea hour when a few leaders gather together to discuss questions quietly over the tea cups, cocktails, or kindred beverages.

In this day of cocktails and cocktail parties and the current discussions of values of certain wines, old-fashioned and new-fashioned high balls, it is surprising how often tea and tea alone is served in the late afternoon in important centers in Washington. Many hostesses provide a variety of beverages other than tea at their formal and informal late afternoon at-home hours. It is just as good form to serve tea, however, no matter who may be invited for the tea hours. As soon as the weather gets really warm it has become a most acceptable universal custom in Washington to serve iced tea and other such cooling drinks.

At a formal tea the hostess asks two of her women friends to preside at either end of the tea table in the dining room. If a large number of guests have been invited, the hostess asks additional friends to relieve those presiding at the tea table. The usual way is to ask two women for a certain hour, two more for the next hour and so on. Other groups of women usually are asked to assist.

If the tea is informal the tea table may be set in the drawing room and one woman friend asked to preside. If the tea is smaller, the hostess may wish to preside herself This is most enjoyable type of tea time entertaining.

At a formal tea the hotess stands near the door of the drawing room to receive her guests. Those assisting the hostess should invite the guests into the dining room for tea. It is proper, however, to go to the dining room for tea without any one's suggesting it.

At an informal tea, when the hostess has a friend presiding at the tea table, she greets the guests as they come in the drawing room. They are not formally announced and the hostess need not stand at the drawing room door.

At an informal tea, when the hostess presides at her own tea table, the guests advance to the table and are greeted by the hostess, who offers her hand to each guest, man and woman, but does not rise.

Query—Is it correct to serve sherbet and ice cream at a formal tea? I am giving a tea for my daughter. I plan to have the table in the dining room with the mothers of some of my daughter's friends presiding there for me. I will have a tea service at one end and a coffee service at the other end, sandwiches and cakes, nuts and so forth.

Answer—It is proper to serve sherbet and ice cream at such a tea. They should be served from a side table, however, and not from the table proper.

Query—In arranging the seating for a dinner party is it ever proper for the hostess to give her seat to some other guest so that two women or two men will not have to sit together?

Men's Fashions Inspire a Trio Of Waistcoats

By Laura I. Baldt, A. M.

HERE are three "weskits," inspired by smart men's fashions. They will practically make a new costume out of your suit or sports skirt for you.

You'll find the collarless model most comfortable 'neath your suit. It may be wool, linen or pique. The double-breasted model is sportsy in plaid, striped or plain bold colors in wool. The single-breasted model, a classic type with short collar, is a favorite in white or pastel pique.

Style No. 2806 includes all three models. Designed for sizes 14, 16, 18 years, 36, 38 and 40-inches bust. For requirements see pattern envelope.

Send ten cents (10c), (coin is preferred) for pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. Be sure to state size you wish. The spring fashion book costs ten cents. Send for your copy today. Address order to The Washington Post, Pattern Department, 160 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y.

Apples in Many Guises Provide A Variety for the Spring Menu

U. S. Bureau of Home Economics.

A plump baked apple with sweet, rich cream is always a delightful dish with which to begin the first meal of the day, but there are other versions, too, which are just as appealing to the palate. Follow the accompanying story for new apple ideas for spring breakfasts.

By Dorothea Duncan.

When you are planning spring breakfasts with real appetite appeal, remember to include apples. This versatile fruit can be so easily prepared in such a number of interesting guises that it is well to keep on hand as many apples as you find you can use in the length of time your available storage space will keep them firm.

Apples—baked, stewed, in sauce, or fried—are always attractive when served for the first meal of the day, but have you thought of the many other possibilities for this rosy-cheeked fruit?

An apple cored and cut in strips is a good relish with breakfast meats. If dipped in lemon juice the apple will not discolor. A few strips of raw apple with cooked prunes gives a nice texture contrast and adds interest to a very commonplace fruit.

Rejuvenates Cereal.

Cereal that is no longer tempting because it has been served over and over in the same manner can be rejuvenated by the addition of a few pieces of diced apple. Your husband and youngsters will revel in this apple version of fried cornmeal mush. Prepare it this way. Cook the cereal in the usual manner, but just before pouring it in a tin mold to set add a cup of finely chopped tart apples. If your mold is larger than the usual bread tin, add more apples.

When the mush is cold slice and saute it in bacon fat until the crust is crisp. Slices of bacon rippling across well-browned slices of fried apple mush are delicious.

Cornmeal waffles may be more attractive to the palate, too, if one cup of finely diced raw apples and an extra tablespoon of shortening is added to the usual recipe. You will like these served with little broiled sausage links.

Those who depend upon a light breakfast of fruit, cereal and toast will find that an occasional apple hot bread instead of the usual toast will add spice to their meal. Apple cake is especially attractive with coffee or milk and it takes a short time for baking, and the receipe is very simple.

Peel and Core Apples.

The apple cake dough is merely a biscuit mixture to which an egg yolk and a teaspoon of sugar are added to the milk. After the usual ingredients plus the sugar and egg yolk have been mixed, roll out the dough to fit two greased pie tins. Arrange peeled and cored apples cut in eighths over the top in ring fashion. Dot with bits of butter using 1 teaspoon for each apples and drizzle each with 4 tablespoons of sugar. Bake in a hot oven (450 F.) until done, about 20 minutes.

Apple rolls are quite new. They are made of either a fancy dough or a refrigerator dough rolled to an oblong, fairly thin, ¼ inch, and spread with butter and thick apple sauce sprinkled with cinnamon and sugar. The dough is rolled like a jelly roll, edges fastened by pinching the dough together and cut in ½ inch slices, place cut sides down close together in a buttered pan and let rise to double in bulk. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees F.) for about 12 minutes. Apple butter may be used, if preferred.

Frying apples for a large family is too lengthy a process especially before breakfast, but this little handicap need not interfere if you cook the apples in the oven instead of on top of the stove. To prepare fried apples by the oven method, core them as usual and slice in rings without peeling the fruit. Put apples in a shallow baking pan, dot with fat and sprinkle with sugar using 1 tablespoon of fat and 2 tablespoons of sugar for every four apples. Add water to barely cover the bottom of the pan and bake until done and nicely browned—about ¾ of an hour in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.)

BUTTER MERINGUE PUDDING

This recipe may be used to fill a nine-inch pie shell, for filling six tart shells or as a pudding to be served in dessert dishes.

1½ cups milk light
1 cup brown sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 eggs
2 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons granulated sugar

Heat one cup of milk with the brown sugar until sugar is free from lumps. Mix the cornstarch one-half cup milk and egg yolks and add to the hot mixture slowly. Cook in double boiler until thick, stirring constantly; then continue to cook for ten minutes longer, stirring occasionally. Remove from fire and add butter. When cool, pour into baked pastry shell or ovenized pudding dish. Cover with meringue made from stiffly beaten egg whites to which the granulated sugar has been added, two tablespoons at a time. Brown meringue in a slow oven (300-350 degrees F.).

Bread in Salad.

Tiny crisp bread cubes added to a vegetable salad or a salad or greens create a new palate pleasure. To prepare the bread cut slices of it into small cubes, and fry them in butter until brown, or toast them under the broiler or in the oven.

Tests Show Lime, Protein, Vitamin Will Prolong Life

More lime, protein and vitamin in the diet will postpone old age 10 to 15 years, says Prof. Henry C. Sherman, of Columbia University. Dr. Sherman bases his conclusions on his studies of rats. One group of rats received a diet which was just adequate to maintain life on an apparently normal basis. The other rats were given the "long life" diet, which included more milk, containing the extra proteins, lime and the two vitamins A and D.

The rats fed with the second diet lived so much longer that, translated into the human life span, they would have been privileged to enjoy over ten years more before the ravages of old age set in. In the light of present knowledge of diet it would seem, in Dr. Sherman's opinion, that to maintain the maximum of youthfulness we should consume about twice as much protein and about four times as much of the two vitamins A and D as are necessary for what has been considered as satisfactory nutrition.

Post Recipe Awards Set for Next Week

The final awards in The Post's recent series of six recipe contests will be made next Wednesday, April 29, at a cooking school conducted by Dorothea Duncan, Home Economics Editor of The Post and Carolyn Chesser, Home Economics Director of the Electric Institute, in the auditorium of the institute in the Potomac Electric Power Building at Tenth and E streets northwest. The session will begin promptly at 2 p. m.

Readers of the food pages are invited to attend. Remember that if your recipe won a weekly prize of $1 in one of the six recent contests you are eligible to win one of the grand prizes—a waffle set of chromium and black which includes an iron, tray, batter bowl and ladle, and sirup pitcher; an electric iron with heat control for every type of fabric; an electric casserole and an electric kitchen clock.

Recipes that are awarded final prizes will be demonstrated for your approval.

'Virtue of Gluttony' Extolled by Writer

Dieting is hardly a modern idea. Under the title, "The Virtue of Gluttony," Elizabeth Robins Pennell wrote for the Pall Mall Gazette the latter part of the nineteenth century. "Where the fanatic had fasted his soul might prove comelier in the sight of God, silly matrons and maidens starved, or pretended to starve, that their bodies might seem fairer in the sight of man.

"Today women, as a rule, think all too little of the joys of eating. They refuse to recognize that there is no less art in eating well than in painting well or writing well.

"By artistic gluttony, beauty is increased, if not actually created.

"Let men and women look to it that at table delicious sympathy makes them one, and marriage will cease to be a failure."

The Ready Sliced Loaf.

Ready sliced bread, although considered a market innovation of recent years, was not unkonwn in the Middle Ages. One old cookbook describes the ability of a medieval cook who sometimes divided the loaf of bread before the meal and then skillfully put it together again so that it would look whole, yet enable the guests to serve themselves easily.

Ethiopia Halts Italian March On Addis Ababa

Selassie's Soldiers Also Check Advance in Harar Sector.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Addis Ababa, April 21.—Ethiopian forces on both northern and southern fronts rallied desperately today to the defense of Addis Ababa and Harar.

Ignoring devastating Italian fire from the ground and air, thousands of infuriated warriors rushed into action. Emperor Haile Selassie's, Crown Prince Asfa Wosan's and the Dedjazmach Nasibu's casualties were heavy, but they succeeded in stemming the Italian advance against Ethiopia's major cities.

A fierce battle proceeded on the northern front, where Ethiopians, directed by the Emperor and his hastily re-formed imperial bodyguard, held a line south of Dessye.

Salale Bombed.

Italian airplane squadrons, meanwhile, bombed in the Salale region, between Addis Ababa and Gojjam, using gas and high explosives, according to dispatches from the front.

The crown prince was urging his troops into battle in the vicinity of Warrah Hailu. The Emperor was active on his eldest son's flank with his imperial bodyguards. The Ethiopians, however, exercised a strict censorship of all news from the front.

Wild rumors circulating here partially allayed the panic which prevailed when evacuation of Addis Ababa began yesterday. One reported that a detachment of Ethiopian guerrillas raided the Dessye military airdrome and set fire to 17 Caproni bombing planes.

Officials here continued to maintin communication with Nasibu, supreme commander on the southern front. He reported that "all is well" as Ethiopians held their positions Jijiga. Red Cross reports from the southern front said the Italian at Shola Meda, Awash, Harar and forces, commanded by Gen. Rodolpho Graziani, are encountering stubborn resistance all along the line.

Nasibu admitted the Ethiopians had lost heavily in resisting the advances of Graziani's "hell on wheels" columns, but he said there also were heavy losses on the Italian side.

Winship En Route Here For Puerto Rican Aid

Miami, Fla., April 21 (AP).—Gen. Blanton Winship, Governor of Puerto Rico, arrived here today by plane en route to Washington, where he will seek additional Federal aid for the island territory.

Conferences will be held with Cabinet and other Government officials, Winship said, in an effort to obtain funds for continuing the Puerto Rican agricultural relief and highway construction programs.

He also will appear before the Rivers and Harbors Congress to request money for improving the island's ports, principally the one at San Juan.

The Governor said the strength of the Nationalist movement in Puerto Rico had been "highly overrated," adding the political organization commanded only 5,000 followers of the island's 200,000 voters.

Veteran of Both Sides In 1861 Warfare Dies

Bogota, N. J., April 21 (AP).—John V. Bruder, 95, who fought for both the North and South in the War Between the States, died today at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Annie Ely.

Bruder, a native of Germany, lived in Baltimore at the outbreak of the war. He joined the Confederate Army and participated in the bombing of Fort Sumter. After two years he decided to join the Union forces and made his way back to Baltimore. He was captured by Union soldiers and jailed in Fort McHenry prison dspite his protests of allegiance to their cause.

President Lincoln pardoned Bruder and two weeks after his imprisonment he was wearing a Northern uniform. After the war, Bruder moved to Lancaster, Pa.

You Can't Arrest Me

failed to answer his name. If convicted, Zioncheck must pay a fine in addition to the collateral forfeiture.

Notified of the court's action by a reporter, Zioncheck grinned, leaned back in his office chair and remarked:

"I'm getting disturbed about this thing—I'm getting almost mad. Tell them I'm very ticklish and to leave me alone."

And a few minutes later, he pointed with pride at his new Packard roadster parked at the curb outside and laughed:

May Demand Trial.

"Can you imagine a couple of dumb cops trying to catch me in that thing?"

Asked what he intended to do about the attachment and pending speed charge, Zioncheck said:

"Well, if they serve the attachment legally—what I consider legally—I might accommodate them and go to court and demand a jury trial."

He was informed that District laws do not permit a jury trial on speeding charges.

"What do I care for a law that's unconstitutional?" he said, punctuating his remarks with swinging arms.

Until yesterday Zioncheck had refused to admit—or deny—that he was the one arrested by Eighth Precinct police. He even said he had received no "official notification" to appear in court.

But while talking to a reporter after the court's answer to his defiance, he exhibited a receipt for his $25 collateral. On this receipt was written the charge—"70 miles an hour"—and an order to be in court yesterday at 9:30 a. m. It was a regular receipt form used by police in all collateral cases and has always been understood by other defendants.

Bad Taste to Drive Fast.

"I find it is very bad taste to drive fast—it apparently irritates the police department."

Court attaches said the attachment would be sent to the Eighth Police Precinct for service in routine procedure. Zioncheck lives in Harvard Hall, 1650 Harvard street northwest, and it is expected he will be arrested within the next 48 hours.

Previously, the Washington legislator had said local authorities "wouldn't be dumb enough" to press charges against him. Suggestions that someone might have been seriously injured or even killed by his speeding escapade left Zioncheck cold.

"A good driver," he said, "can drive at 70 miles an hour with perfect safety—if he has the car under control. It isn't speed that causes accidents, it's the driver."

Baboon Got His Hat.

While he talked yesterday, Zioncheck told how he had loaned his high-powered car to a group of high school students who are visiting Washington from his home State.

"I told them to give the car an airing—just in case the police start to chase me around town again," he grinned. "And by the way, I'm fresh out of cash, so tell the cops to hold off for a month until I get some money out of the United States Treasury."

During his jaunt around the Zoo yesterday, Zioncheck stopped at the cage of a baboon. The animal grabbed the lawmaker's hat and refused to give it up.

"He's a great fellow—I've got him trained," said Zioncheck.

formerly the headquarters of Emperor Haile Selassie.

Pastry cooks from every province of Italy vied with one another today to determine who could create the most elaborate confections and win first place in the Fascist party's newly instituted "Olympics of Work."

Typographers Compete.

Automobile mechanics tinkered feverishly to assemble knocked-down motors in similar contests. Typographers pitted their skill against fellow workers in designing sample frontispieces for publications. Masons slapped mortar upon stones in an attempt to build a perfect arch in less time than competitors.

Research experts demonstrated processes and inventions for improving Italy's self-sufficiency. Farmers presented examples of their skill in caring for livestock and cultivating grain and vineyards.

The prize which all were seeking, each in his own trade category, was the title "Lictor of Labor for the Year XIV, Fascist Era." Such is the honor which eventually will be conferred on those who are judged best to exemplify that "unity between culture and toil" which the work games are designed to encourage.

In addition the competitors, like schoolboy athletes, hoped to win their letter—the "M" of Mussolini—and diplomas attesting their skill.

All entrants are between the ages of 18 and 28. All are members of the Fascist Party. The final elimination contests in the national finals will continue until May 24, when the winners will be announced and the awards distributed.

Catholic Conference Spurs Welfare Work

St. Louis, April 21 (AP).—The National Conference of Catholic Charities today called on the church's social agencies to "redouble their efforts in meeting the new problems growing out of or revealed by the depression."

A statement prepared by the Right Rev. Mgr. John O'Grady of Catholic University at Washington said that "while wage earners look to the Government to protect them against the major hazards that grow out of one industrial system, no amount of Government action can take the place of the more fundamental obligations of family life."

Catholic and other private agencies must continue to supplement efforts of the Government to build a relief program on a "neighborly basis," the statement said.

Posters Forecast New Italian Mobilization

Rome, April 21 (AP).—Posters stuck on the walls of cafes in the outlying districts of Rome publicly disclosed tonight that Premier Mussolini intends calling the nation into another armed mobilization, or "adunata," shortly.

The posters said: "The generous impetus of our fighters, nourished in the heroic climate of the revolution (Fascist), is crushing the last resistance of the barbaric enemy.

"A solemn hour for the destiny of the country is near. Hold yourselves in readiness to rush to headquarters of your group at the first signal for an adunata."

League Drafts New Sanctions Against Italy

Nation's Exports Reported Hard Hit by Penalties; Revolt Fear Rises.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Geneva, April 21.—Spurred by relentless British efforts to bring Italy to her knees through intensified League of Nations sanctions, the Committee of Eighteen's board of experts, the "sanctions general staff," met today to devise new penalties against Premier Benito Mussolini's government.

K. I. Westman, of Sweden, chairman of the experts, announced the Bank of Italy has lost half of its gold reserve since sanctions were voted last year. He indicated that ultimately League penalties, if continued and intensified, may prevent Italy from buying essential materials abroad.

Many believed, however, that os the experts met to examine statistics recounting the effect of penalties on Italian trade, their efforts to bolster further the sanctions front would prove forlorn.

Among items examined were new figures showing that sanctions have hit Italian exports hard. The British, through Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, succeeded in convoking the committee of experts to show how sanctions may be continued and to halt a possible revolt on the sanctions front.

Many nations holding membership in the League admittedly are becoming restive against sanctions because their exporters and importers are suffering heavy losses and because of fears of Italian retaliation.

Coincident with the experts meeting, the Committee of 18 published its report to the League Council.

It shows that the imports of 30 countries from Italy and Italian colonies fell to $5,860,600 during February, 1936, compared to $14,222,100 during the corresponding period of 1935.

Exports of 30 countries to Italy and Italian colonies in February of this year dropped to $10,022,800, compared to $10,234,800 during the same month of 1935.

The report said that latest figures show the effect of sanctions "is becoming progressively apparent."

Brothers Now Father and Son—By Marriage

Los Angeles, April 21 (AP).—The Lightner Brothers, of Kenton, Ohio, became father and son by marriage today, while the Bladen brothers, of Los Angeles, were planning the same thing for themselves.

In Kenton, John Lightner, jr., 34, married Mrs. Paul Shields, 39, and his brother, Andrew, 25, married Mrs. Shields' 20-year-old daughter, Laverna.

Here Mrs. Ruby Pederson, 37, applied for a license to wed Harvey V. Bladen, 25, while her daughter, Olive, 18, sought a license to marry Harvey's brother, Orville, 23. The Pederson-Bladen marriages will be Saturday.

100,000 Join Striker Ranks Through Spain

Government Seeks Solution; Jails Crowded With Rightist Prisoners.

Madrid, April 21.—Strikes involving more than 100,000 workers in various parts of Spain caused the government increasing concern tonight as measures were sought to compromise labor difficulties.

One thousand workers, employed in the Pirelli automobile tire factory, at Manresa, were thrown out of jobs when the management decided to shut down rather than accede to demands of the personnel for wage increases.

In Corunna the jails were full of Rightists, some 450 having been arrested on charges of engaging in anti-republican activities.

A general strike, on the heels of one at Almeria called last midnight, threatened at Huelva after the walkout of 40,000 miners.

Almeria's strike spread into various parts of the province.

At Huelva the labor syndicate said that unless the miners were placated in their demands for shorter hours and more pay by tomorrow all industry in the province would be paralyzed.

The Pirelli factory workers had been on strike over the week-end in an effort to enforce their demands.

The government announced a subsidy would be extended to Andalusian rail workers who threatened to strike unless bonuses they claimed due them were paid.

Rail operators said their income at present did not permit a continuation of the bonus system.

The government also announced it was sending immediately 10,000,000 pesetas to Asturias to launch a public works program for the relief of unemployment, which was reported serious there.

Minor disorders occurred as the day for selection of presidential electors, who will act jointly with Parliament in the choosing of a president, drew near. The 473 electors will be chosen Sunday and the successor to former President Alcala Zamora—ousted by the new Leftist-controlled Parliament—on May 10.

Unconfirmed reports said several persons were seriously wounded in a political clash in the town of Valedera, Province of Leon. In was shot to death by an unidentified assailant.

N. Y. Noise Makers Now Must Pay Fines

New York, April 21 (AP).—The board of aldermen today passed an ordinance making noisy persons liable to fines.

The ordinance provides for graduated fines ranging from $1 to $1 for offenders against the city's nocturnal tranquility.

Listed as offenses are inconsiderate applications of radios, phonographs, musical instruments and automobile horns, noises caused by vehicles in disrepair, noises caused by animals, steam whistles, hawking by peddlers, and the use of loud speakers, drums or other instruments for attracting people to any performance or sale.

Gwathmey Memorial Cu To Be Presented at Show

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., April 21.—James B. Townsend, of Amissville, will present a silver bowl in the alumni class of the annual Stuyvesant horse show, to be held May 1, in memory of J. Temple Gwathmey, jr., of New York, a former student of the school.

Gwathmey spent a great deal of time in Warrenton and Fauquier County as a youth, and was one of the founders of the now famous Junior Hunt Club which features the annual pony show. He also gave a challenge cup to the Junior Hunt Pony Show Association, which is still contested, a number of the riders having two legs on it.

Congress Honors Dead at Services

Seven members of Congress who died within the last year were memorialized yesterday in special House services.

Members of their families attended as the solemn service was conducted from the Speaker's dais banked with lilies and palms.

As each name was called, a red rose was placed in a vase by Representative Mary Norton, of New Jersey, of the committee on memorials.

Speeches of eulogy were read by Representatives Guyer, of Kansas, and O'Connor of New York.

Music interspersed the hourlong service. The two Senators honored were the Late Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, and Thomas D. Schall, of Minnesota.

The House members who have died were Representatives Carden, of Kentucky; True, of Ohio; Kimball, of Michigan; Lloyd, of Washington, and Rudd, of New York.

* WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, APRIL 22, 1936 18

D. C. Drops 4,180 Cases From Relief

March Report Shows 40 Pct. Reduction in Public Assistance.

5,998 Still on Rolls on April 1, the Lowest in 3½ Years.

There were 4180 cases dropped from public relief rolls during March, according to an analysis of the monthly report of Miss M. Alice Hill, director of the public assistance division, made public yesterday by Elwood Street, director of public welfare.

The reduction, Street said, represented more than 40 per cent of the case load of the division.

"This," he added, "is the largest proportionate reduction since the public assistance was established in August, 1932, and brought the number of cases handled at the close of the month down to 5,998, the lowest number in three and one-half years.

"This reduction was due primarialy to the dropping from relief at the end of the month 4,138 cases in which there were employable persons and this in turn was due to Congressional failure to appropriate sufficient funds for relief for the balance of the year."

10,178 Cases March 1.

There were, at the beginning of the month, 10,178 cases on the division rolls and 2,121 new cases were handled during the month, making a total of 12,299. The total was reduced, however, by closing 5,814 cases by district workers and 487 cases which were combined with the general relief cases, making a total decrease of 6,301. This left 5,998 cases on hand at the end of the month, it was said.

"Only 4,664 of these cases, however, were receiving relief at the end of the month." Street pointed out. "Of these 178 had been accepted for consideration for relief; investigation had not been completed to the extent to justify the granting of relief.

"In addition, the public assistance diviison had at the end of the month 224 cases receiving mothers' pensoins under the home care act, as well as 53 cases in which applications for mothers' pensions were being considered.

$43,767 Is Expanded.

"Out of the total number of home care and general relief cases, 1,585 at the end of the month were aid for dependent children cases, acording to the social security act for which the District was entitled to one-third reimbursement up to $18 a month expended for the first child in the family, and $12 for each other child in the family. These cases included 4,192 children under 16 years of age.

"A total of $43,767 was expended in behalf of these children under terms of the social security act for which one-third reimbursement could be expected. Of the families 444 had one child, 466 two children, 322 three children, 187 four children, 106 five children, and 90 more than five children.

"Included also in the case load at the end of the month were 1,878 applications for old-age assistance on which investigation was being certified and for whom payment by the District disbursing office was pending. The case at the end of the month also included 112 persons who had applied for aid for the needy blind."

Employable, Denied Aid.

While men with families present the most tragic cases of need in their applications to Community Chest agencies as a result of the curtailment of public relief, there are other cases equally worthy of attention and equally in need, according to Miss Florence Murray, of the Catholic Charities. She cites the instance of a man, nearly 60, who has been a resident of the District for 27 years.

He has been a widower for many years and recently has been confined to a hospital. He saw some service overseas in the World War and never has been on relief. His recent illness limits his capabilities to clerical work and he has been unable to find anything in that line. He applied to the Public Assistance Division for help, but as he was termed an "employable" his request was refused. He is more interested in obtaining sufficient clothing to maintain himself in a neat and cleanly state than he is in food.

Northwest Area Rezoned as Bar To Apartments

Commission Rules Only One-Family Houses May Be Built.

Only detached one-family residences may be constructed in a considerable area rezoned by the District Zoning Commission yesterday following a hearing.

The area was zoned "A" restricted 40-foot area and is bounded by University avenue, Woodway lane, Forty-ninth and Quebec streets, Fordham road and Massachusetts avenue northwest. It had been zoned residential 40 and 60 foot area.

Rezoning of the area was designed to prevent construction of apartment houses or other than detached homes in the area. Roger Whiteford, attorney for W. C. and A. N. Miller, the real estate company which has developed much of the area, urged the change be made.

Henry A. Donovan, of the American University Park Citizens Association, also favored the restricted zoning.

The citizens' association also went on record as favoring another change which would have extended the "A" restricted area west to the District line, Massachusetts avenue, Dalecarlia Reservoir, the restricted area north of Rockwood parkway and University avenue. This change was opposed by Whiteford. His clients, he said, had developed much of the area and the character of the development should be sufficient assurance to the commission of what future use would be made of the property. The first of the two changes had been proposed by the Miller company, the second by the commission. The commission took the second under advisement.

Myron Walker, president of the Glover Park Citizens Association, urged the commission to extend the first commercial, 60-foot, "C" area district of 2324 Wisconsin avenue. The change was desired to permit carrying out of plans to construct a $100,000 movie theater by Warner Brothers.

The commission took under advisement that proposition and another to change to residential, 40-foot, "A" area two squares between Thirty-ninth, V, Forty-second and W streets.

Elimination of consent provisions from the zoning regulations is to be considered at another public hearing by the commission at 11 a. m. today. The change was considered at a hearing recently, but was taken under further study by the commission as a result of testimony.

District Youth Wins 4th Prize In Art Contest

Peter De Anna Only Local Entrant in Scholastic's Select Circle.

Peter De Anna, 15, Central High School student, has been awarded fourth prize in the 1936 scholastic awards, sponsored by Scholastic, American High School weekly, for his drawing, "Laborer."

De Anna was the only Washington student to take a major award in the twelfth art and literary competition conducted by Scholastic. His picture has been accepted for the ninth international scholastic art exhibit, which opens tonight in the Fine Arts Galleries of Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh. His teacher is Miss M. E. Griggs.

Dr. H. A. Smith, principal of Central High School, was chairman of the teachers' committee which recently recommended that Scholastic be dropped in this city's schools because its editorial policy was "too definite."

10 American University Debaters Get Prizes

Ten American University students received prizes for excellence in debating at the annual debates banquet last night at the college dining hall, addressed by Representative Ernest Lundeen, of Minnesota.

Democratic Vote Battle In D. C. Seen

Marshall Is Suggested for Party Post; Cotter Also Favored.

Voteless Washington may see a stirring political battle next month. The occasion will be the primary election conducted by the local Democratic organization, and the issue will be the veteran Democratic leader here—National Committeeman John P. Costello.

A faction of the local Democratic organization would like to see Costello ousted as national committeeman. Whether this faction has decided on somebody to oppose him in the primary is not yet known, but two names are being suggested—George P. Marshall and Joseph J. Cotter.

Marshall was a member of the District of Columbia delegation to the 1932 Democratic national convention in Chicago, and tried unsuccessfully to break away from the unit rule and cast his ballot for some candidate other than Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Pioneered for Roosevelt.

Costello and John P. Colpoys, chairman of the local Democratic State committee, were pioneer Roosevelt-for-President men. They came out for him two years in advance of the Chicago convention.

Colpoys is now United States Marshal here.

Costello, for all his work in behalf of President Roosevelt, was ignored when the time came to appoint men to what always have been regarded as political posts here. In the appointment of District Commissioners, his recommendations were ignored. This likewise was true with respect to the post of district attorney.

For this reason, among others, Costello's friends are prepared to turn out in large numbers in the May primary in an effort to return him as national committeeman.

Bill Pending.

There is a bill pending in Congress which would reform the methods of conducting primaries here, but it is doubtful if it will be a law by the time ballots are cast next month.

The District of Columbia, though its natives may not vote for President, is allowed to cast six votes in the Democratic National Convention that selects a nominee for President. There appears to be no doubt that these six votes will again be cast this time for President Roosevelt.

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman in all likelihood again will be elected Democratic national committeewoman.

Sousa Honor

Southeast Citizens Want His Name for Bridge.

Should a new bridge be built to replace the old Pennsylvania avenue bridge the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations want it to be called "The John Phillip Sousa Memorial Bridge."

Orrin J. Davy, secretary of the council, presented a resolution asking the council to appoint a special committee to begin work at once to obtain the name of the great bandmaster who led the Marine Band for many years and who wrote the Famous Washington Post March, for the bridge which may be erected soon.

"The bridge," he said, "was selected as a monument to Sousa because he lived in the Southeast section and played about the land on which the northern end will be anchored.

"The same spot," he said, "was the site of the 'o'le swimming hole' often frequented by the bandmaster when a boy."

Vernis Absher, chairman of the streets and bridges committee for the council, was appointed head of the committee. Other members will selected by Absher.

A committee was appointed to obtain a new library for Anacostia. An appropriation of $10,000 to purchase a site for a library in Anacostia was dropped from the District budget by the Budget Bureau.

Parking Ban Called Harm To Business

Allen Urges, However, That It Be Tried for Four Months.

Prohibition of all parking in the downtown congested zone is "impracticable at the present time," Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said yesterday.

Commissioner George E. Allen had publicly advocated the parking ban earlier in the day. It would prove unpopular, he agreed, but he urged it be tried out for a period of four months. He proposed as an alternative that existing restrictions be removed from parking in the downtown area.

"We may come to prohibiting all parking in the downtown area in the future," Commissioner Hazen said. "I think we will come to it some time. But you can't jump into such a thing just by saying let's do it."

Oppose Ban.

Merchants in the area frequently have voiced their opposition to a parking ban, Hazen pointed out, adding that such a ban might radically and permanently affect the downtown business area and the commercial life of the city.

"Where would the people go?" he asked. "Where would the 100,000 Government employes go with their cars? There just aren't garage facilities available for the cars."

William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, is engaged in a survey to discover what would be the effect on business of a ban on parking on arterial streets and in the downtown area during morning and afternoon rush hours, Hazen said.

Business Interference.

Parking should be prohibited on the flow side of all arterial highways during the rush hours of the day, the Public Utilities Commission has urged. This proposal already has been opposed by members of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association. They have protested the ban would seriously interfere with loading and unloading of their delivery vehicles and otherwise interfere with business.

The proposed rush-hour ban would, in general, apply to heavily traveled streets from 8 a. m. to 9:30 a. m. and from 4 p. m. to 6 p. m.

The general parking ban proposed by Commissioner Allen would be effective from 8 a. m. until 6 p. m. He proposed it as a measure of safety, he said, and not as a means to expedite the flow of traffic. He suggested that Van Duzer submit a report on his proposal.

Roberts Doubts Transit Union Plan's Efficacy

Asserts Physical Merger May Not Be Completed Under Contract.

Protest because the Public Utilities Commission has not required corporate as well as physical merger of the Washington Rapid Transit and the Capital Transit companies, as a condition precedent to approval of the purchase of the bus company by the car company, was expressed in a memorandum filed with the commission yesterday by William A. Roberts, people's counsel.

The commission, in a letter made public last week, set a price of $475,912.87 for acquisition of North American control of the bus company, which also is controlled by the North American, and required physical merger of the two companies. The terms have been accepted and a new contract embodying them is to be submitted soon.

There are, however, 375 minority bus company shares outstanding and these many be used to interfere with consummation of a complete merger of the two companies, Roberts said in explaining the importance of a corporate as well as a physical merger of the two concerns.

Neither does the commission's conditions specify the terms of the physical merger and "does not disclose if this physical merger is to be effected by a rental agreement or by the sale of the equipment and property of the Washington Rapid Transit Co. to the Capital Transit Co.," Roberts said.

Consummation of the purchase and physical merger of the companies will not affect present fares, commission members said in commenting on Roberts' memorandum. Roberts asked that the W. R. T. fares be reduced to street car fares.

Bus fares now are 10 cents cash with weekly passes for $1.25. When the two companies are merged the same fares will apply, Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the commission, said. Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman, pointed out that patrons of the bus line would have transfer privileges to the entire Capital Transit system. Bus passengers totaled 4,50,000 last year.

No change is to be made in the fares, however, until after a public hearing.

New Signal

Automatic Arm Protects Accident Scenes.

A new-type signaling device designed to control traffic near the scene of accidents was installed in two traffic division cruisers yesterday.

The machine which operates on storage batteries has an automatic red signal light which vibrates on an arm. The light can be controlled to either detour or slow traffic.

Capt. Milton D. Smith, commander of traffic division, said the devices will be placed in the street to take the place of the customary policeman with a red lantern.

Board of Trade Will Hear Talk By C. of C. Head

Sibley Scheduled to Give Principal Address at Election Meeting.

A talk by Harper Sibley, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and the election of new members of the board of directors will be the highlights of the annual meetnig of the Washington Board of Trade tonight at 7:30 in the Mayflower Hotel. The meeting will be the last until next October.

To fill the vacancy of 10 members of the board of directors, the following 17 nominees will be voted upon:

George Plitt, president, George Plitt, Sr., Inc.

C. Melvin Sharpe, executive assistant, Potomac Electric Power Co.

Edward F. Colloday, lawyer.

Col. L. C. Crawford, Travelers Insurance Co.

Herman F. Carl, president, Call Carl, Inc.

Harry Blake, president, Barber & Ross, Inc.

There are 30 directors of the Board of Trade. Each year 10 of the directors are retired and 10 elected. Elected by vote of the membership, no director is permitted to serve more than two consecutive terms, thus insuring against the monopoly of the directorships by the 30 men.

John Saul, retiring president, will preside.

Huguenots Decorate Soldier's Tomb Today

The Huguenot Society of the Founders of Manakin in the Colony of Virginia, Mrs. John Franklin McDougall, national president, will present their national insignia at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at 12:30 p. m. today.

Col. Charles G. Mortimer, in charge of Arlington National Cemetery, will accept the insignia.

At noon, Mrs. McDougall, who also is president of the National Society Colonial Dames of the Seventeenth Century, State of New York, will present the insignia of that order to Col. Mortimer.

3 for Board To Choose Air Site Named

Roosevelt Signs Bill and Picks Sultan, Delano and Westover.

Other Six Members Will Be Chosen by Garner and Byrns.

President Roosevelt late yesterday signed the District airport commission bill and appointed three of the nine commissioners who are authorized to recommend a location for a jointly owned Federal-District airport that will hold its own with the national airports of the world.

The three appointees are:

Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Col. Dan I. Sultan, District Engineer Commissioner.

Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Air Corps, U. S. Army.

The other six members of the commission are expected to be named promptly, three by the Vice President and three by Speaker Byrns. The commission then will set to work immediately.

Senate members are expected to be Senator King, chairman of the District Committee; Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, and Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont.

Norton Cited.

House members probably will comprise Chairman Norton of the House District Committee; Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and either Representative Cole, of New York, or Dirksen, of Illinois, as the minority member.

The commission is authorized to report its findings to Congress at the earliest practicable date, and sponsors of the act hope that the recommendations made be submitted before adjournment.

An appropriation of $10,000 to employ technical services is authorized in the airport act and is expected to be made available in the next deficiency bill.

Just what procedure will be followed by the commission in conducting its investigation will be determined by the members themselves.

Because of the abundance of data available on prospective airport sites, it is believed that an extended inquiry will not be necessary.

Foremost Sites.

The two foremost sites are Gravelly Point and the Washington Airport, but both are so embroiled in local controversy that members on both sides of the Capitol favor the selection of an entirely new site to prevent another deadlock.

Two of the President's appointees in the past have favored Gravelly Point. They are Delano and Sultan. The Army Air Corps, however, has been inclined to oppose that site because of its proximity to Bolling Field.

Prospective members from the Senate and House have been rather equally divided in the past, although all insist they have open minds to all suggested sites.

Girl, 15, Takes Poison; Condition Is Critical

Margaret L. Morris, 15-year-old schoolgirl, was in a critical condition last night at Gallinger Hospital, after she took poison in a downtown motion-picture theater yesterday afternoon.

The girl collapsed in the theater. She told police of taking several poison tablets, but would give no reason except that she "wanted to die." Her home is at 719 Minnesota avenue southeast.

Novel Vocation Requires Keen Ear for Tunes

By the United Press.

Hollywood, April 21.—Steve Pasternacki knows more than 100,000 songs and learns new ones every day, but he never sings or plays.

Pasternacki is a "music watchman," hired by a film studio to sit in a small office all day long listening to tunes the studio proposes to use in pictures, as insurance against infringement suits.

Whenever a bar or phrase of music to which the studio does not own copyright pops up, Steve pounces on it like a terrier, and drags it out of the score.

Besides knowing the legal status of countless melodies, Steve boasts an exhaustive knoweldge of international music copyright law.

Strange Copyrights.

If the song was written in America, he must be sure it is more than 54 years old. American copyrights hold good for 27 years, and can be renewed for a similar period.

An English song beyongs exclusively to its writer until the fiftieth anniversary of his death, but in Spain the composer's rights are protected until he has been dead 80 years. Some South American nations grant perpetual copyrights.

In France, copyrights are good 50 years, less the period of the World War, which for some obscure reason is not counted. Since nobody fully understands Russian copyright law, studios consistently fight shy of Soviet music.

Hot Diggity—Odd Eyes!

Pursued by hot dogs, Chester Morris and Marian Marsh are gunning for Erle Kenton, who directs them in Columbia's "queer money." Script called for a series of shots of Morris and March munching the ball park delicacies, and Kenton kept them at it all morning. Came lunch time, and the directors sent trays to their dressing rooms—two plates piled high with dogs.

Margaret Lindsay has "chameleon eyes." Normally hazel, they change to green, blue or brown, depending on the costume she is wearing, lighting, or colors of the surrounding set. In blue and white films they photograph dark, but in Technicolor, blue.

New Air Mark Set By Movie Producer

New York, April 21 (AP).—Howard Hughes, the Hollywood Movie Producer, established his third national air-speed record today when he set his low-wing monoplane down at Floyd Bennett Field just 4 hours 21 minutes and 32 seconds after he took off from Miami, Fla.

Hughes, 33-year-old aviation enthusiast, set a new West-East transcontinental air mark last January 14 when he flew from Burbank, Calif., to Newark, N. J., in 9 hours 27 minutes and 10 seconds, eclipsing the previous record of 10:01.51 established by Roscoe Turner in September, 1934.

Hughes also took the national speed record for land planes over a closed course when he flew 352.46 miles an hour near Santa Ana, Calif., last summer.

Today's flight, airport officials said, was the first attempt to establish any official record from Miami to New York.

An Eastern transport plane which flew the route last year in 5 hours and 30 minutes, landing at Newark, N. J., was credited generally with the unofficial record.

Popular Comedy to Be Played Tonight

The young people of the Washington City Church of the Brethren will present Lewis Beach's play, "The Goose Hangs High," tonight at St. Paul's Academy, 1423 V street northwest. The play is a comedy-drama of modern domestic life. Ruth Wine and Harold Bovey play the leading roles of Eunice and Bernard Ingals.

The action takes place in the home of a typical American family during the school holidays. This drama was successful on the New York stage, and has been a popular one with amateurs for the past decade.

About The Showshops

THE extraordinary interest that has been aroused by the presentation of the M-G-M spectacle of "The Great Ziegfeld," as a road-show attraction at the National Theater, should not be permitted to dull the eyes of the faithful to so-called "legitimate" stage attractions that are still to come to fill out one of the Capital's most notable seasons of living drama in a decade or more.

BELL.

One of yesterday afternoon's welcome visitors was Howard Herrick, one of the genuinely distinguished representatives of a breed of publicists who have brought luster to their profession down through the years. Mr. Herrick, last a visitor in behalf of Eva Le Gallienne's "Alice in Wonderland" and "Romeo and Juliet," now comes to town as a harbinger of Mme. Alla Nazimova's springtime approach. Nazimova will be seen in Ibsen's "Ghosts" on the stage of the National the week of Monday, May 4.

Ibsen, it was recalled in the course of a "fanning bee" of some length, is not a new adventure for Nazimova. Veterans of the theater will recall that more than a quarter of a century ago, when her American stellar career was just beginning, she was seen at the Belasco in "Hedda Gabler," "The Doll's House" and "The Master Builder." Five years later, or so, she played the National in a dramatization of Robert Hichens' "Bella Donna," in which she was supported by Charles Bryant, a member of the cast supporting Evelyn Laye on the same stage in "Sweet Aloes" earlier this season. Her last appearance on a local stage was as O-Lan in the Theater Guild's short-lived production of Pearl S. Buck's "The Good Earth," in which she was supported, in turn, by Earle Larimore and Claude Rains.

Mr. Herrick recalls also that Nazimova made her mark in motion pictures, too, having been a Metro star of the first rank in the middle and late 1900s. What he did not remember, if he ever knew, was that the Rialto Theater presented Nazimova as star of its inaugural screen attraction, when it first threw open its doors to the Washington public in the winter of 1918. The picture was "Eye for Eye."

Nazimova is reported to be at her best in "Ghosts"—which is very good, indeed. Her performance as Mrs. Alving has been acclaimed one of the finest acting triumphs of the season by the foremost critics throughout the country. The tour of "Ghosts" is now drawing near its close, having extended to the Pacific Coast and back.

"THE MOON'S OUR HOME." Having viewed at a private screening yesterday afternoon the early portions of this enlivening subject that were not "bootlegged" at what was supposed to have been an unspooling of Al Jolson's "The Singing Kid" a fortnight or so ago, it is possible now to substantiate our earlier guess that here is one of those gay, romantic frivolities that belong in the same category as "Forsaking All Others" or "I Live My Life."

Margaret Sullavan, cast as a wildly temperamental young star of the movies, and Henry Fonda, impersonating a lionized young author of romantic fiction, have the leads in the frenzied, and at times hilarious, action in which the piece abounds. In fact, for a good deal of the footage they are the entire picture, no other players participating in scenes which they make interesting and amusing, unassisted. In others, they are accorded happy support by Henrietta Crosman, Beulah Bondi, Charles Butterworth, Margaret Hamilton, still remembered for that gorgeous piece of comedy grape-eating in "Another Language," on the stage; Spencer Charters, Lucien Littlefield and Brandon Hurst, to mention only a few.

This will be found a sprightly and spontaneous companion-piece for Ray Noble's orchestral interlude on the bill opening Friday at Loew's Fox Theater. It may be thought by some that Miss Sullavan dives headfirst into at least one too many snowdrifts, but that is a minor matter. She waves her feet and er-ahem, that is to say, legs in the air with rare Delsartean grace!

* * * *

Our admonitory advice about securing seats early for "The Great Ziegfeld" seems not to have been ill-founded. The indefatigable Master Norman Pyle, in town to engineer the cinematic cymbal-whanging, calls attention to the line that has wound around the National lobby, out onto E street and almost to the corner of Thirteenth, almost continuously since Monday morning as tangible evidence of the spirited demand for pasteboards. There are, to be sure, still some desirable seats left for the current week's showing, but they are going rapidly and the need still is for speed, if you don't want to be disappointed. By the time the final count is added up, the week will have been practically a sellout—as it deserves to be.

* * * *

The Belasco Theater will be dark for a matter of some three hours on Friday afternoon of this week, preliminary to the first Washington unreeling of "Ecstasy," the controversial film finally admitted to this country for exhibition purposes. The box office will close at 5:30 p. m. on Friday, following the final projection of "Catherine the Great."

"Ecstasy" will be accorded only one premiere presentation on Friday night, beginning at 8:45 o'clock. The box office will be reopened at 7 o'clock for the sale of tickets for this performance. No seats will be reserved and none will be sold beyond the seating capacity of the house. It is reported that tickets already are being bought in advance, which seems to presage capacity attendance.

* * * *

Astrological Note.

If one were addicted to that sort of thing, it might be said in reverting briefly to yesterday's preview, that Miss Sullavan seems sort of Fonda the man in "The Moon," they having been married once and divorced ditto!

Idle 'Pitch Camp' In Jersey Capitol

Trenton, N. J., April 21 (AP).—A small delegation of the unemployed "camped" in the New Jersey Assembly chamber today after the Legislature adjourned without providing relief funds.

Ray Cooke, State chairman of the Workers Alliance of New Jersey, organization of the unemployed, indicated they would remain until the Legislature acted. He distributed his poorly dressed group about in the seats of the assemblymen and announced that more were being brought by truck from Camden, Burlington and Essex counties to take up their peaceful occupation of the statehouse.

Cooke said food would be supplied from the Trenton headquarters of the alliance and that blankets, pillows and other needs of the "campers" would be provided for.

Parker Sweet, statehouse custodian, said he probably would obtain an opinion from Attorney General David T. Wilentz whether the group could be evicted from the chamber.

Senator Thomas to Head Harvard Club Speakers

Senator Elbert D. Thomas, Utah, will head a group of speakers before the Harvard Club of Washington at the annual banquet tonight at the University Club.

Others on the program include Leigh Hoodley, professor of zoology at Harvard, and Ralph H. Hallett, secretary of the local Harvard club and vice president of the Associated Harvard Clubs.

Music will be furnished by the Chevy Chase Chanters, directed by Robert E. Kline, Harvard '21.

Four Held as Tire Vandals Deny Guilt

Four taxi operators accused of slashing nearly 100 tires on Diamond cabs and private automobiles pleaded not guilty and demanded a jury trial yesterday when arraigned in Police Court.

The men, arrested Sunday, had 45 charges of destroying private property placed against them Monday. There were only seven informations filed in court.

These men were Thomas F. Finnan, jr., 27, of 2532 Twelfth street northwest; Joseph J. Barry, 26, of 1631 A street northeast; Dalton W. Stroud, 26, of 1000 Rittenhouse street northwest, and Emmit B. Harler, 29, of 930 K street northwest. Bond was set at $2,000 each. All but Finnan were unable to secure bail and were locked up.

Father of Beard Aid Held in Gaming Net

Three men, including the father of one of Sam Beard's confederates who was recently sentenced to from one to three years in jail on a gambling conspiracy charge, were arrested yesterday in a raid in the 800 block of Eleventh street northwest.

The men, Meyer Ehrlich, 31, of the 1000 block of E street southeast; Jacob E. Ehrlich, 36, of the 900 block Fourth street northeast, and Michael Kaplan, 59, of the 1000 block of H street northwest, were charged with setting up a gaming table. Kaplan is the father of Sidney Kaplan, one of Beard's associates.

Police Sergt. George Deyoe, who led the raid, said the place was operating under the guise of a cigar store. Several hundred "numbers" and racing slips were confiscated, he said. Five other men arrested in the "spot" were released to appear as witnesses.

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, April 21.

ROCHELLE HUDSON is playing a scene for the flicker "Poppy." W. C. Fields is not working this day. He is at home, ill. Director Eddie Sutherland gives the order and Rochelle turns on the acting.

ROCHELLE HUDSON

As I watch Miss Hudson emote, I notice a visitor on the set — Norman Krasna, the scenario writer. But since "Poppy" isn't his picture, I wonder what he is doing on the set. Then I take a glance at Rochelle and believe I have the answer.

After the "take," an assistant director tells me that this is the third time Krasna has been on the set today. I take out my pencil and paper and make a note for the column: "Norman Krasna and Rochelle Hudson don't care who knows that they care."

I speak to Norman and make a nice comment about Rochelle. He answers: "Look at that old fashonied dressing table with the wash basin on it. A real antique." There is passion in Krasna's voice.

He walks about the set touching, I should say caressing, antiques. "They're real . . . they're genuine, and they belong to the property department. They won't sell. I'm trying to buy antiques like these for my new house."

I take out my pencil and paper and scratch out the note about him and Rochelle. Krasna is really queer for antiques. As for me, I still believe Rochelle Hudson is more appealing, and when Krasna gets over his schoolboy crush on antique furniture I'm certain he'll agree.

* * * *

Now from antique furniture to a dog act. "Lightning," the dog, is doing his tricks for Director David Butler, and you'll see them in the flicked, "White Fang."

Lightning doesn't get stage fright and he isn't camera shy. He is almost an old timer in the talkies, and now he is getting his first chance at stardom. Lightning appeared in "The Case of the Howling Dog," "Wings in the Dark" and several others. He is a well trained dog and seems to be aware that he must give a performance. Often, and this is unusual for an animal in flickers, he does a scene in one take.

When Lightning plays a scene, his trainer and owner, Earl Johnson, is on the set. Johnson stands hidden out of the focus of the camera. Director Butler gives the signal for the scene. Lightning appears to know that the camera is turning. He looks toward Johnson for his instruction. Director Butler tells Johnson and he signals Lightning.

Johnson sometimes instructs by a sign or he may shout the order, when it is a silent take.

By signal, Johnson tells Lightning what to do by holding a tennis ball in his hand. Johnson explains this by the fact that Lightning was trained in this fashion. For example: Lightning is supposed to leap at the villain, John Carradine. Before the camera turns, Johnson pretends to put the tennis ball inside the lapel of Carradine's coat, the camera turns. Lightning gets the signal and leaps for the ball. Johnson then holds up the tennis ball and Lightning marches toward him. But the camera has recorded what it wants, Lightning leaping at the villain.

* * * *

Pat O'Brien and Margaret Lindsay have just completed doing a scene for the flicker, "Public Enemy's Wife." Director Nick Grinde is arranging the new set-up. There are many tourists on the set. In fact, it is a larger audience watching here than there are in many theaters. A double feature attraction is not needed to lure an audience on a set.

O'Brien and Lindsay are to be sitting at a table in the next scene. An assistant director calls a man and a woman, stand-ins, to sit at the table so the light can be arranged properly. Director Grinde turns away from Cameraman George Barnes, starts talking to the electricians, and notices the man and the woman sitting at the table. "What are you doing there?" Director Grinde asks. The man and woman answer that they were told to sit there. The assistant director had mistaken two visitors for stand-ins and they were delighted. They believe they're in the movies now.

* * * *

Myrna Loy holds a pair of silk pink step-ins and a framed photograph of Warner Baxter in her hand. She is playing a scene for the flicker. "To Marry—With Love," and John Cromwell is directing. Miss Loy uses a pair of her own step-ins for props. Completing this sequence, the property men bring a large bed onto the set. Director Cromwell explains that in the flicker Loy and Baxter have been married for ten years. But the censors are fussy about bed scenes.

I talk to Myrna Loy about her performance in "The Great Ziegfeld," and ask if she heard from Billie Burke. Myrna answers that Billie Burke sent her a photograph of herself taken when she met Florenz Ziegfeld, and on it is inscribed: "To Myrna—when I was you . . . Billie Burke."

At least, this is the conception of the city of the future set forth by H. G. Wells and Alexander Korda, English producer, in "Things to Come," the film version of Mr. Wells' book, "The Shape of Things to Come," to be seen for the first time publicly in the Capital as chief screen attraction at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning on Friday of this week. Believe it or not, the glass tube running up the left center of the picture is an elevator shaft! In this imaginative subject the principal role of Cabal is played with fine understanding and skill by Raymond Massey, a recent visitor in Washington.

Gary Cooper in his latest flicker, calls attention to the idiosyncrasies of people . . . One is a knuckle cracker, another is an "O" filler—that is, with a pencil he fills in and blackens the spaces in the letter "O" wherever it occurs . . . On the screen, it gets a howl from the audience because it is accurate reporting of something that every member of the audience has done.

PEGGY JOYCE.

I've tried to recall some of the similar things Broadwayites are guilty of . . . Jack Benny is a cigar-band pusher . . . He moves the band up and down the cigar while he talks . . . George Raft is a belt-hitcher-upper . . . Johnny Dundee is a toothpick chewer, with a rotary motion . . . Laurence Stallings is a window-looker-outer . . . Place him in any room, in any conference, and Stallings will move to the window always . . . George Burns, of Burns and Allen, is an upper-lip-wetter . . . Bugs Baer is a tablecloth artist . . . Mae Murray is a toe-tapper . . . Jay C. Flippen is a nose rubber . . . Benny Fields is a cane twirler . . . Bert Lahr is a button-twister . . . Lionel Atwill is a nose twitcher . . . Lou Holtz is an ear-lobe puller, always yanking at his ear while thinking . . . Jimmy Walker has a habit of looking down at his nails and surveying them when he talks . . . Babe Herman always squirted a discharge of tobacco juice on a bat before using it.

Anatole Friedland is a pyramid-sketcher . . . Sit with him at a table and when you leave you'll find that he has been sketching pyramids on the tablecloth . . . Thousands of New Yorkers are mustache painters . . . They draw mustaches on the girls in the subway ads, and some of the work would do credit to Sert or James Montgomery Flagg . . . Gracie Allen, of Burns and Allen, is a cellophane-saver . . . In the midst of a conversation she will move away from you to pick up a piece of cellophane . . . What she does with the stuff, I don't know . . . Mrs. Freeman Gosden, wife of Amos of Amos 'n Andy, is a collector of match covers . . . Eddie Collins, in a crucial stage of a ball game, always removed the gum from his mouth and stuck it on the top of his cap.

Jimmy Powers, The News sports editor, is a tie twister . . . He moves his tie back and forth as he talks to you . . . Peggy Hopkins Joyce is a champagne-cork-tapper . . . When the cork is removed from a bottle, Peggy takes it and quite unconsciously keeps tapping it on the table . . . Claudette Colbert is a tune-hummer . . . George M. I've never seen him come to a night club table without either (a) kissing the girls, or (b) hugging them . . . And it's not work, if you can get it.

Jack Pearl is a cheek-pincher . . . Al H. Woods always addresses you as "sweetheart" . . . Daniel Frohman is a beard-massager . . . Teddy Hayes, who trained Dempsey, has a mania for long distance telephoning . . . He'll leave you two or three times in the space of an ordinary conversation to rush to a phone booth . . . Benny Rubin, Benny Fields, Willie Howard, Buddy Rogers, Milton Berle, Dan Healy, Jack White, Aunt Jemima, Nick Lucas, Jack Waldron, Connie's Inn, etc., etc., made the trip to the Mosque Theater, which was crowded to overflow . . . Between introductions, I chatted with Major Ellenstein . . . His annual gesture in behalf of the orphans is inspired by his own experience . . . "When I was 7 years old," he said, "my father died. Agriculture Orchestra To Give Concert Tonight

Under the direction of Dr. Walter Bauer, the Department of Agriculture Orchestra will give a concert at 8:30 p. m. today in the South Building, Fourteenth street and Independence avenue. The concerts of this organization, while primarily intended for the personnel of the department, are open to the general public, and there is no admission.

Tonight's program will consist of Dvorak's E minor symphony ("From the New World"), Henry Hadley's "Herod" overture, Wagner's "Siegfried Idyll," and Svendsen's first "Norwegian Rhapsody."

Student Finds Fossill 100 Million Years Old

Hamilton, N. Y., April 21 (AP).—One of the rarest fossils known, a brittle star 100,000,000 years old, was found in the Colgate University quarry today by F. Whitney Jaeger, of Summit, N. J., a student specializing in geology. Described as even more rare than the starfish, the specimen was found in a piece of Hamilton sandstone of the Devonian age.

Prof. Harold O. Whitnall, head of the geology department, said he would try to identify the species, but he also concluded that it was possible the brittle star was one of a species heretofore unknown.

Post Boys Guests At Circus Midway

Post carriers are having a party at the World's Fair shows tonight as guests of the management. The Knights Templar are sponsoring the engagement for ten days of the circus-midway, which has its initial performance on the circus grounds at Florida avenue and Fifth street northeast.

There are 21 tented shows with 16 riding devices, but the big feature is the array of circus talent given free in the center of the midway.

Among the performers are Mills and Mills, with the walking elephants on the high wire; Dare Devil Daniels, trapeze and perch performer 110 feet in the air; the Great Fussner, on a rolling ball, ascending and descending spiral towers amid a display of fireworks, and others.

Wentworth Opera Unit To Present 'Gondoliers'

Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Gondoliers" will be presented by the Estelle Wentworth Opera Group tomorrow night at 8:30 in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School, under the auspices of the Community Center Department. First produced on December 7, 1889, "The Gondoliers" was the last of the long series of light operas in which William S. Gilbert and Arthur S. Sullivan collaborated, and it has remained one of the most popular.

The principal roles will be sung by Ira Meyer (Duke of Plaza-Toro), Maxine de Silva (Duchess of Plaza-Toro), Ray Baine and Eugene Kressin (Marco and Giuseppe Palmieri), Nina Norman (Tessa), Virginia Weedon (Gianetta), Margaret Horn (Casilda), Richard Hill (Luiz), Walter Perry (Don Alhambra del Bolero), and Helen Perry (Inez).

Lefty Grove Checks Nats With Three Hits as Boston Wins, 8-1

Game Halted In Seventh By Storm

Bokina Is Wild in First Big League Start; Fails to Last.

Werber, McNair Lead Assault; Grove in Topnotch Form.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Boston, April 21.—Knee-deep in futility against the pitching of Lefty Grove, the Nats were saved from further ignominy this afternoon by kindly elements that rendered the field unfit for the continuation of play.

It was just as well. The Nats had only made three hits off the rejuvenated Grove in the six and one-third innings of play and were making no serious motions to do anything about the 8-to-1 lead the Red Sox were holding at the time. Thus the game—and it was a game, not a contest—passed into the books as an 8-to-1 victory for Boston.

It was quite a show that Nature put on for the 5,000 in the stands. Out of the clear descended first a mantle of darkness that transformed day into night in the fifth inning. In this unnatural setting, Grove's fast ball was the perfect pitching implement. Batters up there at the plate were taking a horrible chance of fractured skulls, and fielders were also risking life and limb.

Bokina Wild, Ineffective.

The umpires, reasoning along lines peculiar to umpires, permitted play to go on under these Arctic-night conditions for two innings. And then the elements got really sore. With a combined blanket of fog, mist and just plain darkness they made it impossible to follow the flight of the ball, and the umps were compelled to call time with one out in the Nats' half of the seventh.

Rain then descended in sheets and a half-hour later Umpire Jim Chief Quinn dug a timid toe into the soggy baselines and finally declared the proceedings at an end.

The slaughter of the Nats began with the appearance of Joe Bokina in the box at the start of the game. As we go to press Rookie Bokina has succeeded in getting only one batter out in his first major league start. The young right-hander was both wild and ineffective and Manager Harris rushed Henry Coppola into the fray after six batters had faced Bokina and three had scored.

Bokina lost his control if he ever had any, after one was out in the first inning. He walked Cramer, Manush and Foxx in a row, and pitched singles to McNair and Werber. Coppola finally got 'em out on a double play.

The one run the Nats did make against Grove was palpably unearned. McNair muffed Powell's grounder in the second, Reynolds advanced him by bouncing a hit off Grove's shins and Bolton scored him with a ground ball that Kuhel prevented from becoming a double play by neatly spilling McNair at second base with a rolling block.

After that they made two other hits, a double against the leftfield wall by Powell in the fourth that came to no good and a single to center by Travis in the darkness of the seventh. Following Travis' blow, Carl Reynolds lined a ball toward center and was called out. They said that Cramer had made a swell catch of it, but he might have taken a ball out of his hip pocket and nobody, in the darkness, would have been the wiser. Anyway, that's when they called the game.

Bees-Dodgers Struggle to Stalemate

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, April 21.—The Brooklyn Dodgers and the Boston Bees had to give up a weird ball game in the twelfth inning here today when darkness fell with the score tied at 6-6.

The Bees took the lead in the eighth when they knocked Fred Frankhouse from the mound. The Dodgers tied it up at 5-5 in their half of the same inning when Jimmy Butcher opened it with a triple to center.

Both teams scored a run in the tenth, Boston on Gene Moore's double, Urbanski's sacrifice and Jordon's fly; and the Dodgers on Lindstrom's walk, Bucher's single to center, and Jimmy Jordan's fly.

McElvenney Downed By Budge After Battle

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur, W. Va., April 21.—Dust and Washington's Ralph McElvenney got in the eyes of Don Budge, red-haired Oakland, Calif., star today causing him considerable trouble in winning his way into the quarter-finals of the sixteenth annual Mason and Dixon tennis tournament.

Budge took his first set with McElvenney, without losing a game. Then the high wind and dust helped him to lose the next, 6-8. He took the third set and match, 6-3.

Other seeded stars moved up with Budge. The veteran Texan Wilmer Allison, captain of the Davis Cup team, beat Carl B. Grawn, Grouse Point, Mich., 6-1, 6-3. Wilmer Hines, of Los Angeles, put out Clifford B. Sutter, of New Orleans, 6-2, 6-1.

Hal Surface, jr., of Kansas City, was erratic in his control but eliminated F. B. Lawrence, of Los Angeles, 6-3, 6-4.

Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, beat R. O. Kelleher, of Forest Hills, 6-3, 6-4. John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, beat Roland McKee, of Dayton, Ohio, 6-2, 6-3, and J. Gilbert Hall, of New York, put out M. Rainville, of Montreal, former Canadian Davis Cup player, 6-3, 6-3. Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, beat W. B. Reese, of Atlanta, 6-2, 6-1.

Only one of the three Washington players entered in the Women's tournament survived today's matches. Sara Moore, No. 2 ranking player of the Capital, won a stubborn battle from Elizabeth Edwards, of Bridgeport, Conn., 8-6, 7-5.

Marion King was routed by Eliza Cox, of Asheville, N. C., 6-0, 6-1, and Mrs. McElvenney succumbed to Virginia Hollinger, of Dayton, Ohio, 6-1, 6-2.

Bergman Offered Villanova Post

By the United Press.

Villanova, Pa., April 21.—Villanova College officials tonight were faced with the problem of filling the shoes of Harry A. Stuhldreher, who accepted the appointment as athletic director and head coach at the University of Wisconsin.

Offers have been extended to Red Grange, Rip Miller, Hunk Anderson, Gus Dorais, Dick Hanley and Art Bergman. One of these would be chosen head coach "within a short time," Severence said.

Bergman last night said that he had been approached by Villanova but had not given the matter serious consideration. He pointed out that he is under contract to coach at Catholic University for the next four years and that any offer would have to be exceedingly attractive to lure him away from Brookland.

3 Yank Hurlers Finally Beat Macks, 7-6

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, April 21.—Going into the last half of the ninth with a 5-run lead, the New York Yankees had to use three pitchers to get the Athletics out, but finally won the ball game, 7 to 6, when Pitcher Pat Malone made Frank Higgins foul out and Harold Warstler grounded to Crosetti with the tying and winning runs on the bags.

Stuhldreher Will Coach Badgers

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., April 21.—Harry A. Stuhldreher, one of Notre Dame's famed "Four Horsemen," was appointed athletic director and football coach at the University of Wisconsin today.

The board of regents approved the appointment of the Villanovan College coach after the athletic board had recommended his selection unanimously from a field of 50 candidates.

He takes over the directorship formerly held by Dr. Walter E. Meanwell and the coaching job of Dr. Clarence W. Spears, both of whom were central figures in Wisconsin's recent athletic department controversy.

The all-American quarterback of 1924, who has turned out consistently strong teams in his 11 years at Villanova, will come to Wisconsin May 1. His teams won 65 games, lost 24 and tied 10.

"Of course, I'm glad to be at Wisconsin," Stuhldreher commented at Villanova, "but I hate to leave my pleasant associations here."

Glenn Frank "Impressed."

"The selection of Mr. Stuhldreher is the result of careful and exhaustive examination of the field by the athletic board," President Glenn Frank said in his official announcement.

"I am impressed," he continued, "with Stuhldreher's intellectual alertness, his wide range of interests, his concept of the place of athletics in the lives of students and the life of the university, his sincerity, the manifest soundness of his character and the promise I think he gives of genuine leadership."

Stuhldreher's appointment closes a stormy chapter in Wisconsin's athletic history in which both the athletic council and the regents conducted investigations into athletic affairs.

The regents discharged Meanwell and Spears last February to bring about harmony in the department, although they absolved the men personally.

Stuhldreher, now 34, was quarterback on one of Knute Rockne's greatest teams. With him in the "four horsemen" backfield were Elmer Layden, now head coach at Notre Dame; Jim Crowley, coach at Fordham University, and Don Miller, an attorney in Cleveland.

Immediately after graduation from Notre Dame with a degree of bachelor of arts, Struhldreher went to Villanova as coach.

A. G. Severance, director of athletics at Villanova, said he did not know whether Stuhldreher was taking his Villanova staff to Wisconsin as reported in Madison.

At the same time the appointment of Guy Sundt, varsity backfield coach at Wisconsin, as assistant director of intercollegiate athletics, a new post, was announced.

Hagen Fails in Try For Match Here

From Philadelphia the Haig called Wiffy Cox, pro at Kenwood Golf and Country Club.

Hagen: Hello Wiffy, how's tricks?

Cox: What's on your mind, Walter?

Cox: You don't mean Hagen?

Hagen: Yeh, pal, myself and Lawson Little. There's an attraction for you.

Cox: It sounds all right to me, Walter, but too many people play on Saturday afternoon. I got to look out for my members.

The story is that the match won't come off Saturday, and Hagen is very disappointed.

Louis Expects To Win Under 4 Rounds

Joe Hopes to Break His New York Record in Schmeling Bout.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, April 21.—Joe Louis, the dark star to which the boxing industry has hitched its money-wagon, said today he hoped to stop Max Schmeling in less than the four rounds he needed to knock out Max Baer.

He expressed satisfaction that New York, rather than California, had been selected as the scene of the fight, now scheduled for June 18.

"I want to try and break my New York record when I fight Schmeling," he explained. "It took six rounds for Carnera and four rounds for Baer. I want to beat that record if I can.

"Besides, I'm more used to the weather they have in New York in the summer time. It's just about like Detroit. If I had to fight in California, I would have to go out there early and get used to the climate."

Stripp Signs Contract.

Punching

Schmeling Sure He'll Beat Louis; Miley Not So Sure

By Jack Miley.

New York, April 21.—For a young fellow who came 4,000 miles to get a punch in the nose—and it'll probably be the most expensive poke in the proboscis of ring history, incidentally—Max Schmeling was as chipper and cheerful a chap as you'd care to see when he chugged up the bay on the S. S. Bremen today. The Nazi nudger looked tanned and trim and he had no more waistline than an eel.

He seemed hale and hearty and he talked a great fight. He is sure, he said, that he will whip the great Joe Louis in the Yankee Stadium on June 18. If he didn't think so, no amount of money—not even the $300,000 he'll get for exposing his epidermis to the lethal larrups of young black Joe—would have induced him to come here for the carnage.

"I will beat your man, Louis," promised Max. "If I do not do so, I shall retire from the ring. I saw Louis fight Paolino here last winter. I have studied the moving pictures of the Louis-Baer fight and the Louis-Carnera fight. Louis is not bad, but he makes many mistakes. He is not what you would call a finished boxer. He can hit, yes, if his opponent drops his hands and stands waiting to be struck. He has fought a lot of inferior

Star Porter Wins Graw Sprint Over Dreel, Bachelor Dinner

Making Time, Masked Gal Win 1st, 3d

Silvia G., Forest Play, Wandrel, Mister Gander Score.

By Walter Haight.

Havre de Grace, Race Track, April 21.—Star Porter, owned by Bal Parr, the Maryland sportsman, and trained by Elmer Trueman, the Washington horseman, toyed with a field of five other sprinters in a claiming race that served feature purposes at this track today. The gelded son of The Porter ran 6 furlongs in the fastest time of the meeting, 1:11 4-5, and had a three-length advantage over Dreel. The latter led his Vanderbilt stablemate Bachelor Dinner to the wire by two lengths.

Ridden by Jockey Mose Peters, Star Porter did not linger long after the starting bell came. The veteran fairly bounded to the front. Bachelor Dinner tried to press the pace, but Star Porter drew out. In the meanwhile Dreel was under stout restraint and last. The Vanderbilt plans probably called for Bachelor Dinner to make Star Porter exert himself so that Dreel could come through in the stretch.

However, Star Porter not only had Bachelor Dinner safe, but when Dreel moved up threateningly, the Parr horse gave Jockey Peters additional speed and the finish was far from close.

The usual mid-week crowd of about 8,000 saw the program run over a fast track. The threat of rain failed to materialize up to the running of the feature despite sagging skies.

Those who went in for daily doubling saw a mutuel of $68.90 posted as the result of victories by Making Time and Masked Gal.

Masked Time, a $6.60 betting proposition from the Seagram Stable, made every post a winning one in the first race, leading 11 other juveniles to the wire. Vivola was second and Slump third. Jimmy Hunter rode Making Time and had only to guide.

Sylvia G., capably handled by Apprentice Jockey A. Schmidl, came from behind to defeat a field of a dozen platers in the second race. The daughter of Gallant Fox took a neck decision from Careless Knight with Rockrim a fast closing third. Sylvia G. was only warm in the betting and provided a $13 mutuel.

Ridden by Eddie de Camillis, Masked Gal triumphed over a field of eight in the third race. De Camillis wisely took his charge under restraint when Light insisted on setting the pace. When put to a drive the daughter of Galetian bounced to the front and was opening daylight on Light at the end. Singing Heart, the heavily-played favorite, was always third. The winner was a $21.20 mutuel.

Forest Play, Derby and Preakness candidate from the Bomar Stable, led from start to finish in the fifth race, a distance affair for maidens. Jockey Bryson steadied the Chance Play colt along in front. Seven Star broke poorly, dropped far out of it and came with a belated rush to be second. Star Scout was third. The winner was well played at a $6.60 mutuel.

Wandrel, owned by Chester J. Bild and capably ridden by Jockey Peters, who was making a "double" for the day, took a neck decision from the favored Steelhead in the sixth race. Canimar was a well beaten third in the field of seven. Wandrel saved ground throughout the mile and a sixteenth contest. The veteran mare paid an $11.40 mutuel.

MAKING TIME began swiftly, moved clear when reaching the homestretch, rallied to punishment nearing the end and outstayed VIVOLA. Latter had good foot to maintain a forward position, was hard ridden all the way and finished resolutely. SLUMP improved his position on the outside and closed with good energy under punishment. GAYETTE held a forward position from the beginning, saved ground and had no excuses. SILVER PALM could not threaten when the real test came. JEANNE FETZKO was forced wide all the way. QUEEN BLAZE was badly blocked leaving the backstretch and had to be taken up. SCOUT PLANE and GOLDCRAFT raced greenly, as did ROCKY MARGOT.

*Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SYLVIA G., $13.00, $6.30, $5.40; CARELESS KNIGHT, $7.60, $6.00; ROCKRIM, $8.40.

SYLVIA G. improved her position steadily in the last half mile when taken to the outside, responded willingly to a hard drive nearing the end and was up in the last few strides. CARELESS KNIGHT raced ARGOAN into submission in the first five furlongs, moved clear entering the homestretch, but faltered when reaching the finish. ROCKRIM, prominent all the way, moved up strongly midway of the homestretch, was caught in tight quarters and had to be eased in the last sixteenth, only for which he might have been closer. JUSTA GLIDER closed a good gap after being away slowly. STACK ARMS was held safe. MISS TWINKLE showed a flash of early speed. ARGOAN, racing improved, was used up racing with CARELESS KNIGHT. ROLLING ALONG stopped. SUMAC came very wide into the homestretch.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Fillies and mares. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:41. Off at 3:43. Winner, H. Neustetter's b. f. (3), by Galetian—Masking. Trained by H. Neustetter. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:12 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MASKED GAL, $21.20, $8.90, $4.40; LIGHT, $20.00, $6.90; SINGING HEART, $2.50. Daily double paid $68.90.

MASKED GAL strongly ridden all the way, rallied strongly after being overtaken midway of the turn and came out gradually after wearing LIGHT down midway of the homestretch. LIGHT was rushed hard, took command when leaving the backstretch, but failed to rally when the real test came. SINGING HEART saved ground all the way but could not threaten the first two. HIATUS raced clear all the way, but could not engage the leaders. MOVIE LASS was unable to enter contention. FAKE weakened steadily after a half mile. BERNARDINE W. was never a dangerous factor. FLOWERY LADY was outrun all the way.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:15. Off at 4:16½. Winner, R. Parr's ch. g. (6), by The Porter—Starella. Trained by E. Trueman. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:47, 1:11 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAR PORTER, $3.80, $2.80, $2.20; DREEL (entry), $2.60, $2.90; BACHELOR DINNER (entry), $2.90.

STAR PORTER assumed command soon after the start, was rated nicely until straightened into the homestretch, was shaken up midway of the stretch and came out smartly approaching the finish. DREEL permitted to drop back off the pace in the early stages, circled his field and closed with good courage. BACHELOR DINNER was hurried along for the entire trip and barely lasted to withstand KUNGSHOLM. Latter was racing stoutly in the final stages. ZAY showed a dull effort and can do better. ROYAL WAGER went stoutly for five furlongs, then tired.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:45. Off at 4:48. Winner, Bomar Stable's ch. c. (3), by Chance Play—Forest Nymph. Trained by R. E. Potts. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FOREST PLAY, $6.60, $3.10, $2.40; SEVEN STAR, $3.30, $2.40; STAR SCOUT, $3.10.

FOREST PLAY outran his field to the first turn, drew clear when reaching the backstretch, was steadied until challenged, then responded readily when shaken up in the final drive. SEVEN STAR, taken wide from the beginning, improved his position gradually while losing much ground and finished resolutely nearing the close. STAR SCOUT, often rated forwardly, closed gamely when forced to a hard drive. BABY TALK was a keen factor for the first seven furlongs, then tired. KEARSARGE raced well for the first six furlongs, then tired. HOT GRIDDLE was never a factor. The others were always held safe.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward (foaled in Maryland). Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:16. Off at 5:17. Winner, C. H. Bild's b. m. (6), by Wanderer—Eleusinia. Trained by Judy Johnson. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 2-5, 1:15, 1:42 2-5, 1:49.

CANPRA	(Hanford)	105	4	5	5h	6h	8h	7	7	30.45

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WANDREL, $11.40, $4.70, $2.80; STEELHEAD, $3.90, $2.60; MANAGER BILL, $2.50.

WANDREL, going in improved fashion, worked her way into contention on the inside, came through on the inside of the leaders entering the homestretch, responded to a hard drive and outstayed STEELHEAD. Latter, caught in tight quarters entering the backstretch, went to the outside in the last half-mile and closed full of run in the final drive. MANAGER BILL, was hustled along all the way, disposed of VANDA CERULEA, but had nothing left when the real test came. CANIMAR, far out of contention for six furlongs, closed a big gap. PETEE BLUE was rushed hard early and weakened. VANDA CERULEA was done after being overhauled. CANPRA was held safe.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:47. Off at 5:49½. Winner, E. K. Bryson's b. g. (4), by Chicle—Flying Witch. Trained by G. R. Bryson. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 1-5, 1:15, 1:41 3-5, 1:46 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISTER GANDER, $12.90, $7.10, $4.50; SUNNED, $6.10, $4.20; KINDACORN, $4.10.

MISTER GANDER, away slowly as usual, was waited with far back for half-mile, gradually improved his position, came around the field entering the stretch and drew away easily. SUNNED, well up from the start, wore down SHEPHERD BOY to assume a short lead in the stretch, held on gamely, but was no match for the winner. KINDACORN, close to the leaders throughout, made a bid to take command in the stretch, but was not good enough and she weakened. LIGHT BROOK gradually improved his position and closed well. TIEMPO had early speed, met with slight interference on the backstretch and weakened. SHEPHERD BOY raced well placed early, took command after half-mile, but tired badly.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al:

One of the colored riders here was instructed to keep his horse under wraps until reaching the stretch, where he was supposed to go to the whip and move up on the outside. The horse in question was about fourth for the first 6 furlongs and when the field reached the stretch he suddenly dropped back. When the boy returned to the paddock, the trainer said, "Boy, I thought I told you to come up on the outside." The rider came back with, "You didn't want me to move up on the outside without a horse, did you, boss?" Which reminds me of the eight-horse race in which each of the riders was instructed to "go to the top and stay there." We lost a bet yesterday with the help of an assistant starter who suddenly took a liking to Seven Stars and when the break came he was hanging on the bridle. From there on Seven Stars ran an excellent race. Thus endeth the alibis.

BILL.

First race — Amhurst showed a lot of early speed in Florida racing and has worked well. This fellow may be ready to step down at a fair price. Will have the Vanderbilt entry of Gay Balko and Bergere to whip. Indiana to take care of the others.

Second race—Cherry Stone, from the Vanderbilt barn, gets in this with a feather and may make every post a winning one. Cantersine's last don't go in my book. Gets in light here and should be close. Peter Pumpkin would not be far out of it on Bowie form.

Third race—Son of Troy gets a nice shift in the weights from Aroused and he may reverse the decision this time. The Vanderbilt entry of Nouveau Riche and Exaltation is due respect in this company.

Fourth race—Night Sprite ran a much improved race to take a decision last out and I have to put him on top here. Should the mud come up, I will have to rely on Brown Twig. Billy Bee is a threat here.

Fifth race — Microbe, a brisk worker, would be a dangerous horse on Miami form. Gets in with only steadying weight and I'm going to string along. Don Guzman is making his first start in the North after a rest. Bird Flower could surprise.

Sixth race—This is the toughest race of the day. Cachelot, despite top weight, will be a keen factor, if not the winner, here. In the mud, I would be forced to put Naval Cadet on top. The Mauler, winner at Bowie, should be in the thick of the battle.

Seventh race—Palasa needed that last and in best form should take his group in camp. Fogarty, recent winner, will have James Boy to beat for the place award.

Best bet—Palasa.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Boston, Mass., Apri 21.

Nothing has occurred here in three games the Nats have played against the Red Sox to disturb this department's conviction that the Boston club will win the pennant.

It is quite a ball team, better, I think, than the Detroit Tigers, who are the only other club entitled to mention in the same exhalation with Mr. Yawkey's carefully assembled crew of athletes. It has pitching and power and those other incidental items so necessary to a pennant winner.

POVICH.

It has, unquestionably, the two finest throwing arms among outfielders in the league. Any time Mel Almada and Roger Cramer turn that ball loose, a base runner is taking a tremendous chance if he is foolhardy enough to start running in first place. And any time the enemy gets an extra base hit in right or center field against the Red Sox, then its a genuine, honest wallop because Almada and Cramer can charge a ball or scurry after it like no other pair in the league.

The advance of runners from first to third on a single, an important item in any club's attack, is being kept to a minimum by the presence of the two speed boys, Almada and Cramer, and four times in the present three-game series here Washington runners refused to take that chance.

The Red Sox outfield defense which ordinarily would suffer in the presence of Heinie Manush and his weak arm in leftfield is not severely handicapped in the Red Sox park. The nearby leftfield Fence gives Manush little territory in which to roam and even Manush's arm can negotiate the distance from leftfield to second base or the plate in this park where the Red Sox play 77 of their games.

Neither has the Red Sox defense suffered apparently in the replacement of Joe Cronin at shortstop by Eric McNair. Cronin for two seasons now has been a distinct liability in the field and McNair rounds out an infield that at every other point is acceptable defensively.

The great doubt that surrounded the ability of the Red Sox to make a battle out of it with the Tigers—skepticism of the club's pitching—is rapidly being completely dispersed by the performance of Wes Ferrell, Lefty Grove and Fritz Ostermueller.

All three of 'em have been delivering to the complete satisfaction of Manager Cronin. Grove, in two starts, has permitted only one run and that unearned, Ferrell has won both his starts, one of 'em a five-hit affair; and Ostermueller was the victim of a 3-2 game against the Yankees. The suspicion that Grove and Ferrell would not be up to their 1936 performances, an angle of which much was made in the early spring by the team's critics, is daily being labeled absurd.

And the Red Sox have yet to call upon the services of Johnny Marcum, who is recovering from a tonsil operation. Even without Marcum, the team is showing six victories against two defeats in its first eight games and Marcum is the man who was able to win 17 ball games for the last-place Athletics last season.

Into the reckoning also must be taken Jimmy Foxx and his home-run bat; an item that was not included in the Red Sox's assets last year. Foxx rounds out a ball club that, with Cramer, Manush, McNair and Rick Ferrell also in the batting order, concedes little to the Tigers in point of sheer power.

In Short—

And if the Red Sox develop the need of another pitcher or another outfielder ere long, there is always the available bankroll of Tom Yawkey, which has a way of persuading other owners to part with talent . . . Buck Newsom will pitch for the Nats tomorrow and for three days now has been promising to shut out the Red Sox . . . Newson claims that Jimmy Foxx made only 2 hits against him in the 24 times they met last season . . . Wes Ferrell will be on the mound for the Red Sox . . . Under the new league rules, Travis gets credit for that hit he made in the seventh inning today before the game was called with one out . . . The rules read that all hits up to the discontinuation of play count if the home team is ahead when a game is called by the umpires . . . Johnny Stone was confined to the Nats' hotel today with a severe cold

Helen Dettweiler's 78 Aids Congressional to Win in Golf Play

Her Score Is 1 Stroke Shy Of Record

By Dave Herman.

Three putts on the short sixteenth hole robbed 21-year-old Helen Dettweiler of a chance to equal the women's course record at Columbia Country Club yesterday as she led her team, Congressional, to a 7-2 victory over Army and Navy in the inaugural District first-team matches.

Cracking 80 over a regulation course for the first time in her career, Miss Dettweiler shot a brilliant 78, one over feminine par, and a stroke shy of tying the mark set by Mrs. J. Marvin Haynes, former District title holder, in the Columbia Club championship three years ago.

Miss Dettweiler's score, made in the face of a strong cross-wind, was drilled out while she teamed with Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, wife of the Congressional pro, to take three points from Mrs. David Clark, former Middle Atlantic and Virginia champion, and Mrs. Charlotte S. Sterns.

Chevy Chase, defending champions, had quite a battle nosing out Indian Spring, 5 to 4, in the first-team matches. By the same count Columbia defeated Manor.

Injury Forces Gevinson to Withdraw

A badly jammed thumb on his left hand that has not mended sufficiently to warrant his participation in tonight's scheduled boxing bout with Delton Parker last night resulted in the withdrawal of Lou Gevinson, popular local 126-pounder, from the ten-star amateur boxing show scheduled for Joe Turner's arena under the auspices of the District National Guard.

Complaining of continued soreness in his punching hand after a light workout, Gevinson last night was advised by an examining physician that participation in tonight's show might seriously impair his chances in the Olympic trials listed for Chicago, May 7 and 8.

Although Gevinson was eager to go through with the bout anyhow, his handler and adviser, Matt Twamey, persuaded him to withdraw from tonight's show in order that he may be in his finest fettle for the Chicago trials.

In the absence of Gevinson, any number of other local fighting favorites are to hold forth, an aggregate of eight bouts already being scheduled, with the prospect that two more will be announced from the ringside.

Other features bring together Mike Morton, Merrick Boys Club, vs. Tony Uibaldo, Cumberland, Md., 135 pounds; George Pickeral, District National Guard, vs. Karl Schmidt, Merrick Boys Club, 118 pounds; Bob Mathias, District National Guard, vs. George Abrams, Washington Boys Club, 155 pounds, and Ralph Smith, District National Guard, vs. Jay Turner, Merrick Boys Club, 165 pounds. Four other bouts will be announced at ringside.

Action will be launched at 8:15 and tickets priced at 40 cents and 75 cents on a first-come, first-served basis.

Marines Hit 2 G. W. Hurlers To Win, 12-2

Colonials Held to But Six Safeties in First Loss of Season.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Quantico, Va., April 21.—The Marines landed on a couple of George Washington University pitchers here this afternoon and collared a 12-2 victory in a one-sided game. It was the Colonials' first defeat of the season.

In charge of the Marines was burly Hank Henry, who held the visitors at bay, allowing only six hits, while his mates peppered Bill Lanier for 14 of their 15 safeties. The Marines hit everything Lanier threw at them. Two were out in the sixth inning when they went on an eight-run spree that definitely squelched George Washington's hopes of victory.

Hope, Lanier's successor, gave up only one hit in the two innings he hurled, but the game already was beyond redemption.

The Colonials scored their first run in the seventh inning on singles by Price and Walker, with a walk to Berg sandwiched in. Andy Horne's delayed steal, after he had walked and advanced to third on Johnsen's single, accounted for the second marker.

Cy Swetitsch, Marine third baseman, was the batting star, pounding out a double and a home run.

Loyola High Nine Beats Central, 8-2

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., April 21.—The Loyola High School's baseball team registered its fifth consecutive conquest by easily defeating the Central High nine of Washington, 8 to 2, here today.

In winning their second game from the invaders, Loyola got off to an early lead and never relinquished it, scoring two runs each in the first three frames and made certain of victory by adding two more in the fifth.

Central was unable to score until the last session, when it accounted for its only two runs.

Stricker held the visitors at his mercy, fanning eight batsmen. Heft, Stricker's opponent on the hill, struck out 12 Blue and Gold batters, but was touched for 10 blows, while Stricker held Central to 4 hits.

Central High Netters Bow to Episcopal, 5 to 2

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., April 21.—In spite of the individual brilliance of Buddy Adair, the Central High tennis team went down to a crushing 5-to-2 defeat at the hands of Episcopal here today. Adair rallied to trim Howell, 2—6, 6—4, 6—2, in the singles and then paired with Charlie Channing to defeat Garnett and Belser, 4—6, 8—6, 6—4.

Singles—Garnett (E.) defeated Channing, 6—4, 6—4; Bryan (E.) defeated Landsman, 6—1, 4—6, 6—4; Belser (E.) defeated Gelfand, 6—0, 6—1; Morgan (E.) defeated Blankin, 6—1, 7—5; Adair (C.) defeated Howell, 2—6, 6—4, 6—2.

Guyon Uses 19 Players in Tilt With Marblehead High Diamonders.

Acting rather inconsiderately toward its guests from New England, so far as the score was concerned, Eastern High drubbed Marblehead High's traveling baseball team from Massachusetts yesterday, 17 to 2, on the Eastern field.

Coach Charles M. Guyon, of Eastern, strove manfully to keep the score down by sending in virtually his entire squad. He used 19 players but the more he sent into action, the more they turned the game into a rout.

A total of 17 hits clattered off the Eastern bats. The Eastern coach gave the Bay Staters a try at four of his pitchers but neither Jack Carver, Wade Pembroke, Ray Stockwell nor Len Caposella proved particularly vulnerable for runs.

Out Fishin' . . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

According to reports so far, trout fishing conditions in Maryland since the season opened on April 1, have been about normal, that is, the bait fishermen are way out ahead of the fly fishermen and going strong.

Brave and optimistic indeed is the fly fisherman who ventures forth in Maryland during the first part of the trout season, especially over the week-end, as he is hopelessly outnumbered, hemmed in, elbowed and rendered desperate by the limit-or-die clan armed with everything from salt water rods and 50-pound test linen lines to hickory poles and sash cords. They catch trout, because said trout have just been released from the hatchery ponds and are virtually Alices in Wonderland.

The fly fisherman has about as much chance of having one pool to himself for five consecutive minutes, as he has of receiving any degree of the courtesy commonly associated with fishing in most other States. Then, during the latter part of the season, the fly fisherman can enjoy himself, if he really fishes for the love of fishing and being out-of-doors, although he may find some trout that escaped the harvest.

If our fish commission puts enough trout in the streams, the rugged clan will have ther limit every day by 9 a. m. and we might catch a few while they take their first limit home and before they return for the next one. Some day we may be able to have a few streams set aside for sportsmen, where only flies may be used. Then a lot of us won't have to go over to Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina to enjoy trout fishing, and the courtesy for which the sport is famous.

A few trout have been caught on flies, but usually in conjunction with a spinner. The early season streamers are best, such as the gray-feather or hair streamer with gold or silver body; brown streamer with red body, black streamer with black or black and yellow body, red streamer with silver body, tied on No. 8 or 10 straight-eyed hooks. Later on when the weather and water become warmer, the smaller dry flies, fanwings, bi-visibles, etc., begin to take fish consistently.

Various valley streams have been stocked around Baltimore, such as Western Run, said to be a good brown trout stream. Severn Run west of Annapolis, and various of the larger streams in Montgomery and Frederick counties have been stocked with brown trout, but this is more a matter of record than of actual fishing experience. On the other side of the ridge from Fishing Creek flowing south through the Middletown Valley. This is said to have been stocked heavily. From here on west the stocked streams include the Little Antietam near Smithsburg; St. James Run, Eckstein's Run, Marsh Run and several others near Hagerstown; the Little Tonoloway and Bear Creek near Hancock, and west of Cumberland the Big and Little Savage Rivers, the Youghiogheny River and various other mountain streams. Of these, the Big Savage has given the writer the best results.

Now that the Virginia season dawns, we find better streamside condition for the fly fishermen, the competition is not so keen or so bitter. On the eastern slope of the Blue Ridge we have, going south from Sperryville (the northern limit of the good streams in Virginia on the eastern slope), the Hughes River, the Robinson or Robertson, and the Rapidan, all fine, rugged streams, and little more than 100 miles from Washington. These streams are stocked to some extent, but better yet are natural trout streams in rugged country.

On south are other streams, the Moorman's River, Ivy Branch, the Piney River, and the number increases as one progresses south by west into and beyond the Natural Bridge National Forest. West of the Blue Ridge across the valley lies the Little Stony River, a fine brook trout stream but rather accessible and therefore popular. Southward lie the Dry River and its tributaries above Hot Springs, Crab Run and others near McDowell. Excellent fly streams.

Tech, Central Will Play at Ball Park

Inter-High Series Opener Friday Is Set for Stadium.

By John R. Vosburgh.

After 20 years of severed relations with Griffith Stadium, interhigh school baseball will return to the big American League ball park Friday afternoon. By more or less of an accident, Tech and Central will meet on the big league greensward at 3:30 in the opening game of the 1936 interhigh series.

But for the fact that Tech had no other field readily available the stadium would not have become the coming scene of action. The new policy of the board of principals to play the series on a home-and-home basis found the game scheduled for Tech's field, which is notorious for its unsuitable playing condition.

Leonard T. Brown, president of the board of faculty advisers, arrived at an agreement with Clark Griffith, owner of the ball park, yesterday. Griffith offered the park completely free of expense to the schools.

The owner of the Nats said he was "mighty glad to co-operate," and expressly pointed out there would be no financial obligations for use of the stadium. School officials were hearty in their appreciation of the offer.

Brown said the Tech-Central game will be the only one to be played at the stadium. Tech's remaining home game will be played at Roosevelt High's stadium.

Not since 1916, Brown said, has interhigh baseball been played at the stadium. Two or three contests were played at the park that year.

Roosevelt Defeats Montgomery, 7-2

Coach Herman Littman brought out his Roosevelt High baseball team for its first home appearance of the season yesterday. The team brought out a 7-2 victory over Montgomery Blair High, and the game brought out some surprising new material.

A lad named Joe Tassa, a junior playing third base, was one of the latter, pounding out a home run and a triple in two trips to the plate and knocking in four of the Rough Rider runs. Pitcher Howard Blundon showed marked improvement despite a bit of weakening at the finish.

Talk about your rassle fans. They're all amateurs compared with Promoter Joe Turner. Honeymooning in New York, the genial impresario wired his home office yesterday that he would make it a point to be back in time to see tomorrow night's Dean Detton-George Koverly match at the Turner Arena.

"I didn't intend sitting in on this show," Turner said in part, "but after 35 years in the game the wrestling bug has bitten me so hard that I just can't keep away."

Detton is one of the fair-haired boys in the rassle racket. Fresh off the University of Utah football field, Detton seems the logical choice to succeed to the world championship. The guy has beaten everybody and his cousin, as the saying goes.

The chaotic condition as to just who holds the world title was further complicated the other day when Garrett Smallery, chairman of the Missouri Athletic Commission, declared the title claims of Dick Shikat vacated. Smallery said Shikat failed to obey orders to straighten out his managerial affairs.

In the semi-final brawl tomorrow night Len Hall, the nerve specialist, encounters Rusty Westcoatt. Other matravesties involve Jack Hader and Sailor Billings and the amorous Abies—Kashey and Goldberg.

ROOM FOR THE MORE ABUNDANT WIFE

We hold these things to be self-evident: That a woman, in her car, is entitled to this-minute style, and to feather-light handling, and to jarless lullaby comfort.

That she should have a wheel that steers as easily as smart conversation, and a sure-fire invincible engine that's as quick on the uptake as her own ready wit.

And—this is important—that she has an inalienable right to room, plenty room, extravagant spaciousness, with convenient places to care for her possessions.

So, to husbands whose wives clutter seats with coats and bags and odd bits of shopping and the like, we suggest the big Buick Roadmaster as the car with ample room for the more abundant wife.

You're giving yourself a break, you know, when you choose this great-powered, trigger-quick, beautifully poised traveler—mobile as quicksilver, quiet as dawn, steady as truth.

But when you have duly praised your Roadmaster for its phenomenal performance, you will owe still another accolade for its generous roominess, not alone in the width of its seats and the height of its ceiling but in its handy compartments and the yawning enormity of its built-in luggage trunk.

Roadmaster! A male name for a man's kind of car, and such it certainly is in its thrilling action and easy conquest over time, distance and whatever the route's got to give!

But it's a honey in its obedience, its gentleness in going along—so take your wife with you when you try it—you'll both be surprised that so little money can buy so much automobile.

NO OTHER CAR IN THE WORLD HAS ALL THESE FEATURES
VALVE-IN-HEAD STRAIGHT-EIGHT ENGINE gives more power per unit of fuel than any other type of engine of equal displacement and compression
ANOLITE PISTONS, durable, long-lasting, 50% lighter, increase bearing life 150%
SEALED CHASSIS keeps dirt and water from all moving parts, protects from wear and erosion
LUXURIOUS "TURRET TOP" BODY BY FISHER, with No Draft Ventilation — the smartest, safest, strongest body built
TIPTOP HYDRAULIC BRAKES, giving safe, straight-line stops under lightest pressures
KNEE-ACTION COMFORT AND SAFETY, the true gliding ride
TORQUE-TUBE DRIVE, for steadier, more stable roadability
AUTOMATIC STARTING, SPARK AND HEAT CONTROL, for convenience, efficiency, economy
BUILT-IN LUGGAGE COMPARTMENTS, with ample capacity for necessary luggage
FRONT-END RIDE STABILIZER, for elimination of side-sway at speed or on curves

Rescue Crews Within 25 Feet Of Two in Mine

from the particular type of equipment they use. Masked and carrying oxygen tanks, they can live for hours without air, tunneling through gas-filled mines. The tanks they carry were designed by a German scientist named Draeger.

The condition of the two was described by Dr. H. K. MacDonald and Dr. Donald Rankin, who brought an emergency hospital unit here from Halifax.

Is Very Cheerful.

"We are fine down here," Dr. Robertson assured his wife. Charles Ivey, brother-in-law of Dr. Robertson, said that he agreed the men were in a weakened condition, suffering from head colds and sore feet, but that Robertson was "very cheerful."

Earlier today the two had indicated they are prepared for death when Robertson called his brother-in-law to come to the speaking tube and take down instructions as to what should be done if the two do not come out alive.

Belief that the two are "bearing up as we could expect," was expressed by Dwyer.

"We hope that unless their deliverance is unduly delayed they will be taken from the shaft alie," Dwyer said.

Many of the workers were so exhausted that they operated in 15-minute shifts, but some of them had not been to the surface in 30 hours, determined to be the first to break through the underground prison.

It was impossible to determine the exact physical condition of the two entombed men. Dr. Robertson would only say "we are fine" and refused to walk over to the tube through which they were first given food Sunday, explaining, "we are too weak."

A fund has been started for rescue workers. Norman Somerville, chairman of the Red Cross Society of Canada, announced the Red Cross would receive contributions to the fund. A committee of five was appointed to supervise disposition of the money directly to the workers.

Wind or Spirits, Thurston Idol Almost Breaks

But Friend Believes Magician Failed to Return From Dead to Keep Promise.

By the United Press.

New York, April 21.—Believers in the supernatural were convinced tonight that the late Howard Thurston, famous magician, at least completed one leg of his promise to "return" from the grave.

Magician Joseph Dunninger did not take part in the balloting.

He simply reported that the idol in a glass case—which Thurston gave him years ago and promised to break to prove there was life after death—moved slightly today.

An oil painting of a Hindu snake charmer, which hung 2 feet above it, crashed to the floor. Apparently it struck the idol case in its passage downward.

"I honestly don't believe Thurston had anything to do with it," said Dunninger, noted illusionist and exposer of fake mediums. "I don't believe in spiritualism. I don't believe in the dead returning.

"But I feel honor bound to report the incident."

Dunninger said the painting, in a heavy gilt frame, had hung on his bedroom wall for the last four years. Below it, also suspended by a wire hook on the wall, was the small glass case containing the idol.

It is of a rare grayish-green hue, purporting to be an image of Rameses II, which the late Thurston brought back from Luxor, Egypt, and presented to Dunninger 12 years ago. "If I can come back," he told him, "I will smash the case to prove there is life after death."

"I heard a heavy crash," Dunninger said. "I naturally was startled and my first impulse was to look at the idol case. I thought the idol had fallen. I lit my light and found that the painting above it had dropped to the floor, striking the idol case, but not damaging it.

"Houdini left me a 10-word code message. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle did likewise. None of those fellows ever came back. And I don't believe Thurston ever will come back, either.

"I'm on the other side of the fence."

Scoffers thought the painting had been knocked to the floor by a gust of wind or a wobbly nail in the wall, behind which are some steam pipes. At any rate, no other seismic disturbances were reported during the night.

Peak Business Is Recaptured In Many Fields

Best Results in Years Shown by Variety of Industries.

New York, April 21.—The phrase "the best since—" is being used to describe activity in a wide variety of industries, according to the Standard Statistics Co. today. Among the business indexes to which this phrase is applicable are:

Automobile sales are the best since 1929.

Copper prices are the highest since May, 1931.

Residential building contract awards in March reached the highest total since October, 1931.

United States and Canadian newsprint production in March was the largest for any March since 1931.

Bank loans to customers are at the highest level since October, 1934.

World shipbuilding in the first quarter was greater than in any previous quarter since 1931.

Cotton consumption by domestic mills in March was the largest for any March since 1929.

Magazine advertising lineage in the first quarter was the best since 1930.

Cigarette consumption is the highest for this season on record.

Gasoline consumption is likewise the highest for this season on record.

General Electric Record.

New York, April 21 (AP).—General Electric Co. today reported for the quarter ended March 31 net income of $7,086,830, after all charges, equal to 25 cents a common share. In the March quarter of 1935 net income was $5,390,931, or 19 cents a common share.

The profit for the first quarter this year was the highest for that period since the initial three months of 1931.

Union Carbide's "Best."

New York, April 21 (AP).—Jesse J. Ricks, president of the Union Carbide & Carbon Corporation, told stockholders at the annual meeting yesterday that the corporation's earnings for the first quarter of this year established a record for any first quarter in its history. The company plans a construction budget for this year of approximately $20,000,000, Ricks said.

Safe Deposit Dinner.

The safe deposit section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association will hold a dinner meeting tonight at the Raleigh Hotel, with members of the Maryland Sate Safe Deposit Association as guests. For entertainment a trip through the Department of Justice has been planned.

Court Halts Move to Merge Tool Firms

Niles-Bement Holder Protests Deal With Gen. Machine.

By the Associated Press.

Jersey City, N. J., April 21.—A move to merge Niles-Bement-Pond Co. with General Machinery Co. was halted by injunction proceedings today as stockholders of the former met to ratify the proposal. Prior to the meeting, the Niles Co. announced that it expected a "prompt determination by the court of the legal questions raised by the bill."

The injunction was issued by Vice Chancellor James F. Fielder in Jersey City, upon the application of Donco, Inc., a holder of 4,000 shares of the Niles Co. stock. Stockholders of General Machinery Co. previously approved the consolidation.

The Niles Co., in its announcement, said that "more information as to the terms of the proposed merger has been submitted to stockholders of the company, including complete and detailed figures prepared by certified public accountants who have been auditors for Niles-Bement-Pond and the General Machinery Co. for many years past."

Both companies are engaged in the production of machinery and tools. Niles-Bement-Pond owns 50,000 shares of General Machinery stock, or 25 per cent of the total issue. It received this stock in connection with the sale in 1928 of a subsidiary property to General Machinery.

$50,000,000 Bills 2.9 Times Subscribed

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announces that the tenders for $50,000,000, or thereabouts, of 273-day Treasury bills, dated April 22, 1936, and maturing January 20, 1937, which were offered on April 17, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks on April 20.

The total amount applied for was $146,908,000, of which $50,077,000 was accepted. The accepted bids ranged in price from 99.934, equivalent to a rate of about 0.087 per cent per annum, to 99.928, equivalent to a rate of about 0.095 per cent per annum, on a bank discount basis.

Dow Chemical Co. Doubles Common

Midland, Mich., April 21 (AP).—Stockholders of the Dow Chemical Co., at a special meeting here today, approved plans to increase the no-par common stock from 1,000,000 shares to 2,000,000 shares, and create a new issue of 60,000 shares of 5 per cent cumulative preferred stock.

The preferred stock will be offered share for share in exchange for outstanding 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock.

The Market

Stocks Rally Mildly in Last Hour But Fail to regain All Early Losses.

New York, April 21.—Stocks reversed yesterday's process of steadiness in early trading and a break toward the close by looking wobbly until the last hour, when a moderate rally took place. It was not vigorous enough to restore the early losses, but it helped to allay fears. Turnover increased to around 2,000,000, the third session of that size this month. Treasury bonds continued sloppy, but other high-grade issues were steady. May wheat rose half a cent to 99⅞ cents a bushel.

Before the closing rally in stocks began the steady chipping at prices had broken off from fractions to 3 points in a good many issues. Here and there a stock had fallen much further, as for example, Checker Cab, with its 14-point drop, but the sight of a stock falling through an airhole seemed to be less disturbing than it has been for the last several days. The market is more or less reconciled to the thought that numerous stocks must be drastically revalued before the market will be ready for a fresh advance.

Gold and Silver Rise.

At its worst Steel was down more than a point, and Motors gave up nearly as much. General Electric was indifferent to a good earnings statement. Most of the rails and chemicals joined the steels and motors in dropping 1 to 3 points, but they recovered at least half of their loss. Shorts covered in some of the recent weak stocks, as for example, Johns-Manville.

In the rail list the weakest issues were the Westerns, weakening the argument that the approaching cut in passenger fares for the Eastern roads is depressing the market. Santa Fe, Great Northern and Union Pacific dropped 1 to 2 points, Kennecott and Anaconda lost nearly 2 points each, notwithstanding the optimistic views on copper expressed by the president of Phelps-Dodge. Gold and silver shares hardened.

Oils, motor accessories, mail orders and foods were mixed. Corn Products failed to hold an early gain of a point. Standard of California gave up a point at its bottom price. Texas lost a fraction. Jersey and Atlantic Refining stiffened. Gains of 1 to 3 points were made by American Can, Telephone, Commercial Credit, Manville and United Dyewood, the latter rising more than 2 points on the first dividend payment in 12 years. Rubbers and airplanes did well. American Safety Razor dropped below 100 on a fall of 3 points. Bristol-Meyers and Colorado & Southern ran into thin markets. Checker Cab was the prize plunger of the day. Half a dozen preferred stocks lurched badly.

Foreign Trade.

Foreign trade figures continue to illustrate a weak section of the business position and a field in which much improvement could be brought about by the removal of trade barriers of various sorts, including that of fluctuating money. Foreign trade in March, the Department of Commerce reports, was moderately higher than a year ago—and that is true of the first three months—but on a daily basis the exports last month were only a trifle above those for February. Imports in March were less than in February.

For the second month in succession the country had an excess of imports, on a straight merchandise basis. The import excess was $5,000,000, compared with $10,000,000 in February, and left a three months' excess of imports of $5,000,000. Actually the swing was wider. In March we imported a net of $8,000,000 in silver, and in the three months brought in $83,000,000. That means our total excess of incoming shipments in first quarter was $88,000,000. That might suggest an outflow of gold, but on the contrary imports of gold amounted to $34,000,000.

Taking Bearings.

Encouragement to stockholders to bear up under the weakness of the market was found in the remarks of chairmen and presidents at the annual meetings of a number of industrial corporations. Some told of a considerable increase in business and profits currently, and others said that they found trade at least holding its own with a year ago. There seems to be no question that business made headway in the first three and a half months of this year, but the stock market, it must now be admitted, grew too enthusiastic over the possibilities. The danger now is that the pendulum will swing too far the other way, and that the decline in stock prices will be interpreted as meaning a forecast of declining trade through the remainder of the year—or at least until after election.

Many investors found prices and dividend yields no longer attractive at recent levels, but the money is still around awaiting investment opportunity. It is bound to go into the securities markets soon or late, and in view of the high prices for bonds the stock market will be favored so long as business improvement continues. The foreign situation doubtless has been a dampener on confidence, but it is significant that those close to the scene in Europe appear to be much less anxious than we are over the possibility of conflict.

In the foreign exchange market the French franc marked time for the coming elections and reflected also the passing of acute nervousness over trouble between France and Germany. Sterling also was steady and little business in other sections was done. Money markets were dull and no rates were changed.

Banking Position.

Figures of the reporting member banks in 101 leading cities as of April 15 revealed a gain of $106,000,000 in demand deposits, adjusted, and a rise of $193,000,000 in domestic bank deposits, most of the fresh deposits, created in part by Treasury spending as indicated in last week's reserve bank statement, remaining unemployed. Reserves rose $164,000,000. Most of the changes occurred in the New York and Chicago districts. Chicago banks lost $18,000,000 Government securities, but all the banks had a net increase of $5,000,000, all of which was attributable to New York banks' buying. Government guaranteed securities held rose $10,000,000 at New York and $9,000,000 for all reporting banks. "Other securities" rose $50,000,000 for all banks, $26,00,000 being the net addition to portfolios here. Loans to banks, and to others on collateral, as well as realty loans decreased. Commercial and miscellaneous advances rose by $10,000,000, of which $9,000,000 was in the New York sector.

General Foods Profit Highest In Four Years

Number of Employes Has Increased 50 Per Cent Since 1933.

New York, April 21.—General Foods Corporation reports for the three months ended March 31, 1936, earnings of $4,067,150. This is equal to 77 cents a share on the 5,251,440 common shares outstanding and compares with $3,361,339, or 64 cents a share, for the corresponding three months of 1935. Earnings for the 12 months ended March 31, 1936, were $12,436,579 as against $10,825,565 for the 12 months ended March 31, 1935.

C. M. Chester, chairman, pointed out that the first quarter earnings for 1936 were the most favorable of any three months' period since the first quarter of 1932, when 84 cents per share were earned. He stated that included in the reasons for the upturn this year were the following factors: improvement in public purchasing power; increased interest of consumer in purchase of advertised brands; productive promotion campaign; effective work by employes; and excellent co-operation on the part of distrubutors.

The number of employes of General Foods has increased 50 per cent since the first of 1935, Mr. Chester reported. General Foods stockholders now total 63,284, with average holdings of 83 shares.

Electric Bond & Share.

Electric Bond & Share Co., large utility holding company whose operations extend all over the country, today reported for the March quarter net income of $2,180,936, equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to 1 cent a share on the common stock. This compared with $2,213,586, or 2 cents a common share after preferred dividends in the same quarter last year.

Chesapeake & Ohio.

Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co., in a report for the quarter ended March 31, showed net income of $9,258,560, equivalent, after dividends on the 6½ per cent preferred stock, to $1.20 a share on the common stock, against $7,093,336, or 92 cents a share, in the like 1925 period.

May Sugar Sells At Eight-Year Top

New York, April 21 (AP).—Sugar futures sold up to new highs for the season in all active positions today with May advancing to 2.89, the highest price touched during the past eight years.

Short covering in near months, trade and Cuban buying of the forward postitions accompanied a return of buying interest by refiners in the raw market. March sold up from 2.64 to 2.66 with the general market 3 to 5 points net higher at the beginning of the last hour.

Am. Loco. Orders Total $9,500,000

New York, April 21 (AP).—With unfilled orders on the books of American Locomotive Co. amounting to $9,500,0000, compared with $2,800,000 a year ago, William C. Dickerman, president, told stockholders at the annual meeting today that prospects were more pleasing than at any time in five years.

Dickerman said that while definite inquiries of substantial size were unlikely to be closed within the next 30 to 60 days, there was evidence that a large potential demand existed.

Daily Oil Output Shows Further Gain

Tulsa, Okla., April 21 (AP).—Another increase in the daily average production of crude oil, 43,838 barrels, was reported today by the Oil and Gas Journal. For the week ended April 18 the production was 2,945,968, compared to 2,902,130 the previous week.

Oklahoma showed the greatest increase of the major producing areas, 19,985 barrels, or 569,700 barrels this week, compared to 549,715 the previous week.

Cotton Spinning Activity.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

The dollar managed to work a little higher against leading foreign currencies yesterday, although trading in most world centers was quiet.

In London the American monetary unit closed at 4.96 1-16 to the pound, while in New York sterling was ⅛ of a cent easier at $4.94.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, April 21 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—The situation in fleece wools remained unchanged in Boston since the close of last week. Mills were not much interested in the new wools offered. Despite this fact quotations were unchanged because dealers reported that they were unable to get wools from the country to offer at lower prices than they quoted last week. While a little graded strictly combing ⅜ and ¼-blood Ohio and similar fleece wool was available at 35 cents in the grease, most houses continued to quote 36-37 cents on new clip for future delivery.

Montreal Silver Futures.

Montreal, April 21 (AP).—Silver futures closed easier, unchanged to 75c lower. Sales, 8 contracts.

Fire in Interior Building Halts City Traffic

2 Alarms Bring All Available Apparatus; Score of Other Blazes in D. C.

Two alarms were sounded for a blaze in the new Department of Interior building, Eighteenth and D streets northwest, shortly after the 4:30 p. m. rush hour yesterday.

Throughout the day firemen in and near the city were kept busy answering alarms. Volunteers in the nearby Virginia and Maryland counties fought several timber and grass fires, which caused much damage to woodlands, destroyed livestock and farm buildings.

All available apparatus in the downtown section was rushed to the new Interior building as clouds of smoke billowed from windows and doors of the incompleted structure.

The flames were confined to scaffolding and a wooden carpenters' shack on the second floor. Firemen experienced difficulty in hoisting hose lines to upper floor levels, but soon had the blaze under control.

When first discovered, flames could be seen for several blocks around and the hundreds of curious gathered to watch firemen battle the blaze.

Gus Bucholz, engineer in charge of construction work, estimated damage at $500. Tools and clothing in the carpenters' shack were destroyed. The first alarm was sounded by Sergt. Joseph D. Harrington, traffic division, stationed at Constitution Hall to direct traffic for the D. A. R. Convention.

Traffic Rerouted.

Traffic was rerouted during the blaze and delegates to the D. A. R. session were forced to walk several blocks to secure taxis and buses.

Fanned by stiff southeast winds, a forest fire was raging north through the wooded section around Baileys Crossing, in Fairfax County, yesterday evening.

All available fire-fighting equipment from Arlington County and Falls Church was rushed to the scene.

Firemen estimated at sundown that the blaze had destroyed about 200 acres of timber as it moved over the county line and menaced woodlands in Arlington County.

The flames demolished a farmhouse and barn, belonging to Thomas Terrett, in Fairfax County. It was reported some livestock was caught in the path of the blaze.

Residents of the section feared several other large farmhouses and barns might be destroyed. It was understood no one was on the Terrett premises at the time of the fire.

The fire was believed under control early last night. Firefighters said that unless the wind direction changed it would burn out without further damage.

In Montgomery County volunteer companies were busy from dawn until night. A woods fire threatened the National Park Seminary at Forest Glen, but was conquered after a five-hour struggle. George Price, Silver Spring fireman, was treated for burns. There were other woods fires at Burnt Mills Hills and Avenel.

Nearly 1,000 acres in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties were swept by a timber fire which was stopped only a hundred yards from the buildings on the horticultural unit at the Department of Agriculture experiment station.

At one time nearly 1,000 men, including 500 CCC youths from Beltsville, were fighting the blaze. Volunteer departments from all neighboring sections were called into action as the fire raced eastward behind a high wind.

As the Horticultural unit's buildings became endangered, workers threw up an earthen barricade to protect them, which with back fires, stopped the blaze. This was the most serious of several grass and woods fires in Prince Georges County during the day.

Blaze on Roof.

In Washington firemen poured water upon a smoldering blaze in a pile of fertilizer on the roof of the Bolgiano Seed Co., Fifth street and New York avenue northeast, for more than an hour before it was extinguished.

The stubborn fire, which firemen believe may have been caused by spontaneous combustion, damaged automobile equipment and peat moss in a small shed on the roof of the building. Employes remained in the building during the fire.

Flaming oil scattered about the home of Milton Johnson, Negro, 114 M street southwest, by an exploding stove, razed the two-story building before firemen were able to bring it under control.

Johnson, Eleonora Dorsey, 29, and her aunt, Rena Scott, who were in the house, had to flee for their lives. So fast did the fire spread, primed by the oil, that when firemen arrived a few minutes later the house was a total loss.

Philip Roth, 31, of 201 M street southwest, a grocer, saw smoke coming from the house and summoned apparatus.

Ellen Mussey, Noted Lawyer, Dies at Home

Funeral of Crusader and College Founder to Be Held Tomorrow.

Dr. Ellen Spencer Mussey, crusader for women's rights, college founder, author and humanitarian, died here yesterday. She would have celebrated her eighty-sixth birthday May 13. Death occurred at her home, 1900 R street northwest.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the Church of the Holy City, Sixteenth and Corcoran streets northwest.

Daughter of a distinguished scholar and wife of a distinguished soldier, Mrs. Mussey herself pursued a brilliant career which was an inspiration to thousands of women, especially those interested in the practice of law. A half century ago she embarked upon a legal career to support her ill husband, Gen. R. Delavan Mussey, and their four small children.

"I first studied law because my husband was ill and could not keep up his practice," she said in an interview two years ago. "I studied in his office because no law school would admit me."

Takes Over Law Practice.

In 1892 Gen. Mussey died and his widow took over his practice. Four years later she established a woman's class here, evoking "ahs" and "ohs." Later the class was incorporated as the Washington College of Law. Originally there were three pupils. Today it has an enrollmnt of more than 500 men and women.

Ellen Spencer Mussey was born in Ashtabula County, Ohio, May 13, 1850. Her father was Platt Rober Spencer, originator of the Spencerian system of penmanship. She came to Washington in 1869, subsequently being married to Gen. Mussey.

A list of her accomplishments would include the cases she argued successfully before the United States Supreme Court, numerous articles on marriage and divorce, six years' membership on the District Board of Education, election to the post of vice president general of the D. A. R. and many addresses in behalf of woman's suffrage and national representation for the District.

Dr. Mussey was a founder of the Women's City Club and served as its first presiding officer. She was a member of the commission which established public playgrounds in the District and she was instrumental in securing the first appropriation for school kindergartens.

In March, 1913, she argued her last case before the Supreme Court and won it. While dean of Washington College of Law from 1898 to 1913, Dr. Mussey established three post-graduate courses and personally taught constitutional law, law contracts, personal property and other subjects.

The so-called "Mussey act," which she saw through Congress, gives mothers the same rights as fathers in their children and gives married women the rights to their own earnings. It is part of the District Code.

During the Spanish-American War she was an assistant field agent in the Red Cross and she served the same organization in the field at the time of the Galveston disaster in 1900.

"Ellen Spencer Mussey Tent," Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, is named in her honor.

Eckloff Rites Set Tomorrow; Parents of 4

Double funeral services will be held tomorrow for Charles and Mary Eckloff, parents of four small children, who were fatally injured in an auto crash on the Baltimore boulevard Saturday night. The mother, 27, died shortly after the accident and her husband, one year her senior, succumbed to injuries Monday afternoon.

Services will be held at the residence, 2842 Belair place northeast, at 9 a. m. tomorrow, followed by a mass for Mrs. Eckloff in St. Francis DeSales Church. The couple will be buried side by side in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Relatives had custody of the four orphaned children yesterday. They are Charles, jr., 10; Mary Ellen, 9; Joan Winifred, 7, and Evelyn, 5. Last Friday, a day before the fatal crash occurred, Charles celebrated his tenth birthday.

Elmer Eckloff, only brother of the father, said his nephew and nieces probably will continue to make their home at the Belair place address, which is the residence of the Elmer Eckloffs and the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Eckloff. The grandfather is a carpenter at the Capital Transit Co., where his son also was employed, and the uncle is a newspaper linotype operator.

Addresses Jr. O. U. A. M.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., April 21.—Past State Councilor Joseph Beaverson, of Philadelphia, tonight addressed the Junior Order United American Mechanics. Past councilors in Waynesboro, Greencastle, Chambersburg, Newville and Fayetteville were present.

Funeral Held for Col. Howe

Quietly and simply the services went on in the still room. The April sun gradually dimmed behind clouds and a rising south wind rattled palm leaves in the windows as the soft voices of a quartet from St. Thomas' sang "Onward Christian Soldiers," "No Shadows Yonder" and "Jerusalem the Golden."

An honor seldom attained by those merely in the service of the White House was meted Howe yesterday, and one significant of the depth of his relationship with the President. More than a secretary, he was the Warwick of the Administration, the throne-maker.

In the east room, King Edward VII was feted, the Prince of Wales who was to become King Edward VIII was entertained, the Marquis de Lafayette was hailed, Maria Monroe was married, the Russian Grand Duke Alexis danced, Nellie Grant and Alice Roosevelt Longworth were married.

There five of the Nation's Presidents were mourned in death—Abraham Lincoln, William Henry Harrison, Zachary Taylor, William McKinley and Warren G. Harding. Three of the First Ladies of the land were buried from the east room—Mrs. Tyler, the first Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, the first Mrs. Woodrow Wilson. Young Calvin Coolidge lay in state there, as well as several Cabinet members.

In the audience were Mrs. Roosevelt, in black; Mrs. Howe and her children, Hartley Howe and Mrs. Robert Baker; Chief Justice and Mrs. Hughes, Vice President and Mrs. Garner, Speaker and Mrs. Byrns, and all of the Cabinet members, except Secretary of War Dern, who is out of town, and Secretary of the Navy Swanson, who is ill in Naval Hospital.

From the Senate were Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas; Pat Harrison, of Mississippi; Key Pittman, of Nevada; Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, and Thomas Connally, of Texas. From the House of Represetnatives came John O'Connor, of New York, and Mrs. Isabella Greenway, of Arizona.

On opposite sides of the room, together in a sense for the first time since their friendship ended with NRA, were Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and Donald R. Richberg, both friends of Howe.

Last night the casket was put aboard the President's train. The President and Mrs. Roosevelt left before midnight for the interment ceremonies at Fall River, Mass., today. The President will return directly to Washington, remaining until Saturday, when he leaves to address the National Democratic Clubs from New York. After that he is expected to stay at Hyde Park for several days.
